Stark Repeats His Warning Coalition Might Attack U. S.

Admiral, However, Says Naval Program Would Be of Help

By REG INGRAHAM

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, told the House Naval Committee today the propesed $1,300,000,000 fleet expansion would provide "some degree of protection against any probable enemy coalition" but might not guarantee defense of the Monroe Doctrine.

He asserted that the program, designed to give the navy seventy-seven new combatant ships, would not be sufficient to "defend our home waters, the Monroe Doctrine, our possessions and trade routes against a coalition, that has been mentioned in the committee, of Japan, Russia, Germany and Italy."

Depends Upon War Result

The navy's top-rank admiral told the committee that in considering the need for the proposed twenty-four per cent increase, "we must face the possibility of an Allied defeat and then measure the strength of the powers which might combine for action against the Americas."

"If our navy is weaker than the combined strengths of potential enemies" he said, "then our navy is too small. It is too small viewed from that angle, so there is just one answer: an increase is necessary."

The ruddy-faced, white-haired officer vigorously challenged statements that the country was getting a "paper navy" because ships authorized two years ago have not been started. Chairman Walsh (D-Mass) of the Senate Naval Committee had contended those ships should be built before authority for others is sought.

Stark declared the navy proposed to proceed at once with construction of all authorized tonnage, including replacements, in addition to asking for the twenty-five per cent expansion.

Meanwhile, the House heard a $267,000,000 deficiency appropriation bill, chief for the army and navy, described as a peace program—"not a war program."

Woodrum Asks Approval

Asking approval of the expenditures, necessitated by the establishment of the neutrality patrol increases in and training of army, navy and coast guard personnel, Rep. Woodrum (D-Va), asserted:

"If there's one thing that America has learned it is that anything can happen anywhere. Let us not say it can't happen here. America is not getting ready to make war on anybody. This is not a war program, it's a peace program."

Rep. Taber (R-NY), leading off minority debate on the measure, turned his fire on the administration's general fiscal policies and declared the "actual" national debt was about $60,000,000,000, including obligations assumed by the federal government incident to such purposes as housing and slum clearance.

Britain, France To Buy 12,000 Planes In United States

Plan To Make Purchases over a Period of Two Years

By DEVON FRANCIS
Associated Press Aviation Editor

New York, Jan. 11.—In preparation for a long war, Great Britain and France are arranging for the purchase of as many as 12,000 American warplanes in the next two years, authoritative sources said tonight.

Moreover, with steady shipments of American military planes on contracts signed since the start of hostilities last Sept. 3, the Allies expect to exceed the German production rate by the middle of the coming summer.

For several weeks representatives of the British air mniistry have been surveying the potential production capacity of every United States aircraft plant turning out military planes.

While the British and French actually have collaborated only on the purchase of aircraft engines and plane accessories, it was understood that in the near future the either will buy jointly or so dovetail their purchases as to avoid conflicts in contracts.

To release American aircraft factories manufacturing for export from large-scale commitments on anything but combat types—particularly bombers and pursuits—the British will make training planes in Canada under United States licenses, it was reliably reported.

The long-range buying program in the United States was described as still being in a "liquid state," though verbal assurance has been given American manufacturers of large additional contracts. In some instances the Allies have underwritten the cost of aircraft plant

Activity Increasing on West Front, French Say

German Plane Brought Down within France, Paris Asserts

Paris, Jan. 11 (AP)—Allied guns bagged one German reconnaissance plane today during intensified aerial fighting and brisk artillery exchanges on both sides, the French high command reported.

The increased tempo on the western front followed a series of pre-dawn scouting raids in which military sources said French advance guards penetrated German lines in search of prisoners and information.

"The day was marked by increased artillery activity on both sides and also fairly strong activity of both air forces," the general staff's night communique said. "An enemy reconnaissance plane was brought down within our lines."

(In Berlin, DNB, official German news agency, said a French company broke the German line on Kreuzberg, east of Forcack, but was driven back by counter-attacking Nazi forces.)

Advices from the front said the patrol work was proceeding night and day, leading to frequent, localized clashes with the Germans and that several prisoners were brought back to French territory.

Military sources said places of especial activity were regions immediately east and west of the Vosges mountains, a chain within France which parallels the Rhine where it forms the boundary between France and Germany.

Expect Quints To Show in New York

New York, Jan. 11 (AP)—Mayor Laguardia said tonight he understood that arrangements had been virtually completed for showing the Dionne quintuplets at the New York World's fair in the 1940 season opening in May.

He said "there remain only a few procedural matters to straighten out." He believed that Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe would accompany them from Callander, Ont.

The mayor said he understood the five-year-old quintuplets would be here for the duration of the fair, May 11 to Oct. 25, and that the fair corporation would construct a building, a replica of their Callander home, on the site of the Soviet pavilion now being torn down.

Under the plan, admission would be charged visitors to an enclosure from where the children could be seen. Proceeds would go to the Canadian Red Cross for war work.

Patrol Skirmishes Reported by Moscow

Moscow, Jan. 11. (AP)—Patrol skirmishes on Russian soil were reported tonight in a Moscow radio broadcast describing activities on the Finnish war front.

Quoting a communique issued by the Leningrad military headquarters, the radio told of reconnoitering activity in the Ukhta and Repola sectors and of infantry engagements in the Petrozavodsk area.

More than a score of persons stormed one ice plant in protest against the raising of the price of fifty pounds of ice from the equivalent of twenty cents to $1.25, and thereafter police posted guards at the plants.

None of the rioters was arrested, however, police excusing the attempted invasion on the ground of shortened tempers due to the heat. Several persons received treatment for injuries after the fight.

Japanese Attack U. S. Navy Program

Tokyo, Jan. 11 (AP)—The Japanese navy and press today attacked the proposed expansion of the United States navy and criticized its proposal to spend $4,000,000 on the military development of the Island of Guam.

A spokesman for the navy, although less forthright than the press, made plain Japanese anxiety over the American $1,300,000,000 naval expansion program.

"Naturally," he said, "the Japanese navy feels great concern. It (the building program) apparently is designed to maintain the United States' superior ratio even after lapse of the Washington treaty."

This treaty, which established a 5-5-3 capital ship ratio among the United States, Great Britain and Japan, respectively, expired Jan. 1, 1937, after it had been denounced by Japan.

The spokesman said that construction of 52,000-ton warships by the United States would "concern all naval powers." Admiral Harold R. Stark, United States chief of navay operations, has said this might be an early development.

The spokesman hinted and the press predicted more bluntly that the American program might lead to a naval race with Japan.

German Plane Brought Down by the French

Paris, Jan. 11. (AP)—The Allied high command reported tonight that a German reconnaissance plane was downed today as both sides engaged in increased aerial and artillery activity on the Western front.

The high command communique said: "The day was marked by increased artillery activity on both sides and also fairly strong activity of both air forces. An enemy reconnaissance plane was brought down within our lines."

Sec. Hull Urges Congress To Keep Trade Agreements

Says Program Has Worked for Benefit of American Economy

BUSINESS RECOVERY AIDED, HE DECLARES

Asserts Critics Are Guilty of Unscrupulous Suppression

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Secretary Hull earnestly urged Congress today to extend the life of the trade agreements act, and recorded his unyielding opposition to giving the senate power to ratify or kill the agrement negotiated under it.

The program, he told the House Ways and Means Committee, has worked advantageously for the entire American economy, contributed heavily to business recovery and "expanded markets at home and abroad for all groups of producers." But, he added, to give the Senate ratification power would expose the agreements to minority filibusters and rob the program of both its 'shadow and substance."

Striking out at critics of the program, he said they were guilty of "unscrupulous suppression and misuse of material facts."

His appearnace before the committee signalled the official start of the principal controversy of the present session of Congfiress. It involves one of the few specific pieces of legislation recommended by the president and an issue which, on the basis of today's questions and answers, boils down to the old argument whether tariffs shall be high or low.

Fences With Opponents

Hull, grave and unsmiling at all times, neverthless displayed flashes of dry wit which delighted not only the 100 or so spectators, but the high-tariff congressmen who fenced with him throughout the day.

The first exchange was with Rep. Knutson (R-Minn). The subject of foreign debts had been raised, and Hull was talking of money "carelessly and recklessly loaned abroad during the wild days of the twenties." Knutson put in that he was endeavoring, by implication, to indict the Republicans who were in control at that time."

"I'm sorry," said Hull, "I had hoped you would not be sensitive about that."

Claims New England Gains

Again, when Rep. Treadway (R-Mass) complained that the trade program had brought bad business in New England, Hull produced a report of the New England council, an association of New England industrialists and businessmen saying business was generally brisk and much improved.

Treadway objected and said he could produced witness from the New England council who would show the trade agrements program had bad effect.

"I can see," said Hull, whose fencing with Treadway reminded both of the days when Hull, too, was a member of the committee, 'that you are running true to your old-time form."

In addition to his general arguments for the trade agreements program, Hull let it be known that he expected a big British purchase of agricultural produces very soon, and that import quotas had been attached to some of the trade agree-

Company Official Gives Hope to Families of 87 Trapped by an Explosion

WHOA, DOBBIN!

Harvey "Busher" Jackson, left wing of the New York American hockey team, is a six-footer and as strong as a horse. He says it's because he like horse meat. That juicy steak he's eating is horse meat, and he say's it's good. Claims European athletes train on it. But you'd better not holler "Whoa!" when Buster skates by.

Rescue Work Is Slow and Scene of Disaster May Not Be Reached until Some Time Today

Bartley, W. Va., Jan. 11 (AP)—A mining man's declaration that there still is a chance for about sixty men to come out alive from the explosion-rocked Bartley No. 1 mine gave a little hope tonight to anxious families awaiting some news of eighty-seven trapped miners.

Four are known dead from yesterday's blast in the operation of the Pond Creek Pocahontas Coal Company, besides the eighty-seven missing, and more hours must pass before the blast area can be reached. There were forty-seven men who escaped.

Should sixty men have survived, the cost in lives would be greatly reduced from a possible total of ninety-one, but there were many who believed that the time for hope was about gone.

W. J. German of Pocahontas, Va., general manager of the Big Pocahontas Fuel Company, came to this southeastern West Virginia mine village to offer his help.

After talking with rescue men, up from their tour below, German said:

Manager Optimistic

"Many of the men in this mine have a better chance to survive than in any mine explosion I have been to, judging from the set-up."

His opinion was echoed by Pond Creek officials, but all said it might be tomorrow morning before the crews can get into the section torn by explosion.

German, who from 1910 to 1916 was with the U. S. Bureau of Mines, based his statement on the fact the explosion apparently centered in main six heading.

Area Rockdusted

There probably were twenty-five men in main six while around sixty others were in the third and fourth left entries. The area had been rockdusted two days before the blast, German said, and crews have reported no evidence of flame or heat as far as they have gone.

Therefore, he said, men in the third and fourth entries had a chance.

There was no official statement, but hope seemingly had been aban-

Russian Officers Face Court Trials For Their Failure

More Than 100 Called Home To Explain Finn Successes

By MAX HARRELSON

Copenhagen, Jan. 11 (AP)—A sharp shakeup in the Soviet army and recall of more than 100 Red army officers for failure to achieve greater success in Finland were described today in reports reaching Norwegian and Finnish quarters from numerous sources.

Coming as the Finns announced fresh success in pushing back the Russian invaders, the reports, which lacked confirmation, said some of the recalled officers would face summary trial before courts consisting of people's commissars.

In six weeks of warfare Russia has made little progress in Finland and on four fronts has been thrust back across her own frontier.

Report Executions

The recall reports said also the Soviet supply commissariat was under a scrutiny which already has led to some executions.

Displacement of Mikhail M. Kaganovich from his key post as head of the aviation industry commissariat was linked by Scandinavian observers with the reports that the Red army and Allied services were being reorganized as a result of weaknesses discovered in the Finnish campaign.

Russia announced last night that Kaganovich had been "transferred to another post."

Canada To Raise $200,000,000 To Prosecute War

Subscriptions Will Be Offered only to Canadians

Ottawa, Jan. 11 — (Canadian Press)—Subscriptions will be opened Monday morning on a $200,000,000 Dominion war loan bearing 3¼ percent interest.

Details of the loan, which have been awaited with interest by Americans who have billions invested in Dominion subsidiary companies, were announced tonight on behalf of Finance Minister Ralston. Officials emphasized that subscriptions are voluntary and offered only to Canadian investors.

The proceeds will be used to finance war expenditures which it is estimated will cost Canada $1,000,000 a day for the first full year of the war.

Dated Feb. 1, 1940, the bonds will mature Feb. 1, 1952, but by a system of annual drawings by lot they are callable in five equal sections beginnfng Feb. 1, 1948.

The bonds will be offered at par and will not be tax-free as were most of the six war and victory bond issues sold in the World War.

When turned in for conversion the bonds will be valued at 100.17 percent and accrued interest to date of delivery.

An endeavor will be made to see that the smallest investor has an opportunity to subscribe, it was said.

The first bond issue of this war is four times as large as the first offering of the six issues of the World War.

Jones Suggests United States Make Large Loan to Sweden and Finland

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Jesse Jones, chief of the federal lending agencies, suggested today the possibility that Sweden might be added to two other northern European nations to which the United States has extended credit.

He told a press conference there had been informal discussions of a loan to Sweden, but no specific amount had been mentioned.

Credits of $10,000,000 each already have been made available to Finland and Norway for the purchase of non-military supplies, such as agricultural products and manufactured goods. The loans, it was widely believed, were for the purpose of strengthening the nations against Russia.

$60,000,000 for Finland

In addition, there is pending before Congress a bill to lend Finland $60,000,000 to aid that republic in its fight against Russia. The Senate Banking Committee asked the treasury and Reconstruction Finance Corporation today for their views on the loan as proposed in the bill by Senator Brown (D-Mich)

Jones said he knew no reason why the United States "shouldn't make a loan to Sweden."

He commented that the United States "certainly would be glad to help all the Scandinavian countries" financially. When asked about Denmark, Jones indicated that he had not considered that nation when he made his comment, although he did not rule her out.

Suggests Higher Limit

The credits to Finland and Norway have been made through the Export-Import Bank. Noting that the law limits the total amount of loans by the agency which may be outstanding at any one time to $100,000,000, Jones said he believed Congress would be asked to raise that limit by $75,000,000 to $100,000,000.

Ship Goes Down

London, Jan. 11 (AP)—The seventeen-man crew of the British ship Leonard Pearce, 1,571 tons, was rescued by a pilot boat after the ship sank following a collision with another vessel early today.

Thousands of Wild Ducks Refuse To Leave Maryland for the Winter

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP)—Despite Maryland's snow covered fields and ice packed waters, between 100,000 and 150,000 wildfowl have refused to fly south for the winter—and Maryland will have to shell out about $8,000 worth of feed between now and spring if the birds are to be kept alive.

From all parts of the state, however, State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte reported today, support has been received for the feeding program. In many instances county organizations and individuals are purchasing the feed.

About 100 bushels of feed a day are required to feed birds which cannot forage for themselves when snow is on the ground and waters are ice-bound.

Corn on the Ear Best

Corn—left on the ear so the wildfowl will get some exercise in getting it off—is the birds' main dish LeCompte said.

The warden said he saw 10,000 canvas back ducks at Hambrooks Bay, Cambridge, last Sunday, The next day the bay was covered with ice, leaving the ducks no place to feed.

Lt. E. A. Robbins of Cambridge said about 1,500 black ducks had joined the grey mallards on his farm, and he was having to put out about five bushels of feed daily.

Fred D. Ramsdell, Washington, sent $25 to J. G. Sollers at Lusby to help feed the quail in Calvert county, LeCompte reported.

Bob White Plentiful

"He said there were more bob white in that section last year than he'd ever seen," LeCompte said, "and he didn't want them to die out."

A. Gordon Fleet, president of the Ann Arundel County Conservation Association, said his group had distributed 500 pounds of feed, purchased from its own funds.

County wardens have been advised to provide feed for anyone agreeing to establish a feeding ground. The feed cannot be placed on the snow; the feeding area must be cleared and the grain placed on the ground.

The mayor said he understood the five-year-old quintuplets would be here for the duration of the fair, May 11 to Oct. 25, and that the fair corporation would construct a building, a replica of their Callander home, on the site of the Soviet pavilion now being torn down.

Under the plan, admission would be charged visitors to an enclosure from where the children could be seen. Proceeds would go to the Canadian Red Cross for war work.

Ice Plants Guarded 8 Dead in Heat Wave

Buenos Aires, Jan. 11 (AP)—Police guarded ice plants from angry consumers and the death toll rose to eight today as the thermometer touched ninety-eight degrees on the sixth day of a heat wave.

Five more persons died today as a result of the high temperatures, and seventeen others are in serious condition.

More than a score of persons stormed one ice plant in protest against the raising of the price of fifty pounds of ice from the equivalent of twenty cents to $1.25, and thereafter police posted guards at the plants.

None of the rioters was arrested, however, police excusing the attempted invasion on the ground of shortened tempers due to the heat. Several persons received treatment for injuries after the fight.

Japanese Attack U. S. Navy Program

Tokyo, Jan. 11 (AP)—The Japanese navy and press today attacked the proposed expansion of the United States navy and criticized its proposal to spend $4,000,000 on the military development of the Island of Guam.

A spokesman for the navy, although less forthright than the press, made plain Japanese anxiety over the American $1,300,000,000 naval expansion program.

"Naturally," he said, "the Japanese navy feels great concern. It (the building program) apparently is designed to maintain the United States' superior ratio even after lapse of the Washington treaty."

This treaty, which established a 5-5-3 capital ship ratio among the United States, Great Britain and Japan, respectively, expired Jan. 1, 1937, after it had been denounced by Japan.

The spokesman said that construction of 52,000-ton warships by the United States would "concern all naval powers." Admiral Harold R. Stark, United States chief of navay operations, has said this might be an early development.

The spokesman hinted and the press predicted more bluntly that the American program might lead to a naval race with Japan.

German Plane Brought Down by the French

Paris, Jan. 11. (AP)—The Allied high command reported tonight that a German reconnaissance plane was downed today as both sides engaged in increased aerial and artillery activity on the Western front.

The high command communique said: "The day was marked by increased artillery activity on both sides and also fairly strong activity of both air forces. An enemy reconnaissance plane was brought down within our lines."

Jones Suggests United States Make Large Loan to Sweden and Finland

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Jesse Jones, chief of the federal lending agencies, suggested today the possibility that Sweden might be added to two other northern European nations to which the United States has extended credit.

He told a press conference there had been informal discussions of a loan to Sweden, but no specific amount had been mentioned.

Credits of $10,000,000 each already have been made available to Finland and Norway for the purchase of non-military supplies, such as agricultural products and manufactured goods. The loans, it was widely believed, were for the purpose of strengthening the nations against Russia.

$60,000,000 for Finland

In addition, there is pending before Congress a bill to lend Finland $60,000,000 to aid that republic in its fight against Russia. The Senate Banking Committee asked the treasury and Reconstruction Finance Corporation today for their views on the loan as proposed in the bill by Senator Brown (D-Mich)

Jones said he knew no reason why the United States "shouldn't make a loan to Sweden."

He commented that the United States "certainly would be glad to help all the Scandinavian countries" financially. When asked about Denmark, Jones indicated that he had not considered that nation when he made his comment, although he did not rule her out.

Suggests Higher Limit

The credits to Finland and Norway have been made through the Export-Import Bank. Noting that the law limits the total amount of loans by the agency which may be outstanding at any one time to $100,000,000, Jones said he believed Congress would be asked to raise that limit by $75,000,000 to $100,000,000.

Patrol Skirmishes Reported by Moscow

Moscow, Jan. 11. (AP)—Patrol skirmishes on Russian soil were reported tonight in a Moscow radio broadcast describing activities on the Finnish war front.

Quoting a communique issued by the Leningrad military headquarters, the radio told of reconnoitering activity in the Ukhta and Repola sectors and of infantry engagements in the Petrozavodsk area.

Sec. Hull Urges Congress To Keep Trade Agreements

Says Program Has Worked for Benefit of American Economy

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Secretary Hull earnestly urged Congress today to extend the life of the trade agreements act, and recorded his unyielding opposition to giving the senate power to ratify or kill the agrement negotiated under it.

The program, he told the House Ways and Means Committee, has worked advantageously for the entire American economy, contributed heavily to business recovery and "expanded markets at home and abroad for all groups of producers." But, he added, to give the Senate ratification power would expose the agreements to minority filibusters and rob the program of both its 'shadow and substance."

Striking out at critics of the program, he said they were guilty of "unscrupulous suppression and misuse of material facts."

His appearnace before the committee signalled the official start of the principal controversy of the present session of Congfiress. It involves one of the few specific pieces of legislation recommended by the president and an issue which, on the basis of today's questions and answers, boils down to the old argument whether tariffs shall be high or low.

Fences With Opponents

Hull, grave and unsmiling at all times, neverthless displayed flashes of dry wit which delighted not only the 100 or so spectators, but the high-tariff congressmen who fenced with him throughout the day.

The first exchange was with Rep. Knutson (R-Minn). The subject of foreign debts had been raised, and Hull was talking of money "carelessly and recklessly loaned abroad during the wild days of the twenties." Knutson put in that he was endeavoring, by implication, to indict the Republicans who were in control at that time."

"I'm sorry," said Hull, "I had hoped you would not be sensitive about that."

Claims New England Gains

Again, when Rep. Treadway (R-Mass) complained that the trade program had brought bad business in New England, Hull produced a report of the New England council, an association of New England industrialists and businessmen saying business was generally brisk and much improved.

Treadway objected and said he could produced witness from the New England council who would show the trade agrements program had bad effect.

"I can see," said Hull, whose fencing with Treadway reminded both of the days when Hull, too, was a member of the committee, 'that you are running true to your old-time form."

In addition to his general arguments for the trade agreements program, Hull let it be known that he expected a big British purchase of agricultural produces very soon, and that import quotas had been attached to some of the trade agree-

Company Official Gives Hope to Families of 87 Trapped by an Explosion

WHOA, DOBBIN!

Harvey "Busher" Jackson, left wing of the New York American hockey team, is a six-footer and as strong as a horse. He says it's because he like horse meat. That juicy steak he's eating is horse meat, and he say's it's good. Claims European athletes train on it. But you'd better not holler "Whoa!" when Buster skates by.

Rescue Work Is Slow and Scene of Disaster May Not Be Reached until Some Time Today

Bartley, W. Va., Jan. 11 (AP)—A mining man's declaration that there still is a chance for about sixty men to come out alive from the explosion-rocked Bartley No. 1 mine gave a little hope tonight to anxious families awaiting some news of eighty-seven trapped miners.

Four are known dead from yesterday's blast in the operation of the Pond Creek Pocahontas Coal Company, besides the eighty-seven missing, and more hours must pass before the blast area can be reached. There were forty-seven men who escaped.

Should sixty men have survived, the cost in lives would be greatly reduced from a possible total of ninety-one, but there were many who believed that the time for hope was about gone.

W. J. German of Pocahontas, Va., general manager of the Big Pocahontas Fuel Company, came to this southeastern West Virginia mine village to offer his help.

After talking with rescue men, up from their tour below, German said:

Manager Optimistic

"Many of the men in this mine have a better chance to survive than in any mine explosion I have been to, judging from the set-up."

His opinion was echoed by Pond Creek officials, but all said it might be tomorrow morning before the crews can get into the section torn by explosion.

German, who from 1910 to 1916 was with the U. S. Bureau of Mines, based his statement on the fact the explosion apparently centered in main six heading.

Area Rockdusted

There probably were twenty-five men in main six while around sixty others were in the third and fourth left entries. The area had been rockdusted two days before the blast, German said, and crews have reported no evidence of flame or heat as far as they have gone.

Therefore, he said, men in the third and fourth entries had a chance.

There was no official statement, but hope seemingly had been aban-

Russian Officers Face Court Trials For Their Failure

More Than 100 Called Home To Explain Finn Successes

By MAX HARRELSON

Copenhagen, Jan. 11 (AP)—A sharp shakeup in the Soviet army and recall of more than 100 Red army officers for failure to achieve greater success in Finland were described today in reports reaching Norwegian and Finnish quarters from numerous sources.

Coming as the Finns announced fresh success in pushing back the Russian invaders, the reports, which lacked confirmation, said some of the recalled officers would face summary trial before courts consisting of people's commissars.

In six weeks of warfare Russia has made little progress in Finland and on four fronts has been thrust back across her own frontier.

Report Executions

The recall reports said also the Soviet supply commissariat was under a scrutiny which already has led to some executions.

Displacement of Mikhail M. Kaganovich from his key post as head of the aviation industry commissariat was linked by Scandinavian observers with the reports that the Red army and Allied services were being reorganized as a result of weaknesses discovered in the Finnish campaign.

Russia announced last night that Kaganovich had been "transferred to another post."

Canada To Raise $200,000,000 To Prosecute War

Subscriptions Will Be Offered only to Canadians

Ottawa, Jan. 11 — (Canadian Press)—Subscriptions will be opened Monday morning on a $200,000,000 Dominion war loan bearing 3¼ percent interest.

Details of the loan, which have been awaited with interest by Americans who have billions invested in Dominion subsidiary companies, were announced tonight on behalf of Finance Minister Ralston. Officials emphasized that subscriptions are voluntary and offered only to Canadian investors.

The proceeds will be used to finance war expenditures which it is estimated will cost Canada $1,000,000 a day for the first full year of the war.

Dated Feb. 1, 1940, the bonds will mature Feb. 1, 1952, but by a system of annual drawings by lot they are callable in five equal sections beginning Feb. 1, 1948.

The bonds will be offered at par and will not be tax-free as were most of the six war and victory bond issues sold in the World War.

When turned in for conversion the bonds will be valued at 100.17 percent and accrued interest to date of delivery.

An endeavor will be made to see that the smallest investor has an opportunity to subscribe, it was said.

The first bond issue of this war is four times as large as the first offering of the six issues of the World War.

Thousands of Wild Ducks Refuse To Leave Maryland for the Winter

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP)—Despite Maryland's snow covered fields and ice packed waters, between 100,000 and 150,000 wildfowl have refused to fly south for the winter—and Maryland will have to shell out about $8,000 worth of feed between now and spring if the birds are to be kept alive.

From all parts of the state, however, State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte reported today, support has been received for the feeding program. In many instances county organizations and individuals are purchasing the feed.

About 100 bushels of feed a day are required to feed birds which cannot forage for themselves when snow is on the ground and waters are ice-bound.

Corn on the Ear Best

Corn—left on the ear so the wildfowl will get some exercise in getting it off—is the birds' main dish, LeCompte said.

The warden said he saw 10,000 canvas back ducks at Hambrooks Bay, Cambridge, last Sunday. The next day the bay was covered with ice, leaving the ducks no place to feed.

Lt. E. A. Robbins of Cambridge said about 1,500 black ducks had joined the grey mallards on his farm, and he was having to put out about five bushels of feed daily.

Fred D. Ramsdell, Washington, sent $25 to J. G. Sollers at Lusby to help feed the quail in Calvert county, LeCompte reported.

Bob White Plentiful

"He said there were more bob white in that section last year than he'd ever seen," LeCompte said, "and he didn't want them to die out."

A. Gordon Fleet, president of the Ann Arundel County Conservation Association, said his group had distributed 500 pounds of feed, purchased from its own funds.

County wardens have been advised to provide feed for anyone agreeing to establish a feeding ground. The feed cannot be placed on the snow; the feeding area must be cleared and the grain placed on the ground.

Sen. Borah Raps Edison for Plan To Seize Ships

Delays Confirmation To Air His Views about Proposal

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Senator Borah (R-Idaho) briefly delayed Senate confirmation of Charles Edison as secretary of the navy today in order to rebuke the cabinet nominee sharply for suggesting that Congress grant the President power to commandeer factories, ships and supplies in time of emergency.

Interrupting routine Senate action on a lengthy list of presidential appointments, the veteran Idaho Senator said that the proposal Edison made as acting secretary of the navy was "startling."

"The act would be arbitary and clearly unconstitutional," Borah protested, his voice ringing. "It would be in violation of the most fundamental principles of constitutional government and Democratic processes.

"If this could be done in time of peace, then you could also provide for the suspension of the bill of rights, you could prohibit free speech, free press and the right to trial by jury."

Edison Confirmed

Once he had put these observations on record, Borah explained that he was not protesting the Edison appointment, and the Senate, without a record vote, promptly confirmed the nomination of the new cabinet member along with numerous other presidential appointments.

The nomination of Attorney General Frank Murphy to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court was advanced a step toward confirmation when a Senate judiciary subcommittee approved it unanimously.

No hearings were called, but Murphy voluntarily appeared before the subcommittee and in a calm, firm voice, assured senators he had not condoned "sitdown" strikes as governor of Michigan, and believed that the Supreme Court had the power and duty to overturn acts of Congress when they failed to come within the federal constitution.

Entire Body Must Act

The full judiciary committee and the entire Senate also must pass on the nomination.

The Senate approved these recent presidential selections:

James H. R. Cromwell, husband of Doris Duke, tobacco heiress, as minister to Canada.

Daniel W. Bell as undersecretary of the treasury.

John L. Sullivan as assistant secretary of the treasury.

Breckinridge Long as assistant secretary of state.

George S. Messersmith, former assistant secretary of state, as ambassador to Cuba.

John Cudahy, former minister to Belgium.

R. Henry Norweb as Ambassador to Peru.

Robert M. Scotten as minister to the Dominican Republic.

Clarence E. Gauss as minister to Australia, a newly created post.

Paris Communists Must Disavow All Russian Support

Socialists Rally Behind Bill To Keep Them from Office

Paris, Jan. 11. (AP)—Socialists in the Chamber of Deputies rallied tonight behind a government bill designed to exclude from elective office members of the outlawed Communist party unless they publicly disavow any connection with Moscow or the policies of the Soviet government.

Support of the Socialists, who were allied in the past with the Communists and still constitute the largest party in the chamber, apparently assured the government passage of the measure.

The chamber's executive committee voted to ask the defense ministry to extend the leaves of all deputies now serving in the armed forces so that they might participate in the debate, starting next Wednesday.

The bill, which was introduced after Edouard Herriot, president of the chamber, had delivered a scathing denunciation of the Soviet invasion of Finland, gives former Communists eight days in which to make their disavowal.

Before the bill was introduced, six former Communist deputies published a joint letter expressing their opposition to "policies that led to the invasion of Finland."

In his speech, Herriot attacked the Russian government as "a regime seeking to crush the weak" and asserted that "the interest of our own cause" makes it France's duty to give Finland all the aid in her power.

The entire chamber, including several former Communist deputies, greeted the assertion by rising to shout "Long Live Finland!"

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Out of the conflicting British and German accounts of recurrent air battles over Helgoland Bight is emerging one striking and perhaps vitally significant fact.

It is that a crucial test of the part air powers is to play in this war is being made over German, not British waters. That Bight is Germany's very sea threshold. It is a vast, triangular notch of the North Sea, cutting deeply between the German-Dutch and German-Danish borders to form a virtual German bay.

Helgoland, Germany's island stronghold guarding the approaches to most important German seaports and the Kiel Canal, stands almost in the center of the chain of islands that fringe the coast line. From the northern tip of the east Frisian group, where the Netherlands-German boundary line touches the sea, to the island of Sylt of the north Frision group, off the German-Danish border, these islands form a German bulwark of sea and air-defense.

Nearest to England

They are the nearest points in Germany to Britain's shores and to traffic in the North Sea. That they afford bases for both Nazi air and submarine attacks is the conviction on which the British Royal Air Force is shaping its strategy. The greatest air battles not only of this war but in history have thus far been fought, on British initiative, in that Helgoland Bight theater.

In the air, at any rate, Britain is carrying the war to Germany. German and British accounts agree that the newest and longest range types of British bombers are being used in an effort to break up Nazi bombing raids before they get started, and to blast both air and U-boat bases detected along the Nazi island outposts.

Use "Long Range" Ships

Berlin reports that new "long range" Nazi pursuit ships participated in the most recent battle over Helgoland Bight. That both belligerents are straining every nerve—calling upon the inventive genius of their peoples—to turn out swift air-fighters that could match the cruising radius of their bombers goes without saying.

Backed and protected by long-range pursuit ship screens, the bombers of both could deliver mass attacks across the North Sea as they have not yet done. The first of the warring nations to attain long range for its dog-fighter ships and to produce them in quantity will have a heavy advantage over the foe. # O'Neal Estimates Congress Will Vote $807,000,000 for Farmers

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP)—Edward A. O'Neal, American Farm Bureau Federation president, estimated today Congress would be asked to appropriate $807,000,000 for parity payments to farmers, and declared "parity prices alone can restore purchasing power of the farmers."

O'Neal, addressing the Maryland Farm Bureau Convention, said he had just come from a conference with President Roosevelt.

He estimated $200,000,000 would be asked for payments to dairy, fruit, and truck farm products, and the remaining $607,000,000 for producers of basic crops under A.A.A. prpvisions; cotton, $242,000,000; corn, $218,000,000; wheat, $121,000,000; tobacco, $14,000,000; rice, $12,000,000.

O'Neal also asserted "it would pay farm leaders to sit down and calmly discuss problems with labor leaders. Help labor get security. We want labor to be prosperous."

He said aid to agriculture was the "best investment" the federal government had made in recent years, and that "for every dollar of increased income to farmers, the national income is multiplied six times.

"As a result of the investment by the federal government during the reconstruction period of $2,400,000,000, the national income has been increased $100,000,000,000 in the six-year period."

Roosevelt, he continued, hinted a special tax to raise funds for parity payments during their conversation, but "we don't have a federal tax for relief, do we? Why penalize the farmers? Instead, let all the people pay."

Earlier, P. C. Turner, state farm bureau president, urged Maryland farmers to present a united front in efforts to obtain beneficial legislation.

"One of our main concerns," he told 1,000 farmers present, "is continuation of the soil conservation act and crop control with parity payments just so long as federal subsidies are allowed industry through tariffs and a floor stays under the wages and hours of labor."

Life Goes on as Usual in Finland Despite the War

Helsinki Milliners Advertise Latest in New Spring Hats

Helsinki, Jan. 11. (AP)—The bulky Bolshevik army was still stalled today on Finland's icy frontier and Helsinki milliners took advantage of the situation to display new spring hats.

How life goes on despite the hardships of war in this city built on a rock by its stubborn people is evidenced by the hat displays. They may also show that the Finns expect to be here when spring comes.

The spring hats do not blossom in bright shop windows as they used to. Their existence is discreetly signalled by pictures of the new finery pasted on rough boards which protect shop windows against bomb shock.

There are plenty of women still here to be thinking about new spring hats. This is a women's as well as a men's war.

And there are other boarded-up shop windows displaying illustrations clipped from magazine advertisements to indicate what may be found inside—sylph-like forms encased in corsets, pictures of graceful legs in silk stockings.

A man hunting for a smoke looks for a boarded-up shop front studded with empty cigarette boxes.

In a number of apartment houses which escaped actual destruction but lost all the glass in their windows because of the concussion, plyboard has been neatly fitted to replace thousands of window panes.

In fact all this boarding-up, sandbagging, air-raid repairing and air-raid precaution-taking has been neatly done. The Finns don't know how to be sloppy—even in war.

So despite a rather grim exterior, Helsinki still looks neater and cleaner than many peacetime cities in other countries.

The ruins of buildings destroyed in December bombing raids have been blanketed and draped by clean snow, and somehow the ruins look like those of another generation—some catastrophe of years, not weeks ago.

Under low-hanging clouds Helsinki passed the day without the shriek of airraid warning sirens.

On a thousand miles of frozen front lines, across the Karelian isthmus and up to the Arctic ocean, the Russians appeared from Finnish communiques to be making no perceptible headway anywhere after their smashing defeats in the Suomssalmi sector.

The army communique this afternoon, however, did not confirm unofficial reports that the Finns had trapped and shattered another Red army division in that sector, in addition to the two already smashed.

"Convicts Parade" In Grand Finale of Louisiana Campaign

New Orleans, Jan. 11 (AP)—Louisiana's turbulent gubernatorial campaign neared its climax tonight with appearance on venerable old Canal street of a "convicts parade" in which many of the state's politicians were depicted clothed in stripes, breaking rocks and cutting sugar cane.

James H. Morrison, outspoken 31-year old candidate for governor and sworn enemy of the administration machine Huey P. Long constructed, arose from a sick bed to lead the bizarre aggregation of strawberry farmers from his home district down the street lined with gaping thousands. He is suffering from influenza.

The lead vehicle in a parade of 25 floats depicted Mayor Robert S. Maestri of New Orleans, the state's most powerful politician, sitting solidly on the closed and padlocked books of the state department which he headed before becoming mayor. Local newspapers and various citizens groups have been clamoring for six months to see these books, which were closed to public scrutiny last June when Earl K. Long, Huey's brother, became governor. The explanation was that they were being audited.

Opposition candidates have charged on the stump that a new set of books was being written.

Sec. Hull Urges

ments to avoid public criticism that they offered insufficient protection for American producers.

From the Republicans of the committee came charges that under the trade agreement act, Hull had made a forty percent general downward revision of the tarif rates, something Congress would never have 'dared" to do. They also said that Hull, unlike his opponents, has all the governmental statistics-gathering machinery at his disposal in the present fight. The latter factor, said Rep, Treadway, was a severe handicap to the opponents of the trade agrements program.

Act Passed in 1934

The act under which the program operates was passed in 1934, and unless extended will expire on June 12. It empowers the administration to reduce any rate of the Smoot-Hawley tariff act by as much as fifty per cent in exchange for compensating tariff reductions by other countries. The intent, as Hull put it, is to remove barriers to foreign trade and encourage the export of commodities of which the United States produces more than it consumes itself. Twenty two such agrements have been negotiated covering about sixty percent of the total American foreign trade.

Summariznig the consequences, Hull told the committee that in 1937 and 1938, American exports to nations with which it has trade agrements increased sixty-one percent, while exports to "non-agreement countries" rose "only thirty-eight percent." In reply to arguments that the program has hurt the farmer, Hull said that after two and one half years of the Smoot-Hawley tariff act farm income had fallen from $11,200,000,000 in 1929 to $4,700,000,000 in 1932, but that it increased to $7,600,000,000 by 1938, exclusive of benefit payments.

"Does this indicate injury?" he asked.

Indicative of a rapid rise in productivity, the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce today set at $20,000,000 a month the dollar value of American aircraft and engine production on January 1. The chamber estimated this would be boosted to $50,000,000 by July 1.

German

ship Leonard Pearce, had been rescued after a collision.

Crowds on shore witnessed the sinking of the Italian vessel while only a mile away a German plane was attacking a British trawler. The trawler was damaged but was able to proceed under its own power.

Thirty survivors and the British pilot were rescued from the Italian ship.

Small Steamer Burns

Crowds lined the cliffs of one east coast resort to watch a bomber attack a small steamer several miles from shore. It burst into flame, and a lifeboat took off the crew. British fighters drove off the attacker.

One Nazi echelon attacked a trawler off the Scottish coast, damaging it with bomb splinters and machine-gun bullets. The attackers were driven off by Royal Air Force fighters. A third group dumped several bombs harmlessly near a sandbank off the Norfolk coast.

Three air force fighters were reported to have chased off and damaged a Heinkel bomber as it circled fifty feet over three cargo vessels. The plane dropped several bombs, without hitting anything, then sped homeward.

The determined Nazi reconnaissance drew sharp anti-aircraft fire at such important points as the Firth of Forth, the Humber estuary, South Shields, Newcastle-On-Tyne and the Thames estuary.

Chunks of shrapnel sprayed the streets in some localities, although no air raid sirens wailed a warning, in conformity with the government's decision to sound alarms only when an actual raid is deemed imminent. Householders quickly gathered up the splinters as souvenirs.

Expect Plane Raid

Military experts pointed out that such reconnaissance in the past has preceded attempts to bomb the Firth of Forth, Scapa Flow and to sow magnetic mines from the air. Therefore they believed today's activity signalized a third German effort to cripple British shipping.

The first phase of the German fight on the British fleet was by submarine; the second by deadly drifting mines.

British planes, however, have extended their effort to keep German bombers at their bases, flying far out over the North Sea and attacking such Nazi air bases as the island of Sylt. They are guarding carefully against ship bombings and are alert against the possibility of a lightning blow at docks and shipyards.

The air ministry announcement that new super-fighting plane was in production said the time had not yet come for employment of these craft. It added:

"When it does, there may be some surprises—especially in the numbers which are likely to be used."

Britain's fasteest plane now is the supermarine Spitfire, a single-motored, single-seated, low(wing fighter capable of nearly 400 miles an hour. Some British authorities have called it the world's fasteest plane, but its exact potentialities and specifications are secret.

C. G. Grey, aircraft authority, said in the new edition of "Jane's All the World's Aircraft" that British factories are working "night and day" in production of a "new and secret" warplane.

The German planes which scouted Britain today had to fly 700 miles for the round-trip to the Thames estuary. This is about the range limit of such fighting planes as the Spitfire and the Nazi Messerschmitt. Bombers have a longer range.

Observers believed the air ministry announcemeent referred to the new Defiant, a single-engine fighting plane said to be faster than either the Spitfire or Hurricane, the Royal Air Force's number one and number two pursuit planes.

Its range, because of its one motor, definitely is less than that of the Messerschmitt, which has a range of 825 miles.

With such a range, the Messerschmitt is capable of convoying bombers on rails on Britain. That hasn't occurred yet and every RAF pilot is anxious to see what happens if and when the German fighter meets a Spitfire, Hurricane or Defiant.

Although extremely formidable, the Messerschmitt has not had conspicuous success against British bombers over Germany, RAF pilots have reported.

Britain has two models capable of convoying her slower bombers on raids over Germany. They are the Blenheim and Beaufort, twin-engined machines which in reality are light bombers but can be used as lang-range fighters.

The Blenheim has a range of 1,000 miles, which is slightly less than the Beaufort's.

Robert Albrecht Held In Death of Fogle

Frederick, Md., Jan. 11 (AP)—Robert Albrecht, 19, was charged with manslaughter tonight a few hours after George M. Fogle, 12, died of a bullet wound suffered December 26.

State's Attorney Patrick M. Schnauffer said Albrecht was arraigned before a magistrate today and held in bond of $2,500.

Various sources, he said, had given him this account of the shooting.

Albrecht and a friend were shooting at targets on a field outside the city limits. Albrecht shouldered his rifle and turned for home, assuming the safety catch on the gun was in place. He pulled the trigger and the bullet penetrated the abdomen of Fogle who was playing with a friend across the field.

Unaware of the shooting, Albrecht left the field while Fogle's companion, Donald Krenzer, placed the wounded youth in a cart and brought him to a store where an ambulance was called.

Sen. Borah Raps Edison for Plan To Seize Ships

Delays Confirmation To Air His Views about Proposal

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Senator Borah (R-Idaho) briefly delayed Senate confirmation of Charles Edison as secretary of the navy today in order to rebuke the cabinet nominee sharply for suggesting that Congress grant the President power to commandeer factories, ships and supplies in time of emergency.

Interrupting routine Senate action on a lengthy list of presidential appointments, the veteran Idaho Senator said that the proposal Edison made as acting secretary of the navy was "startling."

"The act would be arbitary and clearly unconstitutional," Borah protested, his voice ringing. "It would be in violation of the most fundamental principles of constitutional government and Democratic processes.

"If this could be done in time of peace, then you could also provide for the suspension of the bill of rights, you could prohibit free speech, free press and the right to trial by jury."

Edison Confirmed

Once he had put these observations on record, Borah explained that he was not protesting the Edison appointment, and the Senate, without a record vote, promptly confirmed the nomination of the new cabinet member along with numerous other presidential appointments.

The nomination of Attorney General Frank Murphy to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court was advanced a step toward confirmation when a Senate judiciary subcommittee approved it unanimously.

No hearings were called, but Murphy voluntarily appeared before the subcommittee and in a calm, firm voice, assured senators he had not condoned "sitdown" strikes as governor of Michigan, and believed that the Supreme Court had the power and duty to overturn acts of Congress when they failed to come within the federal constitution.

Entire Body Must Act

The full judiciary committee and the entire Senate also must pass on the nomination.

The Senate approved these recent presidential selections:

James H. R. Cromwell, husband of Doris Duke, tobacco heiress, as minister to Canada.

Daniel W. Bell as undersecretary of the treasury.

John L. Sullivan as assistant secretary of the treasury.

Breckinridge Long as assistant secretary of state.

George S. Messersmith, former assistant secretary of state, as ambassador to Cuba.

John Cudahy, former minister to Belgium.

R. Henry Norweb as Ambassador to Peru.

Robert M. Scotten as minister to the Dominican Republic.

Clarence E. Gauss as minister to Australia, a newly created post.

This is the jury chosen to hear case against Corporal Benjamin Franklin, State trooper on trial at Mauch Chunk, Pa., for slaying the 14-year-old Joan Stevens. They're shown as they were locked up for the night at end of day's hearing. The jury box was filled only after Sheriff's deputies went out into highways and homes of country to round up emergency panel.

Gets Jail Term for Kissing Married Woman

Bari, Italy, Jan. 11 (AP)—Because he kissed another man's wife, Giovacchino Palladino must serve eight months in prison.

Visiting a friend's home, he kissed Signora Pinto, whereupon Pinto smashed a wine bottle on his head. The tribunal absolved Pinto and fined Palladino a thousand lire (about $50).

Palladino appealed to a higher court—which imposed the prison sentence, ruling Pinto had acted legitimately.

O'Neal Estimates Congress Will Vote $807,000,000 for Farmers

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP)—Edward A. O'Neal, American Farm Bureau Federation president, estimated today Congress would be asked to appropriate $807,000,000 for parity payments to farmers, and declared "parity prices alone can restore purchasing power of the farmers."

O'Neal, addressing the Maryland Farm Bureau Convention, said he had just come from a conference with President Roosevelt.

He estimated $200,000,000 would be asked for payments to dairy, fruit, and truck farm products, and the remaining $607,000,000 for producers of basic crops under A.A.A. provisions; cotton, $242,000,000; corn, $218,000,000; wheat, $121,000,000; tobacco, $14,000,000; rice, $12,000,000.

O'Neal also asserted "it would pay farm leaders to sit down and calmly discuss problems with labor leaders. Help labor get security. We want labor to be prosperous."

He said aid to agriculture was the "best investment" the federal government had made in recent years, and that "for every dollar of increased income to farmers, the national income is multiplied six times.

"As a result of the investment by the federal government during the reconstruction period of $2,400,000,000, the national income has been increased $100,000,000,000 in the six-year period."

Roosevelt, he continued, hinted a special tax to raise funds for parity payments during their conversation, but "we don't have a federal tax for relief, do we? Why penalize the farmers? Instead, let all the people pay."

Earlier, P. C. Turner, state farm bureau president, urged Maryland farmers to present a united front in efforts to obtain beneficial legislation.

"One of our main concerns," he told 1,000 farmers present, "is continuation of the soil conservation act and crop control with parity payments just so long as federal subsidies are allowed industry through tariffs and a floor stays under the wages and hours of labor."

Life Goes on as Usual in Finland Despite the War

Helsinki Milliners Advertise Latest in New Spring Hats

Helsinki, Jan. 11. (AP)—The bulky Bolshevik army was still stalled today on Finland's icy frontier and Helsinki milliners took advantage of the situation to display new spring hats.

How life goes on despite the hardships of war in this city built on a rock by its stubborn people is evidenced by the hat displays. They may also show that the Finns expect to be here when spring comes.

The spring hats do not blossom in bright shop windows as they used to. Their existence is discreetly signalled by pictures of the new finery pasted on rough boards which protect shop windows against bomb shock.

There are plenty of women still here to be thinking about new spring hats. This is a women's as well as a men's war.

And there are other boarded-up shop windows displaying illustrations clipped from magazine advertisements to indicate what may be found inside—sylph-like forms encased in corsets, pictures of graceful legs in silk stockings.

A man hunting for a smoke looks for a boarded-up shop front studded with empty cigarette boxes.

In a number of apartment houses which escaped actual destruction but lost all the glass in their windows because of the concussion, plyboard has been neatly fitted to replace thousands of window panes.

In fact all this boarding-up, sandbagging, air-raid repairing and air-raid precaution-taking has been neatly done. The Finns don't know how to be sloppy—even in war.

So despite a rather grim exterior, Helsinki still looks neater and cleaner than many peacetime cities in other countries.

The ruins of buildings destroyed in December bombing raids have been blanketed and draped by clean snow, and somehow the ruins look like those of another generation—some catastrophe of years, not weeks ago.

Under low-hanging clouds Helsinki passed the day without the shriek of airraid warning sirens.

On a thousand miles of frozen front lines, across the Karelian isthmus and up to the Arctic ocean, the Russians appeared from Finnish communiques to be making no perceptible headway anywhere after their smashing defeats in the Suomssalmi sector.

The army communique this afternoon, however, did not confirm unofficial reports that the Finns had trapped and shattered another Red army division in that sector, in addition to the two already smashed.

"Convicts Parade" In Grand Finale of Louisiana Campaign

New Orleans, Jan. 11 (AP)—Louisiana's turbulent gubernatorial campaign neared its climax tonight with appearance on venerable old Canal street of a "convicts parade" in which many of the state's politicians were depicted clothed in stripes, breaking rocks and cutting sugar cane.

James H. Morrison, outspoken 31-year old candidate for governor and sworn enemy of the administration machine Huey P. Long constructed, arose from a sick bed to lead the bizarre aggregation of strawberry farmers from his home district down the street lined with gaping thousands. He is suffering from influenza.

The lead vehicle in a parade of 25 floats depicted Mayor Robert S. Maestri of New Orleans, the state's most powerful politician, sitting solidly on the closed and padlocked books of the state department which he headed before becoming mayor. Local newspapers and various citizens groups have been clamoring for six months to see these books, which were closed to public scrutiny last June when Earl K. Long, Huey's brother, became governor. The explanation was that they were being audited.

Opposition candidates have charged on the stump that a new set of books was being written.

Paris Communists Must Disavow All Russian Support

Socialists Rally Behind Bill To Keep Them from Office

Paris, Jan. 11. (AP)—Socialists in the Chamber of Deputies rallied tonight behind a government bill designed to exclude from elective office members of the outlawed Communist party unless they publicly disavow any connection with Moscow or the policies of the Soviet government.

Support of the Socialists, who were allied in the past with the Communists and still constitute the largest party in the chamber, apparently assured the government passage of the measure.

The chamber's executive committee voted to ask the defense ministry to extend the leaves of all deputies now serving in the armed forces so that they might participate in the debate, starting next Wednesday.

The bill, which was introduced after Edouard Herriot, president of the chamber, had delivered a scathing denunciation of the Soviet invasion of Finland, gives former Communists eight days in which to make their disavowal.

Before the bill was introduced, six former Communist deputies published a joint letter expressing their opposition to "policies that led to the invasion of Finland."

In his speech, Herriot attacked the Russian government as "a regime seeking to crush the weak" and asserted that "the interest of our own cause" makes it France's duty to give Finland all the aid in her power.

The entire chamber, including several former Communist deputies, greeted the assertion by rising to shout "Long Live Finland!"

Sec. Hull Urges

ments to avoid public criticism that they offered insufficient protection for American producers.

From the Republicans of the committee came charges that under the trade agreement act, Hull had made a forty percent general downward revision of the tarif rates, something Congress would never have 'dared" to do. They also said that Hull, unlike his opponents, has all the governmental statistics-gathering machinery at his disposal in the present fight. The latter factor, said Rep. Treadway, was a severe handicap to the opponents of the trade agrements program.

Act Passed in 1934

The act under which the program operates was passed in 1934, and unless extended will expire on June 12. It empowers the administration to reduce any rate of the Smoot-Hawley tariff act by as much as fifty per cent in exchange for compensating tariff reductions by other countries. The intent, as Hull put it, is to remove barriers to foreign trade and encourage the export of commodities of which the United States produces more than it consumes itself. Twenty two such agrements have been negotiated covering about sixty percent of the total American foreign trade.

Summariznig the consequences, Hull told the committee that in 1937 and 1938, American exports to nations with which it has trade agrements increased sixty-one percent, while exports to "non-agreement countries" rose "only thirty-eight percent." In reply to arguments that the program has hurt the farmer, Hull said that after two and one half years of the Smoot-Hawley tariff act farm income had fallen from $11,260,000,000 in 1929 to $4,700,000,000 in 1932, but that it increased to $7,600,000,000 by 1938, exclusive of benefit payments.

"Does this indicate injury?" he asked.

expansion to assure themselves a continuing supply of machines.

Indicative of a rapid rise in productivity, the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce today set at $20,000,000 a month the dollar value of American aircraft and engine production on January 1. The chamber estimated this would be boosted to $50,000,000 by July 1.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Out of the conflicting British and German accounts of recurrent air battles over Helgoland Bight is emerging one striking and perhaps vitally significant fact.

It is that a crucial test of the part air powers is to play in this war is being made over German, not British waters. That Bight is Germany's very sea threshold. It is a vast, triangular notch of the North Sea, cutting deeply between the German-Dutch and German-Danish borders to form a virtual German bay.

Helgoland, Germany's island stronghold guarding the approaches to most important German seaports and the Kiel Canal, stands almost in the center of the chain of islands that fringe the coast line. From the northern tip of the east Frisian group, where the Netherlands-German boundary line touches the sea, to the island of Sylt of the north Frision group, off the German-Danish border, these islands form a German bulwark of sea and air-defense.

Nearest to England

They are the nearest points in Germany to Britain's shores and to traffic in the North Sea. That they afford bases for both Nazi air and submarine attacks is the conviction on which the British Royal Air Force is shaping its strategy. The greatest air battles not only of this war but in history have thus far been fought, on British initiative, in that Helgoland Bight theater.

In the air, at any rate, Britain is carrying the war to Germany. German and British accounts agree that the newest and longest range types of British bombers are being used in an effort to break up Nazi bombing raids before they get started, and to blast both air and U-boat bases detected along the Nazi island outposts.

Use "Long Range" Ships

Berlin reports that new "long range" Nazi pursuit ships participated in the most recent battle over Helgoland Bight. That both belligerents are straining every nerve—calling upon the inventive genius of their peoples—to turn out swift air-fighters that could match the cruising radius of their bombers goes without saying.

Backed and protected by long-range pursuit ship screens, the bombers of both could deliver mass attacks across the North Sea as they have not yet done. The first of the warring nations to attain long range for its dog-fighter ships and to produce them in quantity will have a heavy advantage over the foe. ship Leonard Pearce, had been rescued after a collision.

Crowds on shore witnessed the sinking of the Italian vessel while only a mile away a German plane was attacking a British trawler. The trawler was damaged but was able to proceed under its own power.

Thirty survivors and the British pilot were rescued from the Italian ship.

Small Steamer Burns

Crowds lined the cliffs of one east coast resort to watch a bomber attack a small steamer several miles from shore. It burst into flame, and a lifeboat took off the crew. British fighters drove off the attacker.

One Nazi echelon attacked a trawler off the Scottish coast, damaging it with bomb splinters and machine-gun bullets. The attackers were driven off by Royal Air Force fighters. A third group dumped several bombs harmlessly near a sandbank off the Norfolk coast.

Three air force fighters were reported to have chased off and damaged a Heinkel bomber as it circled fifty feet over three cargo vessels. The plane dropped several bombs, without hitting anything, then sped homeward.

The determined Nazi reconnaissance drew sharp anti-aircraft fire at such important points as the Firth of Forth, the Humber estuary, South Shields, Newcastle-On-Tyne and the Thames estuary.

Chunks of shrapnel sprayed the streets in some localities, although no air raid sirens wailed a warning, in conformity with the government's decision to sound alarms only when an actual raid is deemed imminent. Householders quickly gathered up the splinters as souvenirs.

Expect Plane Raid

Military experts pointed out that such reconnaissance in the past has preceded attempts to bomb the Firth of Forth, Scapa Flow and to sow magnetic mines from the air. Therefore they believed today's activity signalized a third German effort to cripple British shipping.

The first phase of the German fight on the British fleet was by submarine; the second by deadly drifting mines.

British planes, however, have extended their effort to keep German bombers at their bases, flying far out over the North Sea and attacking such Nazi air bases as the island of Sylt. They are guarding carefully against ship bombings and are alert against the possibility of a lightning blow at docks and shipyards.

The air ministry announcement that new super-fighting plane was in production said the time had not yet come for employment of these craft. It added:

"When it does, there may be some surprises—especially in the numbers which are likely to be used."

Britain's fasteest plane now is the supermarine Spitfire, a single-motored, single-seated, low-wing fighter capable of nearly 400 miles an hour. Some British authorities have called it the world's fasteest plane, but its exact potentialities and specifications are secret.

C. G. Grey, aircraft authority, said in the new edition of "Jane's All the World's Aircraft" that British factories are working "night and day" in production of a "new and secret" warplane.

The German planes which scouted Britain today had to fly 700 miles for the round-trip to the Thames estuary. This is about the range limit of such fighting planes as the Spitfire and the Nazi Messerschmitt. Bombers have a longer range.

Observers believed the air ministry announcemeent referred to the new Defiant, a single-engine fighting plane said to be faster than either the Spitfire or Hurricane, the Royal Air Force's number one and number two pursuit planes.

Its range, because of its one motor, definitely is less than that of the Messerschmitt, which has a range of 825 miles.

With such a range, the Messerschmitt is capable of convoying bombers on rails on Britain. That hasn't occurred yet and every RAF pilot is anxious to see what happens if and when the German fighter meets a Spitfire, Hurricane or Defiant.

Although extremely formidable, the Messerschmitt has not had conspicuous success against British bombers over Germany, RAF pilots have reported.

Britain has two models capable of convoying her slower bombers on raids over Germany. They are the Blenheim and Beaufort, twin-engined machines which in reality are light bombers but can be used as lang-range fighters.

The Blenheim has a range of 1,000 miles, which is slightly less than the Beaufort's.

The Passing Almshouse

THE SUGGESTION made to President Roosevelt by former State Senator Raymond E. Kennedy, of Baltimore, for almshouse reform is not by any means new, but it is something that will have to be acted upon sooner or later.

There is no question that the old-fashioned "poor houses" are now considerably out of date and have long outlived their usefulness. Various reasons obtain for that. The development of hospitalization, old-age pensions and other measures for the care of the sick and indigent has gradually been emptying these institutions of their inmates. As a result many of these places are now in the white elephant class, with personnel and upkeep expenses representing a growing waste of public funds. Doubtless the reason why so many of them are continued is, as Kennedy suggests, their provision for political appointments.

Kennedy's proposal is that a national survey of the actual requirement of paupers be made and that plans be devised for the abolition of the multitude of alms houses and their replacement by sectional institutions for the chronically ill. Instead of obliging each county to maintain a separate and inadequate institution, there could be a few in different sections of a state, depending upon its population and needs, two or three being deemed sufficient for a state the size of Maryland. The different counties could be required to contribute toward the upkeep of these institutions, which Kennedy suggests might be erected with the aid of federal grants in cases where no state funds are available for their construction, thus fitting in with proposed federal hospitalization plans. His suggestion has the merit, lacking in so many recent federal plans, of retaining local jurisdiction and responsibility as against the usual scheme of having the federal government take charge.

With few exceptions, as Kennedy has pointed out, the existing county almshouse set-up has been virtually unchanged for half a century or so. Practically all of them are out of date and inadequate for the uses to which they are now put, even though their inmates have constantly diminished in number. There is also a sort of stigma attaching to the old-fashioned "poor houses," which has turned many needy persons from them to some other sources of aid or relief as these have been made available. These would readily avail themselves of the care provided by a hospital or sanitorium such as is suggested by Kennedy. The old almshouses were designed largely for the care of the indigent, that is, the paupers. But nowadays the utterly destitute are for the most part made so by reason of chronic illness, or senility. Some of the almshouses have been improved somewhat with added facilities for hospitalization but these are meager and can in no wise measure up to those of larger institutions with a sufficient number of inmates to justify better equipment for the purpose.

The need of a change in the almshouse system has long been recognized in various states and proposals have been made from time to time for some such consolidation as Kennedy suggests. Over in West Virginia, for instance, the late James S. Lakin, of Preston county, able head of the State Board of Public Works for years, proposed a plan to provide a series of four or five district hospitals to supplant the fifty-odd county almshouses then maintained by the individual counties. Since then several of those local almshouses have been abandoned because there has been no use for them and the counties having none place such wards as they may have in institutions of adjoining counties or in hospitals. This has been the case in Maryland, which now has only fifteen county almshouses. But the Lakin proposal never went through, although the wisdom and economy of it were plainly evident.

Kennedy is right in noting that the old almshouses are on the way out. They have been on the way for a number of years and as their need has dwindled to almost nothing, some such plan as he suggests is worth consideration. Doubtless by the time the Washington New Dealers get a crack at it they will figure out a way to put the proposed new institutions under federal control, that being their habit, but the Kennedy idea is to keep them under state proprietorship, which is what should be done.

Beyond the Law

LIBERTY anywhere includes a long list of privileges. Every nation's liberty list differs. For instance, Americans regard pumpkin pie as a privilege. It is conceivable that this people would stand for a benevolent tyrant but never if he tried to put a desecrating hand on that kind of pie.

The Englishman makes the same fuss over marmalade. In England the law is paramount to everything else. But marmalade is over and beyond it.

Within the year the law lassooed the Englishman with conscription. He never even murmured. The law deprived him of light after sundown. He didn't squeak. This week the law slammed down on the English a rationing scheme allowing an individual only four ounces of bacon a week; only four ounces of butter, and only twelve ounces of sugar.

But on that last item—sugar—there is a proviso. Those English desiring to make their own marmalade are to be allowed three pounds of sugar to every two pounds of oranges they use in that preserve.

A Dental Riddle

WHEN is a toothache not a toothache?

This dental riddle is propounded in the January Journal of the American Dental Association by Dr. Joseph D. Berke, of New York, who explains that sinus trouble is often the cause of pain which is blamed on teeth and gums.

Although a patient so afflicted is certain he has a dental complaint, Dr. Berke states, clinical and x-ray examinations of the teeth and their supporting tissues reveal no reason why the teeth should ache or why the patient should suffer from a facial neuralgia.

"The diagnosis in these conditions is not a simple matter," Dr. Berke writes. "The history of the case is not always helpful, only one of the patients in this series (twenty cases) having had sinus trouble previously. Careful questioning may disclose a fairly severe cold of recent date and sometimes lead to the admission that, since that time, the teeth on the afflicted side have not felt quite comfortable.

"Dental intervention is usually unnecessary. All symptoms disappear with treatment of the sinus through the nasal route."

Similar pain is also caused by obscure impacted teeth in either the upper or lower jaw, the dental authority adds. These conditions, many times, are not revealed in routine clinical or x-ray examination.

When Spring Comes

WITH A DECISION in the European war unlikely without the striking of a telling infantry blow, American observers on the scene report a conviction in France and England that the Nazis will certainly attempt a thrust through Holland and Belgium when spring comes.

The Maginot line anywhere from Belgium to Switzerland is a thick maze of cross-fire. It is conjectured Germany might hurl 500 tanks at one small sector in the hope of getting fifty through. But there would be three more defense lines to penetrate before comparatively open country was reached. Military experts estimate it would cost an invading army eighty per cent of its attacking force to get that far. The remnants would then face fresh French armies not only capable of annihilating the survivors but of pouring into Germany through the hole the attackers had made.

Could the Nazis turn the Allied flank through Belgium? There are rumors that the British expeditionary force in France, defending the Channel sector, is small in numbers and poorly equipped, Britain having spent all its energy on the navy and home defense. But it is probably fallacious to think that the French have not devoted extreme care to the defense of their Belgian border.

Should Germany essay the Holland-Belgium plunge into France, it is likely that the Nazis would wind up with their heads against a brick wall or their feet in a steel trap.

At the Gateway

IN THIS AGE of scientific wonders what was the most wonderful discovery that 1939 produced? Scientists are almost unanimously agreed that it was the splitting of uranium with the release of such enormous amounts of energy that there is a distant possibility of doing away with ordinary fuel and light.

Of all the elements, hydrogen is lightest and uranium is heaviest. Hydrogen has only one electron and uranium has ninety-two electrons to the atom rotating around a nucleus.

In 1934 Professor Fermi, of Rome, found that if a uranium atom is bombarded with neutrons, entirely new radio-active elements are created. Other scientists followed this trail and in 1939 two German scientists, Hahn and Strassman, learned that they could crack the uranium nucleus squarely in two, releasing not unknown elements but known ones. Other scientists found that the bombarding was done with slow neutrons but that fast neutrons flew out — neutrons with energies of 200,000,000 volts at least.

Why could not a whole lump of uranium be bombarded at once, releasing enough energy to supply a big city? Many a long year of exploration stands between the world and that achievement. But undoubtedly science is at the gateway of a more wonderful world powered by atomic energy and the discoveries made in 1939 were a long step ahead.

Do You Believe in Heredity?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Marshall Maslin

I believe in heredity. It seems to me that I must believe in it, that it is as obvious as the law of gravitation. . . . I believe in that intangible, unseeable, indestructible force that comes down through the ages—and that passes from generation to generation when babies are born.

I do not understand it but I believe in it. . . . Once I didn't. Once I sneered at heredity. Once I was so sure that Environment, the things that happens to people AFTER they are born, was more important than all that has gone before. . . . I had read books and I had believed them. I was almost a fanatic on the subject. And I would argue long and loud that environment is more important and far more useful than heredity in the shaping of boys and girls into useful men and women.

Perhaps I convinced a few persons. But I know ONE person I failed to convince, although I was more anxious to convince him than anyone else. I wanted HIM to believe that we stand alone, here on this wide earth and can make anything of ourselves —and that we owe almost nothing to all those men and women who have gone before. . . . And that stubborn fellow who would not be fully convinced was Me. . . . Although I argued and argued, he would not agree. He was stubborn, he would not completely yield, and at last instead of my convincing him, he convinced ME.

The Old Me convinced the New Me, and now I believe in Heredity more than I do in Environment—and that's not strange, because it's what most sensible people have always believed.

We talk a lot about Gadgets, but we put our money on Character. We can invent Gadgets, but we get Character from the old folks.

We get our Characters out of our Heredity, which guides all men, all women. In that Heredity is a silent strength that we should trust more than we do. Life may hurt it, deform it, bend it almost to breaking—but it is there, it is always important. Give it half a chance and all the courage and endurance and wisdom of the ages will come forth in the fumbling children of today. . . . And Environment is important only as it releases the Character that is in us. . . . For that reason it is very important indeed!

Peterson Book Is Commended

BY EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

Our price of admission to the World War was $10,595,490,390 and we didn't get a rain check. That, however, was merely our loans to the Allies, which may now be written down as permanent investments. Our dizzy write-up of the national debt, our payment in lives, the destruction of our national economy, from which the depression was a delayed reaction, made our idealistic binge probably the most costly venture of its kind in history.

The above "l'addition" is from the appendix of H. C. Peterson's new book, "Propaganda for War," published by the University of Oklahoma Press. It seemed to me it should have been out in front, rather than at the back of the book. It herds together at the point of a sharp pencil some salutary thoughts about the high cost of war—and war comes much higher these days than it did then.

Years of Research

Mr. Peterson is a professor of history at the above university. His book summarizes years of scholarly research covering the efforts of both Germany and the Allies to rope and hog-tie American public opinion and get us into the war. Every essential argument wears a badge of authority in the form of an official document. It is a detached and studious report of the overt drive against our free opinion.

At this hour, when the Westwall stalemate provides evidence that this is primarily a political war; at this hour when propaganda is vastly more refined, skilled and intensified than it was twenty-five years ago, it is as timely as any bulletin from the war front. It is a primer for the run-of-the mill American who wants to make up his own mind about whether we ought to get into this war.

Learning A Lot

Personally, I believe there is abroad in our country a wholesome skepticism about power-politics and its propaganda. We have learned a lot. It is quite possible that many or most of us may incline to the side of the Allies, in the present war. There are indications that Britain and France have learned something too, and that they are not putting on the heat over here as they did in the years from 1914 to 1917. But that they did put on the heat in those earlier years is the indisputable evidence of Professor Peterson's book —as did the Germans, but with less skill and effectiveness.

Considering the after manifestations of the German yen for world domination, there will be those who will insist that we Americans would be heiling and goose-stepping if the British hadn't made up our mind for us. That is wide-open opinion not necessarily conditioned by Professor Peterson's showing that the British prescribed thought and action for us from 1914 on, and his story of how they did it.

Magnificent Job

Wellington House, the British War Propaganda Bureau, established in September, 1914, did a magnificent job of rounding up American wordsmiths, financial leaders, professional men, industrialists, and the generally more articulate and authoritative Americans in places of leadership. This is professor Peterson's story as it emerges from his welter of state papers, official correspondence and the documentary firecords of the British agents, cultural, diplomatic, in this country.

The book is a startling reminder that in this day of greater literary and magical communications and a multitude of new stimuli to thought and action, the mobilization of intelligence and the goodwill on this side or that is an issue as critical as any engagement on the battle line. It is also an urgent reminder that our legitimate isolation from the ancient, dynastic, frequently bloody intrigues of Europe imposes on us the basic survival duty of maintaining clear, clean, public opinion, undefiled by any source whatsoever. We shouldn't fall and we shouldn't be pushed. When and if we see fit to get into this fight—which God forbid—it will be the result of a deliberate, informed, rational American and not European decision.

Wholesale Reading

That was how I felt after reading Professor Peterson's book, and this conclusion has nothing to do with personal preference as to the present combatants. This department, in commending this book for wide general reading, believes that its revelations of how opinion can be manufactured, like steel ingots, is wholesome reading for a free, solvent country which likes to wear its headlight out in front, instead of behind, like the ladybug.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

FIGHTS FOR FINLAND

Prince Liechtenstein

Stockholm reports indicate that among volunteers that have arrived in Helsinki to fight for the Finns is Prince Ferdinand von und zu Liechtenstein, 39. The Price's home is now in Somerset, England. He once was reported engaged to Ina Claire, American actress.

VISUALIZING HIS NEW CAMPAIGN ROLE

Transferred Power on Tariff Rates Is Due for a Big Battle in Congress

BY MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, Jan. 11.—We are about to have a battle in Congress, on what is officially known as "reciprocal trade agreements"—abbreviated, by newspaper condemnation, I suppose, to "Hull trade pacts". It is expected to be the greatest battle in this Congress. Facing the job of clarifying the issues involved—and therefore the work of first understanding them myself—I pored for a forenoon over official documents, pamphlets, copies of speeches.

Mark Sullivan

Then, a little dismayed, I pushed the documents away from me, and picked up today's newspaper. I read the column of General Hugh Johnson. I found the general had been engaged in the same job as myself. And I found the general, as the saying is, "taking the words out of my mouth." I found him confessing to readers: The issues are so technical that I shrink from the task of making them plain."

Same As Tariff

We can make a little progress by saying that the term 'trade pacts' means much the same as "tariff". At least, for the purpose of the coming Congressional debate, the two terms are the same. What are we going to have in a debate on the tariff.

For more than a hundred years the United States has had tariffs. Every decade or so we wrote new ones—in fifty years we have written five, the last in 1931, the Smoot-Hawley tariff.

The way of writing a new tariff has been, in the past, to do it wholesale. The process was called "general revision." It was done as a single thing, in one omnibus bill. All the rates on all commodities were thrown into one pot—a bill containing thousands of separate rates. Congress debated it for months, debated amendments to it, raised some proposed rates, lowered others. Then Congress passed it. It, and each of the rates in it, remained in effect until the next general revision, several years later. That way of making tariffs came to be regarded as inflexible.

Job Handed Over

In 1934, after Mr. Hull became secretary of state, something quite new was introduced. Mr. Hull was given power to make reciprocal trade agreements with other countries. He could agree with France, for example, to reduce the American tariff on French lace—provided France would make a corresponding concession on an American commodity, perhaps agree to permit more American wheat to be sold to France. Mr. Hull negotiated such agreements with twenty-two nations, covering a large number of commodities.

But, automatically, these agreements became much more than separate agreements between two nations. They became universal. For there is a provision of international law called the "best favored nation" rule. Under this rule, if we grant a lower rate to say one nation, the same rate becomes applicable to all nations that follow the rule, practically all in the world.

One Change Affects All

Consequently, when we lowered the rate on lace from France, for example, we lowered the rate on lace from practically every country. Similarly, when France or another nation granted a concession on American wheat, for example, it had to grant the same concession on wheat from other countries. A trade pact with one nation automatically became a pact with the world, applying to every commodity named in the pact.

So that in effect, these Hull trade pacts can not separate agreements with twenty-two individual nations. They amount to a world-wide reduction of tariffs between all nations. In some cases, a lowered tariff wall between the United States and Britain may result ultimately in a lowered tariff wall between Spain and France.

This broad, world-wide effect of the Hull trade pacts is claimed as perhaps the most important fruit of Mr. Hull's policy. The effect everywhere, between all nations, is to reduce tariffs, to break down the "quotas" by which some nations limit imports and exports, to get away from exchange restrictions—in short, to increase the flow of international trade everywhere. This argument is phrased clearly by Miss Dorothy Thompson:

Great Damage Seen

"I believe that a majority of the world's ablest economists would agree that the most serious single cause of present-day unemployment, dictatorship, unrest, excessive armament and drift toward war is the attempt of ever-increasing numbers of sovereign states to shut themselves up in geographical compartments, separated from other nations by tariffs, quotas, embargoes, unbalanced indebtedness and fluctuating currencies."

That is what the Hull trade pacts are supposed to remedy. If they do, we benefit. In any world-wide restoration of international trade, and therefore of economic contentment, and therefore of peace, the United States, of course, would share.

Few at a Time

They is a way of reducing our tariff rates partially and gradually, a few at a time. They accomplish this with the least detriment to American industry. For Mr. Hull and his experts try to pick out for their trade pacts the particular commodities upon which tariffs can be reduced without serious effect upon American producers.

But, inevitably, some of our producers and some localities feel their industries are hurt, or fear they will be. From this arises the opposition, and the coming battle in Congress. Mr. Hull's power to make these pacts expires June 12 next. The debate is on whether the power should be renewed for another three years.

May As Well Be Forgotten

From the New York Herald Tribune

There is something almost moving in the sight of the State Department still weeping for its mysteriously begotten baby, the 300-mile safety zone. It is a "short view," the acting chief of the division of American republics assures us, to suppose that the glorious child of peace is "merely a limp scarecrow, be be knocked flat by the first gust of wind and then be forgotten." Perhaps the "test of time" might even breathe some life into it. Who knows? Miracles have happened—but rarely in the field of international law and warfare. And that Milquetoastian protest of the twenty-one republics, resolutely threatening to consider whether they might not go so far as to slap any belligerent on the wrist who in the future violated the zone (and got caught at it, which in itself would be unlikely) hardly looks like the beginning of a miracle.

It would really be kinder to tell the State department that the 300-mile zone is a dead baby—unsupported by international law, utterly unenforceable, bound to be erratic and highly dangerous in effect if there were any attempt partially to enforce it, and making very little practical sense anyway. Suppose there should be another Graf Spee battle off Sandy Hook. Would that involve the United States in war? Perhaps it would not help, just as it did not help particularly when a German U-boat, after dropping in for a few hours at Newport, R. I., torpedoed a few merchantmen without warning off Nantucket Light on her way home.

But we can't have everything. And with the department's hands already full of purely paper protests over genuine points of international law, it is not going to help much to exasperate the recipients by adding protests without even a paper foundation. And for some reason there does seem to be something particularly exasperating to fighting peoples ir being told that the Americas are so pure and so peaceful that they can't endure even the sound of gunfire beyond their horizons.

On the Record

By United States Senator Francis T. Maloney, Democrat, of Connecticut.

The people do not know that they are paying terrific taxes on cigarettes and gasoline and that they are paying other and numerous terribly burdensome taxes.

A Tricky and Dangerous Topic

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

Washington, Jan. 11.—The is the prickliest and most dang subject in politics. It is also the trickiest and most dangerous subjects to write about. It is dangerous in politics because, if a party boosts the tariff up, it increases the cost of living to all the voters and the party will hear about it in the next election. Yet, if it even suggests putting the tariff down, it raises an even more powerful and hostile opposition sepa from every organized econo group that is affected, or thinks

It is tricky and dangerous to about because the argument all to figures. That would be cle kind of argument if the fi clearly proved anything. But don't. * * *

Barrage Is Planned

Preparation for a drum-fire rage of this kind of stuff is b made in Washington to shoot pants off Secretary Hull's recip trade agreements. I have reams of it in preparation for t columns on that subject and away dizzy with the conclusion it is too tricky to be handled in kind of comment in 600 word d

Here is an example. Trade a ment reduced the Smoot-Ha tariff on flat glass by thirty per to thirty-three percent. During of 1937 imports of glass rose sharply than domestic produc Figures showing this make seems to be a convincing case the high-tariff glass boys. But don't show that the rates prom righted themselves, that during period of slight lag in domestic duction there was a paralyzing s in part of the glass industry that for the year as a whole duction was it its highest pea years.

Other Barriers Broken

Similarly, figures are used to that exports of flat glass were 1.7 percent of production in That is true, but the trade a ments broke down several bar against our automobile expo which promptly rose sharply ca ing with them an estimated 000,000 square feet of plate g (7.6 percent of production) brought our total exports of g to 9.3 percent of domestic pro tion.

The Passing Almshouse

THE SUGGESTION made to President Roosevelt by former State Senator Raymond E. Kennedy, of Baltimore, for almshouse reform is not by any means new, but it is something that will have to be acted upon sooner or later.

There is no question that the old-fashioned "poor houses" are now considerably out of date and have long outlived their usefulness. Various reasons obtain for that. The development of hospitalization, old-age pensions and other measures for the care of the sick and indigent has gradually been emptying these institutions of their inmates. As a result many of these places are now in the white elephant class, with personnel and upkeep expenses representing a growing waste of public funds. Doubtless the reason why so many of them are continued is, as Kennedy suggests, their provision for political appointments.

Kennedy's proposal is that a national survey of the actual requirement of paupers be made and that plans be devised for the abolition of the multitude of alms houses and their replacement by sectional institutions for the chronically ill. Instead of obliging each county to maintain a separate and inadequate institution, there could be a few in different sections of a state, depending upon its population and needs, two or three being deemed sufficient for a state the size of Maryland. The different counties could be required to contribute toward the upkeep of these institutions, which Kennedy suggests might be erected with the aid of federal grants in cases where no state funds are available for their construction, thus fitting in with proposed federal hospitalization plans. His suggestion has the merit, lacking in so many recent federal plans, of retaining local jurisdiction and responsibility as against the usual scheme of having the federal government take charge.

With few exceptions, as Kennedy has pointed out, the existing county almshouse set-up has been virtually unchanged for half a century or so. Practically all of them are out of date and inadequate for the uses to which they are now put, even though their inmates have constantly diminished in number. There is also a sort of stigma attaching to the old-fashioned "poor houses," which has turned many needy persons from them to some other sources of aid or relief as these have been made available. These would readily avail themselves of the care provided by a hospital or sanitorium such as is suggested by Kennedy. The old almshouses were designed largely for the care of the indigent, that is, the paupers. But nowadays the utterly destitute are for the most part made so by reason of chronic illness, or senility. Some of the almshouses have been improved somewhat with added facilities for hospitalization but these are meager and can in no wise measure up to those of larger institutions with a sufficient number of inmates to justify better equipment for the purpose.

The need of a change in the almshouse system has long been recognized in various states and proposals have been made from time to time for some such consolidation as Kennedy suggests. Over in West Virginia, for instance, the late James S. Lakin, of Preston county, able head of the State Board of Public Works for years, proposed a plan to provide a series of four or five district hospitals to supplant the fifty-odd county almshouses then maintained by the individual counties. Since then several of those local almshouses have been abandoned because there has been no use for them and the counties having none place such wards as they may have in institutions of adjoining counties or in hospitals. This has been the case in Maryland, which now has only fifteen county almshouses. But the Lakin proposal never went through, although the wisdom and economy of it were plainly evident.

Kennedy is right in noting that the old almshouses are on the way out. They have been on the way for a number of years and as their need has dwindled to almost nothing, some such plan as he suggests is worth consideration. Doubtless by the time the Washington New Dealers get a crack at it they will figure out a way to put the proposed new institutions under federal control, that being their habit, but the Kennedy idea is to keep them under state proprietorship, which is what should be done.

Beyond the Law

LIBERTY anywhere includes a long list of privileges. Every nation's liberty list differs. For instance, Americans regard pumpkin pie as a privilege. It is conceivable that this people would stand for a benevolent tyrant but never if he tried to put a desecrating hand on that kind of pie.

The Englishman makes the same fuss over marmalade. In England the law is paramount to everything else. But marmalade is over and beyond it.

Within the year the law lassooed the Englishman with conscription. He never even murmured. The law deprived him of light after sundown. He didn't squeak. This week the law slammed down on the English a rationing scheme allowing an individual only four ounces of bacon a week; only four ounces of butter, and only twelve ounces of sugar.

But on that last item—sugar—there is a proviso. Those English desiring to make their own marmalade are to be allowed three pounds of sugar to every two pounds of oranges they use in that preserve.

A Dental Riddle

WHEN is a toothache not a toothache?

This dental riddle is propounded in the January Journal of the American Dental Association by Dr. Joseph D. Berke, of New York, who explains that sinus trouble is often the cause of pain which is blamed on teeth and gums.

Although a patient so afflicted is certain he has a dental complaint, Dr. Berke states, clinical and x-ray examinations of the teeth and their supporting tissues reveal no reason why the teeth should ache or why the patient should suffer from a facial neuralgia.

"The diagnosis in these conditions is not a simple matter," Dr. Berke writes. "The history of the case is not always helpful, only one of the patients in this series (twenty cases) having had sinus trouble previously. Careful questioning may disclose a fairly severe cold of recent date and sometimes lead to the admission that, since that time, the teeth on the afflicted side have not felt quite comfortable.

"Dental intervention is usually unnecessary. All symptoms disappear with treatment of the sinus through the nasal route."

Similar pain is also caused by obscure impacted teeth in either the upper or lower jaw, the dental authority adds. These conditions, many times, are not revealed in routine clinical or x-ray examination.

When Spring Comes

WITH A DECISION in the European war unlikely without the striking of a telling infantry blow, American observers on the scene report a conviction in France and England that the Nazis will certainly attempt a thrust through Holland and Belgium when spring comes.

The Maginot line anywhere from Belgium to Switzerland is a thick maze of cross-fire. It is conjectured Germany might hurl 500 tanks at one small sector in the hope of getting fifty through. But there would be three more defense lines to penetrate before comparatively open country was reached. Military experts estimate it would cost an invading army eighty per cent of its attacking force to get that far. The remnants would then face fresh French armies not only capable of annihilating the survivors but of pouring into Germany through the hole the attackers had made.

Could the Nazis turn the Allied flank through Belgium? There are rumors that the British expeditionary force in France, defending the Channel sector, is small in numbers and poorly equipped, Britain having spent all its energy on the navy and home defense. But it is probably fallacious to think that the French have not devoted extreme care to the defense of their Belgian border.

Should Germany essay the Holland-Belgium plunge into France, it is likely that the Nazis would wind up with their heads against a brick wall or their feet in a steel trap.

At the Gateway

IN THIS AGE of scientific wonders what was the most wonderful discovery that 1939 produced? Scientists are almost unanimously agreed that it was the splitting of uranium with the release of such enormous amounts of energy that there is a distant possibility of doing away with ordinary fuel and light.

Of all the elements, hydrogen is lightest and uranium is heaviest. Hydrogen has only one electron and uranium has ninety-two electrons to the atom rotating around a nucleus.

In 1934 Professor Fermi, of Rome, found that if a uranium atom is bombarded with neutrons, entirely new radio-active elements are created. Other scientists followed this trail and in 1939 two German scientists, Hahn and Strassman, learned that they could crack the uranium nucleus squarely in two, releasing not unknown elements but known ones. Other scientists found that the bombarding was done with slow neutrons but that fast neutrons flew out — neutrons with energies of 200,000,000 volts at least.

Why could not a whole lump of uranium be bombarded at once, releasing enough energy to supply a big city? Many a long year of exploration stands between the world and that achievement. But undoubtedly science is at the gateway of a more wonderful world powered by atomic energy and the discoveries made in 1939 were a long step ahead.

Do You Believe in Heredity?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I believe in heredity. It seems to me that I must believe in it, that it is as obvious as the law of gravitation. . . . I believe in that intangible, unseeable, indestructible force that comes down through the ages—and that passes from generation to generation when babies are born.

Marshall Maslin

I do not understand it but I believe in it. . . . Once I didn't. Once I sneered at heredity. Once I was so sure that Environment, the things that happens to people AFTER they are born, was more important than all that has gone before. . . . I had read books and I had believed them. I was almost a fanatic on the subject. And I would argue long and loud that environment is more important and far more useful than heredity in the shaping of boys and girls into useful men and women.

Perhaps I convinced a few persons. But I know ONE person I failed to convince, although I was more anxious to convince him than anyone else. I wanted HIM to believe that we stand alone, here on this wide earth and can make anything of ourselves—and that we owe almost nothing to all those men and women who have gone before. . . . And that stubborn fellow who would not be fully convinced was Me. . . . Although I argued and argued, he would not agree. He was stubborn, he would not completely yield, and at last instead of my convincing him, he convinced ME.

The Old Me convinced the New Me, and now I believe in Heredity more than I do in Environment—and that's not strange, because it's what most sensible people have always believed.

We talk a lot about Gadgets, but we put our money on Character. We can invent Gadgets, but we get Character from the old folks.

We get our Characters out of our Heredity, which guides all men, all women. In that Heredity is a silent strength that we should trust more than we do. Life may hurt it, deform it, bend it almost to breaking—but it is there, it is always important. Give it half a chance and all the courage and endurance and wisdom of the ages will come forth in the fumbling children of today. . . . And Environment is important only as it releases the Character that is in us. . . . For that reason it is very important indeed!

Peterson Book Is Commended

Edwin C. Hill

Our price of admission to the World War was $10,595,490,390 and we didn't get a rain check. That, however, was merely our loans to the Allies, which may now be written down as permanent investments. Our dizzy write-up of the national debt, our payment in lives, the destruction of our national economy, from which the depression was a delayed reaction, made our idealistic binge probably the most costly venture of its kind in history.

The above "addition" is from the appendix of H. C. Peterson's new book, "Propaganda for War," published by the University of Oklahoma Press. It seemed to me it should have been out in front, rather than at the back of the book. It herds together at the point of a sharp pencil some salutary thoughts about the high cost of war—and war comes much higher these days than it did then.

Years of Research

Mr. Peterson is a professor of history at the above university. His book summarizes years of scholarly research covering the efforts of both Germany and the Allies to rope and hog-tie American public opinion and get us into the war. Every essential argument wears a badge of authority in the form of an official document. It is a detached and studious report of the overt drive against our free opinion.

At this hour, when the Westwall stalemate provides evidence that this is primarily a political war; at this hour when propaganda is vastly more refined, skilled and intensified than it was twenty-five years ago, it is as timely as any bulletin from the war front. It is a primer for the run-of-the mill American who wants to make up his own mind about whether we ought to get into this war.

Learning A Lot

Personally, I believe there is abroad in our country a wholesome skepticism about power-politics and its propaganda. We have learned a lot. It is quite possible that many or most of us may incline to the side of the Allies, in the present war. There are indications that Britain and France have learned something too, and that they are not putting on the heat over here as they did in the years from 1914 to 1917. But that they did put on the heat in those earlier years is the indisputable evidence of Professor Peterson's book —as did the Germans, but with less skill and effectiveness.

Considering the after manifestations of the German yen for world domination, there will be those who will insist that we Americans would be heiling and goose-stepping if the British hadn't made up our mind for us. That is wide-open opinion not necessarily conditioned by Professor Peterson's showing that the British prescribed thought and action for us from 1914 on, and his story of how they did it.

Magnificent Job

Wellington House, the British War Propaganda Bureau, established in September, 1914, did a magnificent job of rounding up American wordsmiths, financial leaders, professional men, industrialists, and the generally more articulate and authoritative Americans in places of leadership. This is professor Peterson's story as it emerges from his welter of state papers, official correspondence and the documentary firecords of the British agents, cultural, diplomatic, in this country.

The book is a startling reminder that in this day of greater literary and magical communications and a multitude of new stimuli to thought and action, the mobilization of intelligence and the goodwill on this side or that is an issue as critical as any engagement on the battle line. It is also an urgent reminder that our legitimate isolation from the ancient, dynastic, frequently bloody intrigues of Europe imposes on us the basic survival duty of maintaining clear, clean, public opinion, undefiled by any source whatsoever. We shouldn't fall and we shouldn't be pushed. When and if we see fit to get into this fight—which God forbid—it will be the result of a deliberate, informed, rational American and not European decision.

Wholesale Reading

That was how I felt after reading Professor Peterson's book, and this conclusion has nothing to do with personal preference as to the present combatants. This department, in commending this book for wide general reading, believes that its revelations of how opinion can be manufactured, like steel ingots, is wholesome reading for a free, solvent country which likes to wear its headlight out in front, instead of behind, like the ladybug.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

VISUALIZING HIS NEW CAMPAIGN ROLE

Transferred Power on Tariff Rates Is Due for a Big Battle in Congress

BY MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, Jan. 11.—We are about to have a battle in Congress, on what is officially known as "reciprocal trade agreements"—abbreviated, by newspaper condemnation, I suppose, to "Hull trade pacts". It is expected to be the greatest battle in this Congress. Facing the job of clarifying the issues involved—and therefore the work of first understanding them myself—I pored for a forenoon over official documents, pamphlets, copies of speeches.

Mark Sullivan

Then, a little dismayed, I pushed the documents away from me, and picked up today's newspaper. I read the column of General Hugh Johnson. I found the general had been engaged in the same job as myself. And I found the general, as the saying is, "taking the words out of my mouth." I found him confessing to readers: The issues are so technical that I shrink from the task of making them plain."

Same As Tariff

We can make a little progress by saying that the term 'trade pacts' means much the same as "tariff". At least, for the purpose of the coming Congressional debate, the two terms are the same. What are we going to have in a debate on the tariff.

For more than a hundred years the United States has had tariffs. Every decade or so we wrote new ones—in fifty years we have written five, the last in 1931, the Smoot-Hawley tariff.

The way of writing a new tariff has been, in the past, to do it wholesale. The process was called "general revision." It was done as a single thing, in one omnibus bill. All the rates on all commodities were thrown into one pot—a bill containing thousands of separate rates. Congress debated it for months, debated amendments to it, raised some proposed rates, lowered others. Then Congress passed it. It, and each of the rates in it, remained in effect until the next general revision, several years later. That way of making tariffs came to be regarded as inflexible.

Job Handed Over

In 1934, after Mr. Hull became secretary of state, something quite new was introduced. Mr. Hull was given power to make reciprocal trade agreements with other countries. He could agree with France, for example, to reduce the American tariff on French lace—provided France would make a corresponding concession on an American commodity, perhaps agree to permit more American wheat to be sold to France. Mr. Hull negotiated such agreements with twenty-two nations, covering a large number of commodities.

But, automatically, these agreements became much more than separate agreements between two nations. They became universal. For there is a provision of international law called the "best favored nation" rule. Under this rule, if we grant a lower rate to say one nation, the same rate becomes applicable to all nations that follow the rule, practically all in the world.

One Change Affects All

Consequently, when we lowered the rate on lace from France, for example, we lowered the rate on lace from practically every country. Similarly, when France or another nation granted a concession on American wheat, for example, it had to grant the same concession on wheat from other countries. A trade pact with one nation automatically became a pact with the world, applying to every commodity named in the pact.

So that in effect, these Hull trade pacts can not separate agreements with twenty-two individual nations. They amount to a world-wide reduction of tariffs between all nations. In some cases, a lowered tariff wall between the United States and Britain may result ultimately in a lowered tariff wall between Spain and France.

This broad, world-wide effect of the Hull trade pacts is claimed as perhaps the most important fruit of Mr. Hull's policy. The effect everywhere, between all nations, is to reduce tariffs, to break down the "quotas" by which some nations limit imports and exports, to get away from exchange restrictions—in short, to increase the flow of international trade everywhere. This argument is phrased clearly by Miss Dorothy Thompson:

Great Damage Seen

"I believe that a majority of the world's ablest economists would agree that the most serious single cause of present-day unemployment, dictatorship, unrest, excessive armament and drift toward war is the attempt of ever-increasing numbers of sovereign states to shut themselves up in geographical compartments, separated from other nations by tariffs, quotas, embargoes, unbalanced indebtedness and fluctuating currencies."

That is what the Hull trade pacts are supposed to remedy. If they do, we benefit. In any world-wide restoration of international trade, and therefore of economic contentment, and therefore of peace, the United States, of course, would share.

Few at a Time

They is a way of reducing our tariff rates partially and gradually, a few at a time. They accomplish this with the least detriment to American industry. For Mr. Hull and his experts try to pick out for their trade pacts the particular commodities upon which tariffs can be reduced without serious effect upon American producers.

But, inevitably, some of our producers and some localities feel their industries are hurt, or fear they will be. From this arises the opposition, and the coming battle in Congress. Mr. Hull's power to make these pacts expires June 12 next. The debate is on whether the power should be renewed for another three years.

May As Well Be Forgotten

From the New York Herald Tribune

There is something almost moving in the sight of the State Department still weeping for its mysteriously begotten baby, the 300-mile safety zone. It is a "short view," the acting chief of the division of American republics assures us, to suppose that the glorious child of peace is "merely a limp scarecrow, be be knocked flat by the first gust of wind and then be forgotten." Perhaps the "test of time" might even breathe some life into it. Who knows? Miracles have happened—but rarely in the field of international law and warfare. And that Milquetoastian protest of the twenty-one republics, resolutely threatening to consider whether they might not go so far as to slap any belligerent on the wrist who in the future violated the zone (and got caught at it, which in itself would be unlikely) hardly looks like the beginning of a miracle.

It would really be kinder to tell the State department that the 300-mile zone is a dead baby—unsupported by international law, utterly unenforceable, bound to be erratic and highly dangerous in effect if there were any attempt partially to enforce it, and making very little practical sense anyway. Suppose there should be another Graf Spee battle off Sandy Hook. Would that involve the United States in war? Perhaps it would not help, just as it did not help particularly when a German U-boat, after dropping in for a few hours at Newport, R. I., torpedoed a few merchantmen without warning off Nantucket Light on her way home.

But we can't have everything. And with the department's hands already full of purely paper protests over genuine points of international law, it is not going to help much to exasperate the recipients by adding protests without even a paper foundation. And for some reason there does seem to be something particularly exasperating to fighting peoples ir being told that the Americas are so pure and so peaceful that they can't endure even the sound of gunfire beyond their horizons.

A Tricky and Dangerous Topic

Hugh John

Washington, Jan. 11.—The is the prickliest and most dang subject in politics. It is also the trickiest and most dangerous subjects to write about. It is dangerous in politics because, if a party boosts the tariff up, it increases the cost of living to all the voters and the party will hear about it in the next election. Yet, if it even suggests putting the tariff down, it raises an even more powerful and hostile opposition sepa from every organized econo group that is affected, or thinks

It is tricky and dangerous to about because the argument all to figures. That would be cle kind of argument if the fi clearly proved anything. But don't. They sometimes strong dicate trends and effects, but are so many influences other traiffs that it is never possib work out a 2 plus 4 formula. thermore, in such a situation adroit figure shark can ma regiments of statistics that see prove his point and, by omitting mention of figures that dispro make a knock-down and drag argument which, if studied by self, is enough to convince any

Barrage Is Planned

Preparation for a drum-fire rage of this kind of stuff is made in Washington to shoot pants off Secretary Hull's recip trade agreements. I have reams of it in preparation for columns on that subject and away dizzy with the conclusion it is too tricky to be handled in kind of comment in 600 word

Here is an example. Trade ment reduced the Smoot-Ha tariff on flat glass by thirty pe to thirty-three percent. During of 1937 imports of glass rose sharply than domestic produc Figures showing this make seems to be a convincing case the high-tariff glass boys. But don't show that the rates pron righted themselves, that during period of slight lag in domestic duction there was a paralyzing in part of the glass industry that for the year as a whole duction was it its highest pea years.

Other Barriers Broken

Similarly, figures are used to that exports of flat glass were 1.7 percent of production in That is true, but the trade ments broke down several bar against our automobile expo which promptly rose sharply ca ing with them an estimated 000,000 square feet of plate (7.6 percent of production) brought our total exports of to 9.3 percent of domestic pro tion.

The whole controversy is full of that kind of confusion. the essence of this quarrel is enough. The Smoot-Hawley ta was in many parts simply a bi hi-jack the American consume is still on the books because seemed better trading to get other nations a lower tariff on imports than just to lower our b riers hoping that they would go hearted too and lower theirs ou Christian charity. That was w the trade agreements now under tried to do.

No Great Harm Shown

Without getting into detail these tricky figures, they show our exports have increased abr of our imports and that our exp to countries in which we have t agreements have increased m faster and farther than others. T do not show great harm to any portant group in agriculture, in try or labor but show a great g to all groups, to all consumers, t employment and the country a whole.

So what's all the shooting f Obviously it is either to protect God - awful Smoot - Hawley sc dules, or it is an effort, in a high-carnival of old time log-roll lobbying, to soak the consumer w even higher rates.—Distributed United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Navy Has Quintuplets--And They're All Subs!

Five new submarines, attached to Division 15, Squadron six, United States navy, are pictured above nesting beside the mother ship, U. S. S. Holland in the San Diego, Cal., navy yards. The new submersibles are 310 feet long, carry a complement of six officers and 54 men and are armed with a three-inch gun as well as usual number of torpedo tubes.

Company

doned for the miners caught in main six.

Hampered by roof falls, shattered timbers and lack of air, the crews worked on four-hour shifts at top speed to break through to the entombed men.

More than half a mile of debris-strewn passageway still blocked off the blast-torn section. Company officials hoped it would be only a "matter of hours" before the men are reached.

One of the bodies recovered has not been identified.

Three Identified

The others were Roy Hyatt, 32, motorman, married and the father of four children; Roy Evans, motorman, married, four children; and Charley Moffitt, 42, negro, married four children.

More than twenty-four hours ago the families of miners employed by the Pond Creek Pocohontas Coal Company first came to the entrance.

They knew then only that "something" had happened inside.

Soon forty-five workers came up. They told of a blast about two miles back in another section.

Some of them, without waiting to notify their families, strapped oxygen tanks on their backs and took their places with the crews which quickly assembled from nearby communities in this rich southern West Virginia coal field.

State mine officials joined with company supervisors in directing the work.

Air Becomes Better

During the day the "air" inside became better as a makeship ventilating system was pushed ahead by the rescue men and labor crews followed the helmeted men.

But as they came nearer the blast locale, the task became more difficult. In some places there was hardly room for one man to crawl between the roof and piled debris.

Fighting back their fears, the wives and sweethearts of some of the trapped men quickly began helping with the organization of a relief station.

One of those who has been handing out soup, coffee and sandwiches since last night was Mrs. Alonzo Barnett, twenty-one-year-old mother of four children.

"I would have stayed anyway," she said. "I would rather be here than at home. My husband is down there."

William Fultz, twenty-year-old negro college student, found his family in the crowd near the entrance. He left classes at West Virginia State College near Charleston for his father and an uncle were among those caught inside.

"I worked in that mine all summer," he said, "and from what I know of it, I'm certain some of them will come out alive."

The more optimistic hoped that some of the men managed to barricade themselves in "rooms" off the main entry in order to hold out until aid could reach them with fresh air.

Cause of Blast Unknown

The cause of the blast has not yet been determined, but District Inspector W. C. Sturgiss expressed the belief workers might have cut into some abandoned, gas-filled entry.

Bartley No. 1 is entered through a 620-foot shaft which goes straight down into the earth. From the bottom, corridors branch out, following the coal seams for as far as two miles.

Bathing Curtailed In Berlin Homes

Berlin, Jan. 11 (AP)—War-time necessity has curtailed bathing to the old fashioned Saturday night.

An order published in the official Gazette decreed that hot water in Berlin apartment houses with central heating must be shut off with the exceptions of Saturdays and Sundays.

Object of the order is to save coal.

BABY RASHES DUE TO EXTERNAL CAUSES

British Tanker Sunk

London, Jan. 11 (AP)—The British tanker El Oso, 7,267 tons, was blown up, apparently by a mine, off the west coast of England today. The crew of thirty-six was landed, several of them injured.

Moscow Statement Describes Clashes With Finn Troops

Moscow, Jan. 11 (AP)—A Soviet military communique distributed by the Tass news agency tonight described infantry clashes and patrol activities in the area around Kitela Finnish fighting front on the northeast shores of Lake Ladoga, and scouting activities in the "Ukhta and Repola directions."

(Ukhta and Repola are border positions inside Russian territory, Repola being about 180 miles north of Lake Ladoga and Ukhta approximately 100 miles further north. The communique did not say exactly where the scouting took place. It described the Kitela area action as in the "Petrozavodsk direction." Petrozavodsk is on the Murmansk railway, east of Lake Ladoga and about seventy-five miles inside the Soviet border. Kitela however, is about twenty-five miles inside Finland.)

The communique:

"Headquarters of Leningrad military area, 11th January; Ukhta and Repola directions, activities of scouts. Petrozavodsk direction, actions of patrols and clashes of infantry units in area Kitela. Karelian isthmus, artillery duel with activities of scouts. Owing to unfavorable weather, no air action took place."

(Finnish sources have reported fighting on the Soviet side of the border in the general region of Repola and Ukhta and have reported attempts by Finnish ski troops to cut the Murmansk railway, on which far northern Soviet army units depend for supplies.)

lery preparation, had been repulsed one in the extreme northern Petsamo region and the other near Salla on the east central front.

The Finnish daily communique reported there was nothing new on the other fronts, including the Karelian Isthmus where the Russians have been digging in after unsuccessful assaults on the Mannerheim defense line.

Scandinavian newspapers described a "sled tank," which Finnish troops have captured on the eastern front recently, as "Stalin's secret weapon," but said the Finns discounted its usefulness.

The speedy tanks had an armored body mounted on skiis and driven by an airplane motor and propeller. Its light armor, difficult steering and non-adaptability to broken terrain were said by the Finns to be weaknesses, however.

Airplane Alters War Relief Task, Hoover Declares

New York, Jan. 11 (Special)—Not only have the mechanics of war changed drastically since 1918, according to Herbert Hoover, chairman of the Finnish Relief Fund, but they have changed the problem of relief also.

"The airplane as a weapon of war has completely changed the problem of war relief," he asserted, "for it has driven whole populations from their homes and cities. In Finland, over 70 percent of the population of some cities has had to be evacuated, involving the enormous task of suddenly providing food, shelter, clothing and transportation for all these people.

"I have long dreaded the day of war and the use of bombers against women and children. Today we see their dread results in all its naked tragedy."

Their simultaneous opposition to Soviet Russia's advance into Finland is another point linking the policies of the two governments. The United States sent money to Finland. Italy sent airplanes. Both indulged in some outspoken talk about Russia.

Italy suspended her Trans-Atlantic steamship service when the war broke out, but resumed it to the United States. The maritime commission recently authorized the largest American liners, Manhattan and Washington, to operate on a new line from New York to Italy.

Miss Watts is well known in this city, having been a frequent visitor of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Lowndes.

Program Is Discussed

The committee women and leaders of Girl Scout Troop No. 4, discussed the troop's program for 1940 yesterday afternoon at Girl Scout Headquarters, Greene street.

The leader, Mrs. Peter William Smith, proposed a day's outing to New Germany as the first of a series of short trips to be taken by the troop. It is also announced by Mrs. Smith that a short radio play entitled, "Alice in Cookieland," will be presented by girls of Troop No. 4 February 12 over station WTBO.

Plans were disclosed for inspection by the troop of local places of interest during the coming year. Consultants will be invited to address the girls on subjects related with work being done by them. Plans were also made for a rummage sale to be held in the spring at the First Presbyterian church lecture hall, Washington street. A definite date for this will be announced later.

Margaret-Smith

"The Authority on Authorities"

DO WHAT HE WANTS

IF YOUR partner, who showed general weakness in the bidding, eventually doubles the opponents' contract, you know he is counting mainly on his holding of trumps, especially if you are short of them. Your job during the defense, then, is to help protect him from being end-played by the declarer. One way to help him is by leading through the declarer a suit which both he and your partner can ruff, if such a condition has developed.

(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

East bid 1-Heart to start this deal, South 1-Spade, North 2-Clubs, East 2-Hearts, South 3-Diamonds, East 3-Hearts and then North 3-Spades, which West doubled. East overtook the heart K lead with the A, led the Q and then the J. South ruffed with the 8 and West overruffed with the 10. He returned the diamond 2 to the A.

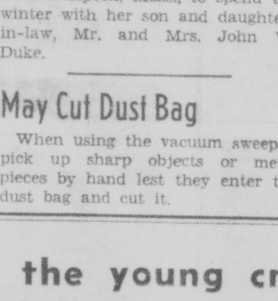

Here was where East slipped. If he led another heart, West would have been sure to get two more trump tricks, setting the contract two. But he returned his diamond 9. The declarer took that, cashed the spade A, ran two more diamonds, collected the two top clubs, then led the spade 9 from dummy, playing the 3. West won this with his J, then had to lead from his spade Q-5 into declarer's K-6.

East should have read his partner as having at least five trumps, as if declarer held six he would have rebid them before showing diamonds. Though a fourth round of hearts might have furnished a ruff and discard for the declarer, that danger was not so great as the one of jeopardizing his partner's trump holding by not leading them.

Returning hearts then would have set the contract two tricks instead of one.

Serious Problem Of Married Life Calls for Answers

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Every marriage is an individual proposition. A man who has every quality which makes for good fortune is held back by some weak, foolish woman, a human handicap.

Splendid coureagous women with the capacity for love and the gifts which make for genuine success are tied to weak, inefficient men—spineless creatures who are synonymns of failure.

Curiously enough, these mismated creatures often love each other devotedly. Question, what's to be done? Should the gifted go through life with a clod which retards, or break the bonds in the hope of making a better choice, only to miss the weak creature who in his or her way has the gift of making the stronger life partner happy?

Interesting Letter

This eternal question is again raised by a highly interesting letter which comes from a woman correspondent:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am married to a man I love dearly. He is everything any woman could desire. He gives me his pay check every week. He never looks at another woman. He will help with the housework. Yet I'm not happy.

"When we were married, our joint salaries amounted to $50.00 a week, and we were very comfortable. Then came the realization that I was not living the kind of life I had hoped for. I wanted children to stay home and take care of them, and there was little chance of advancement where my husband worked.

"He studied for three different Civil Service examinations, but was unable to pass any of them. He then decided to take up another course, which cost a considerable sum of money. Realizing the expense, my parents invited us to live with them until my husband could get a start, which he has never succeeded in doing. He has an inferiority complex, is shy, distrustful of himself, and does not make a good impression, though he is absolutely conscientious and faithful.

"I often put in nine and a half and ten hours a day on my job. I've tried to be forceful with him, and told him I would quit. He gets up early and works 'til late, trying to get a job but never succeeding. He begs me to be patient, but I have been tragically patient. It's not that he is lazy, because when he has a chance he will do the hardest kind of work. But he is just ineffectual.

"I don't want much, Miss Fairfax, only some sense of security for myself and for the children I hope that God may bless us with. DESPAIRING WIFE."

Deeply Maternal

It would be so easy to say keep on trying in the hope that your husband would overcome that constitutional weakness, that sense of self-distrust, which prevents an employer from recognizing that he's the faithful plodding type, which makes him worthy of his hire.

In her heart this woman is deeply maternal, and this ineffectual man who tries but never succeeds appeals to her maternal instinct. He is more her child than her husband. If she were to divorce him, how would the separation affect her? Because, in spite of everything, one realizes she loves him.

I shall be very glad to have my correspondents write and tell me how they would handle this problem if it were their own.

Sit Up and Take Notice!

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF THE Young Person in your family circle trails about in a slouchy manner, don't snarl, "for goodness sake! stand straight." Won't do a bit of good. She's being arty, like the other girls. She has been to fashion shows, observed some of the mannequins who slumped in the chest, plopped out the tummy and looked as if they were about to die of something or other.

Lead her to understand, if you can, that without good posture she is likely, in future years, to have a figure like a davenport. That may throw a scare into her dizzy little mind. Tell her that when she stands upright the muscles are on a tension, holding the frame in perfect symmetry, which means that she will develop a fine figure and a graceful silhouette. More than that, by perfect carriage she will make the $10.75 bargain frock look like one that cost ten times as much. T'sn't what you wear; it is how you wear it. The girl who has splendor of carriage looks better in a gingham dress than does the sloppy-weather girl in gold brocade.

When posture fails the shoulders are rounded, the waist thickens, the lines of the back are ugly.

Keep the backbone stretched full length when sitting, standing or walking. Keep the abdomen flat. Breathe deeply for development of the chest and normal breasts. No rigidity; just spirit and snap.

With skirts as short as kilts, you can't tuck your knees under your draperies and hide your little footies. For that reason you must sit pretty.

Sit far back in the chair; sit on the edge and you'll look as if you were about to leap up and run away. Cross the ankles if you like, but not the knees. Keep the head balanced; that practice will give you a pleasing neck line and good chin pose. Compose the hands. Fidgity hands drive people crazy.

Grace and good posture begin in the mind. If you are to appear lovely, you must have a feeling and appreciation of beauty.

Something of a Record

Bowling Green, Ky. (AP)—Although Mr. and Mrs. Boone Hudson have six sons, three daughters, ten grandsons, one granddaughter, one great-grandson and one great granddaughter, there has been only one death in the entire family. A son-in-law died recently. The Hudsons have been married 53 years.

"Americanity"

San Francisco (AP)—To replace the isms now current, Dr. Francis M. Kercheville of the University of New Mexico suggests a new word: Americanity. He told fellow members of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish the term might well express "the genuine spirit common to all the Americas."

Sweden, now pacifist, produced those conquerors and military genfuses, King Charles XII and Gustavus Adolphus.

tess and sweet companion of those quiet days I was fortunate to spend in your city. To me, she was Cumberland and I cannot see your shopping streets, the bridge beside the Algonquin, the roads leading out to the countryside or any of your familiar scenes except as a background for Momo.

"This was the name they gave her, the brood of youngsters that she brought up in her home; these children and grandchildren she reared with that same care that she showered even on the little yellow chicks that she brought in to count upon a warm blanket spread on her kitchen table. I can see her now, a big woman with the smile of angels and hair as white as the purity of her soul and the deep conviction of her faith.

"She was a Christian Scientist. In a coma for three quarters of an hour until death came, ten minutes before the final darkening, she opened her eyes to repeat the Scientific Statement of Being, a prayer that rings with faith in deliverance from all pain and hope for life eternal. The dread cancer that at away her flesh, could not, even in these last agonizing moments, consume the intense aliveness of her soul.

"She loved life. She didn't want to leave it. During at least five years as she neared the end her pain was continuous and yet she liked nothing better than to sit downstairs with her family and join them in their conversation. She loved music. She enjoyed nothing better than to display the hundreds of photographs she treasured of her large and adored family. She wrote letters regularly to all of them right up to the last week.

"What a card player she was! Night after night we would sit and play her favorite game "Hearts"—and she was good. I'd never be her partner. She enjoyed beating me, too much. She did it often too. In fact the only times I won, some mild trickery accomplished it and she would berate me roundly for it. But she'd always end with a forgiving smile that I'd give a lot to see today.

"God bless Elizabeth Ritchey and bless Cumberland because she loved you.

"Last year she came to New York by automobile with one of her sons. She stopped with her granddaughter, my wife, and our home seemed to be younger and gayer for the presence of this woman of seventy-five years. She had so much fun watching the young people dance, listening to them talk, reading our books. Then one night, I had to take a party to the Empire State Building. Jestingly, I said:

"'Want to go along, Momo?'

"'Wild horses couldn't stop me', she replied.

"I didn't know that it could be done, but she did it. We bundled her in the car, sped down Fifth Avenue and up to the Empire State Building around eleven at night. It was late. The attendants were tired. But her smile turned the clock back for them.

"Some kind of magic was invoked and the building's night manager rolled out a wheel chair. She had already walked the equivalent of two city blocks to reach the elevators in that massive lobby—farther probably than she had walked for many years.

"Something was driving her. Something stronger than youth—the thing that makes my heart do homage as they carry her to rest in Cumberland today. She had a rare courage—more than courage—a thing I cannot name, but can only admire with awe and reverence.

"Well, we went up in the elevator to the observatory on the eighty-sixth floor and she stayed almost an hour. We had to let her inspect the jeweled night-tapestry of New York from every angle of the windowed terrace. Then she asked if we couldn't go higher. She had heard that there was a small steel-ribbed tower on the hundred and second story. There was, but we hadn't told her about it. We felt the strain of any more skyscraper exploring might be too much.

"But, no. She had to reach the highest spot. She wanted to feel she had been to the top and seen this muddled world from the tallest place on it."

We took her up. I can't erase the recollection of her thrilled joy at knowing she had done this thing that she could tell her folks about back home. I remember, though, that when I asked her what she thought about her experience, she said:

"That was the only place in New York that the air smelled clean. Give me Cumberland."

So give her Cumberland. And give her back to Cumberland's earth that she knew so well and loved so dearly. She was one of your great souls, mind you. You may have known her and I am sorry for you if you didn't. You would sense the charm of your city better if you had seen it reflected in her eyes. You would have understood life a bit better, too, for she had so many of its secrets in the kindly lines of her face. No sorrows were there, though of sorrow she had known much.

Sorrow could have made no mark on that brow that was all sympathy and friendship. Death, I am sure, shall not leave a mark either. The depth of her soul, the sweetness of her nature, must surely endure untouched as her beloved hills and valleys will endure.

Accept her then, Cumberland hills and valleys, your sky she loved, your trees, your river, your winding streets. Accept her and keep her memory fresh for she is of your breeding and a part of your destiny. To her you were a heaven on earth that she had a part in fashioning. Let us hope that heaven itself is fashioned well enough to find a worthy place for Momo, dear mother-spirit, dear friend, dear guardian of a happy home.

America, like Cumberland, has been enriched by her tenancy on this earth which will keep her and sustain her soul and shelter her from any ill until time itself is over.

Robbers Steal $4,000

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP)—Three men robbed the University of Chicago bursar's office of about $4,500 Tuesday—and only a few of the 100 students, instructors and employes present were aware of the holdup.

Albert F. Cotton, acting bursar said the robbers took the money from the office where students cash checks and pay tuition fees.

Two robbers guarded Harry Benner, 21, of Chicago, a senior student employed as a floorman. The third, displaying a pistol, went back through the cages and scooped the money into a brief case after warning five stenographers not to touch the telephones.

Glands that Mold The Adolescent Are Discussed

Thyroid Increases Nearly Three Times in Weight, Physician Declares

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The endocrine glands, which consist of the thyroid gland in the neck, the pituitary gland in the head, the adrenals, the pancreatic cells of internal secretion, and the reproductive glands, are, with the exception of the pancreatic glands, rather small in infancy and early childhood.

At the period of adolescence, when rapid growth begins, they also take on an accelerated development. The thyroid gland increases nearly three times in weight between the ages of 10 and 15. So probably does the pituitary gland. The reproductive glands, of course, show the most striking evidence of activity; in fact, this activity conditions the entire life and mental outlook of the adolescent. But the thymus gland, which is in the chest, at this time practically disappears.

Concerned With Growth

All these changes are concerned with growth. The pituitary, thyroid and reproductive glands especially have an influence over growth in heighth. The pituitary and reproductive glands are entirely concerned with the development of maturity.

It is axiomatic in physiology that when unusual and active growth occurs, it does not always stay under control. The activity of the endocrine glands in adolescence, therefore, may be exaggerated and in rare instances their activity may be reduced.

In the case of the thyroid gland, overgrowth or overactivity can easily be seen as an enlargement at the base of the neck. Certain communities are called "goiter communities," and in these regions this adolescent enlargement may be seen in a very large proportion of the population. Preventive measures in these communities have been adopted for some time.

Problem Created

All of these disturbances and changes create a phychological problem, of which every parent and school teacher is aware. I do not intend to go into the psychology of the adolescent here. It is too large a subject and I am not sure that I have any wisdom on the subject. To take care of an adolescent boy or girl who is in trouble is a life-sized problem.

Remember, however, you parents and teachers who deal with these children, that certain parts of their personality may entirely lag behind other phases of their development.

I have before me the specific record of a boy whose chronological age is between thirteen and fourteen; his anatomical age is between fifteen and sixteen; his physiological age is between thirteen and fourteen; his mental age is between sixteen and seventeen; his emotional age is between seven and eight, and his social age is between ten and eleven. With such immaturity, it is easy to see that we are up against a real problem.

Questions and Answers

J. B. H.: "Would you tell me the elements in coffee which are reputedly harmful, why they are so and what their effects may be on the person using it? Would coffee contribute to high blood pressure, heart or arterial troubles, or be the cause of it, or nervousness or tension, this in a person (woman) around sixty or so?"

Answer—The primary physiological effect of coffee is to increase the heart beat and increases the flow of blood through solid organs such as the kidneys, brain and heart muscles. It is this effect on the brain which causes sleeplessness. It is this effect on the kidneys which causes increased urination following the use of coffee. Its effect on the heart muscle is good in people over middle age. If not used in excess, it does no harm. It does not raise blood pressure. It may cause nervousness when used excessively.

If the president and vice-president die, the secretary of state succeeds to the United States presidency.

Thyroid Increases Nearly Three Times in Weight, Physician Declares

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The endocrine glands, which consist of the thyroid gland in the neck, the pituitary gland in the head, the adrenals, the pancreatic cells of internal secretion, and the reproductive glands, are, with the exception of the pancreatic glands, rather small in infancy and early childhood.

At the period of adolescence, when rapid growth begins, they also take on an accelerated development. The thyroid gland increases nearly three times in weight between the ages of 10 and 15. So probably does the pituitary gland. The reproductive glands, of course, show the most striking evidence of activity; in fact, this activity conditions the entire life and mental outlook of the adolescent. But the thymus gland, which is in the chest, at this time practically disappears.

Concerned With Growth

All these changes are concerned with growth. The pituitary, thyroid and reproductive glands especially have an influence over growth in heighth. The pituitary and reproductive glands are entirely concerned with the development of maturity.

It is axiomatic in physiology that when unusual and active growth occurs, it does not always stay under control. The activity of the endocrine glands in adolescence, therefore, may be exaggerated and in rare instances their activity may be reduced.

In the case of the thyroid gland, overgrowth or overactivity can easily be seen as an enlargement at the base of the neck. Certain communities are called "goiter communities," and in these regions this adolescent enlargement may be seen in a very large proportion of the population. Preventive measures in these communities have been adopted for some time.

FBI Will Assist in Trying To Solve Murder of Mrs. Law

Aberdeen, Wash., Jan. 11 (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation has entered the mysterious slaying case of Mrs. Dick Law, wife of a CIO labor leader, because of a possible connection with the kidnap-murder of young Charles Mattson.

Prosecutor Stanley Krause said the FBI would help local and state authorities in efforts to solve the death of Mrs. Law, bludgeoned and stabbed in her home last Friday night.

At Seattle, however, Special Agent R. C. Suran said none of his FBI men had been detailed to the case in the absence of evidence of a federal law violation. He said the FBI laboratory facilities had been offered to Aberdeen officers.

College Students Told To Beware of Labels

Oberlin, O., Jan. 15 (AP)—William M. Leiserson, member of the National Labor Relations Board, has advised Oberlin college students to beware of "labels."

"A few years ago I was called a 'radical' and a 'Communist,'" he said in a speech. "Now I find myself in the curious position of being a 'conservative' and even a 'reactionary.'

"Many persons are named by these terms and we think we know something about them. We forget a name is a mere convenience."

Labor Leader Indicted As a Tax Dodger

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP)—A federal grand jury indicted William Bioff, 41, on an income tax evasion charge. Bioff is spokesman for most of the movies' organized labor groups.

The indictment charged Bioff reported an income of $5,720 in 1936 on which he paid a tax of $105.92, but that his actual income that year was $33,573.25 on which a tax of $4,384.93 should have been paid; and that in 1937, his income was actually $176,416.38 on which a tax of $80,250.49 should have been paid, but that he reported only $7,205 and paid a tax of $193.08.

Bioff's attorneys, Michael G. Luddy and George M. Breslin, said the labor leader would surrender tomorrow.

Navy To Obtain News Of Alien Warships

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP) — The navy is preparing to extend materially its system of gathering information on foreign warships and international power politics.

Officials state that arrangements have been made to station a naval attache in Stockholm to relay first-hand information on developments in Finland's war with Russia and in the Baltic generally.

Another is to be assigned to Siam, where the office of Naval Intelligence has no direct representation.

Still others are to be sent to some South American and Caribbean capitals which figure in hemisphere defense plans.

Brian Bell Will Speak at Dinner Of Touchdown Club

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP) — The Touchdown Club announces that Brian Bell, chief of the Washington Bureau of the Associated Press, will be the principal speaker at its annual dinner here Jan. 16.

Bell covered every phase of sports for the Associated Press before he entered the executive ranks of the Press Association fifteen years ago, and still writes a story now and then to keep his hand in.

The Touchdown Club's awards for the 1939 football season will go to Nile Kinnick, of Iowa; Ken Kavanaugh, of Louisiana State, and Don Herring, of Princeton.

Coach Eddie Anderson, of Iowa—voted by sports writers the "coach of the year"—will accompany Kinnick to the dinner.

Russia Is Building New Canal System

Moscow, Jan. 11 (AP)—Socviet Russia is rushing to completion a system of canals which would enable shipment of oil from the Black sea port of Batum to Danzig through White Russia, a dispatch from Minsk to the newpsaper Pravda states.

China Sends $3,750 To Stricken Turkey

Chungking, Jan. 11 (AP) — Federated Chinese Charities announces through Finance Minister H. H. King that it is donating 50,000 Chinese dollars (about $3,750) to the Turkish minister, Emin Sipahi, for relief of Turkish earthquake victims.

Kate Smith Hour On Radio Includes Miss Lawrence

One-Act Play Will Take Place of Ellery Queen Drama

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

New York, Jan. 11—Gertrude Lawrence of the stage is to be the special guest of the Kate Smith hour on WABC-CBS Friday night. She replaces the previously announced Ellery Queen drama in brief, which has been postponed until next week. Miss Lawrence will do a one-act play "Appointment with Destiny", the program starting at 8 o'clock.

Series Returns

The series, "Human Nature In Action", will return to WEAF-NBC using the fifteen-minute weekly spot at 10:45. Dr. Harold D. Caswell conducts the broadcast, which includes talk and drama about humanity and its reactions.

MBS at 4:30 is putting on a special from North Carolina State College in demonstration of a bugless potato plant, newly developed.

The WJZ-NBC Music Appreciation Hour, Dr. Walter Damrosch conducting, will be on WJZ-NBC as usual at 2.

"Yesterday's Children," WJZ-NBC at 7:30, has Fannie Hurst as guest with "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as the outstanding book of her childhood memories.

Mystery Drama

The First Nighter is to do a mystery drama, "The Hypnotic Power of Doctor Brand" for WABC-CBS at 9:30.

Discussion: WJZ-NBC 10, Rep. Wright Pitman on "The Chain Store Bill". . . . European broadcast schedule, including comment: NBC 8 a. m.; WABC-CBS 8 a. m., 6:30, 8:55, 11 p. m.; MBS 9, 10:20; WJZ-NBC 9:30; WEAF-NBC 9:45, Norman Thomas on "America Faces 1940"; MBS: 11 Count H. Procope, Finnish Ambassador.

FBI Will Assist in Trying To Solve Murder of Mrs. Law

Aberdeen, Wash., Jan. 11 (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation has entered the mysterious slaying case of Mrs. Dick Law, wife of a CIO labor leader, because of a possible connection with the kidnap-murder of young Charles Mattson.

Prosecutor Stanley Krause said the FBI would help local and state authorities in efforts to solve the death of Mrs. Law, bludgeoned and stabbed in her home last Friday night.

At Seattle, however, Special Agent R. C. Suran said none of his FBI men had been detailed to the case in the absence of evidence of a federal law violation. He said the FBI laboratory facilities had been offered to Aberdeen officers.

College Students Told To Beware of Labels

Oberlin, O., Jan. 15 (AP)—William M. Leiserson, member of the National Labor Relations Board, has advised Oberlin college students to beware of "labels."

"A few years ago I was called a 'radical' and a 'Communist,'" he said in a speech. "Now I find myself in the curious position of being a 'conservative' and even a 'reactionary.'

"Many persons are named by these terms and we think we know something about them. We forget a name is a mere convenience."

Navy To Obtain News Of Alien Warships

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP) — The navy is preparing to extend materially its system of gathering information on foreign warships and international power politics.

Officials state that arrangements have been made to station a naval attache in Stockholm to relay firsthand information on developments in Finland's war with Russia and in the Baltic generally.

Another is to be assigned to Siam, where the office of Naval Intelligence has no direct representation.

Labor Leader Indicted As a Tax Dodger

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP)—A federal grand jury indicted William Bioff, 41, on an income tax evasion charge. Bioff is spokesman for most of the movies' organized labor groups.

The indictment charged Bioff reported an income of $5,720 in 1936 on which he paid a tax of $105.92, but that his actual income that year was $33,573.25 on which a tax of $4,384.93 should have been paid; and that in 1937, his income was actually $176,416.38 on which a tax of $80,250.49 should have been paid, but that he reported only $7,205 and paid a tax of $193.08.

Bioff's attorneys, Michael G. Luddy and George M. Breslin, said the labor leader would surrender tomorrow.

Brian Bell Will Speak at Dinner Of Touchdown Club

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP) — The Touchdown Club announces that Brian Bell, chief of the Washington Bureau of the Associated Press, will be the principal speaker at its annual dinner here Jan. 16.

Bell covered every phase of sports for the Associated Press before he entered the executive ranks of the Press Association fifteen years ago, and still writes a story now and then to keep his hand in.

The Touchdown Club's awards for the 1939 football season will go to Nile Kinnick, of Iowa; Ken Kavanaugh, of Louisiana State, and Don Herring, of Princeton.

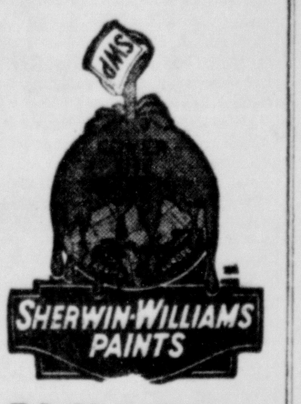

Coach Eddie Anderson, of Iowa—voted by sports writers the "coach of the year"—will accompany Kinnick to the dinner.

Russia Is Building New Canal System

Moscow, Jan. 11 (AP)—Socviet Russia is rushing to completion a system of canals which would enable shipment of oil from the Black sea port of Batum to Danzig through White Russia, a dispatch from Minsk to the newpsaper Pravda states.

China Sends $3,750 To Stricken Turkey

Chungking, Jan. 11 (AP) — Federated Chinese Charities announces through Finance Minister H. H. King that it is donating 50,000 Chinese dollars (about $3,750) to the Turkish minister, Emin Sipahi, for relief of Turkish earthquake victims.

Germans Warned To Save Money or Accept Rationing

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Jan. 11 (AP)—Germans have been warned that they must "voluntarily reduce purchases" of unrationed articles or force would be used to compel them to spend less of their income.

The warning was issued by Das Schwarze Korps, organ of the Hitler Elite Guards, which added that one plan under consideration to force workers to save is that of paying wages partly in certificates, which would not come due for several years.

Authorities have been seeking a method to halt what is considered to be a wave of excessive buying of unrationed articles so that industries producing these articles may work for direct war purposes. By reducing the amount of money people have to spend, it is reasoned, the government automatically would stop such buying and thus make available more cash to pay for the war.

Das Schwarze Korps said that the Nazi state was seeking to reduce income in the same measure as it is considered necessary to reduce purchasing power. It was made clear that force would be used if discipline failed.

Referring to Nazi expenditures for armaments and other purposes to increase German world prestige, the paper said: "reduction of purchasing power is the entrance price each individual is paying for Germany's entrance into the world constellation of powers."

The rush to buy anything not rationed is attributed partly to a psychological reaction, to shortage fears and to fears of inflation caused by issuance of additional paper bills and small coins in aluminum.

One woman worker who spent her savings for unnecessary artioles said "the appearance of the aluminum coins was a signal for me."

Earl Lilly Indicted

Hinton, W. Va., Jan. 15 (AP)—Earl Lilly, 24, was indicted by the Summers county grand jury here in the fatal stabbing of Matthew Lee Keaton, 28-year-old farmer at Pipestem Christmas Eve.

It is an ancient custom in Persia to present a bag of flour to friends and relatives on their birthdays.

Missing Girl Found, Says She Is Married

Pittsburgh, Jan. 11 (AP) — The mysterious disappearance last December of curly, red-haired Anna Hurchinson, 18, from her Canton, O., home was solved Wednesday with her discovery in a rooming house here.

Detectives Joseph Baker of Pittsburgh and Henry Armstrong of Canton said they found her with Don Stone, 28, also of Canton, whom she said she married in Youngstown last November 25, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Edna Stone.

The detectives and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents questioned the three late into the night regarding a letter received by the girl's mother, Mrs. Anna Marshall, and stepfather, Angelo Marshall, demanding $2,000 if they cared to have their daughter "returned alive."

$10,000,000 Credit Extended to Norway

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—The United States has extended credits of $10,000,000 to Norway—a step widely regarded as another effort to Bolster Scandinavia in the face of the Soviet Russian invasion of Finland.

Officials compared it with $10,000,000 advances to Finland shortly after Russia moved against her.

Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator, said the credits to Norway were being established by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Export-Import Bank for the purchase in this country of agricultural products, manufactured goods and other supplies.

The northern part of Norway is only about twenty-five miles from the peace-time border between Russia and Finland.

Officials recalled President Roosevelt's message of Oct. 18 to the King of Sweden when the kings of Norway, Sweden and Denmark and the president of Finland met at Stockholm to consider Russia's demands on Finland. The message was a warm statement of American sympathy and moral support for the Scandinavian nations.

Linda Hayes Wins Divorce from Germano

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP)—Londa Hayes of the movies ,testifying that her husband dragged her across the floor by her hair, won a divorce in superior court.

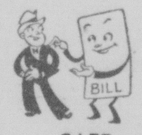

She also said that Dominic J. Germano "treated me so that I became a nervous wreck." The Germanos were married in December, 1936.

Germans Warned To Save Money or Accept Rationing

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Jan. 11 (AP)—Germans have been warned that they must "voluntarily reduce purchases" of unrationed articles or force would be used to compel them to spend less of their income.

The warning was issued by Das Schwarze Korps, organ of the Hitler Elite Guards, which added that one plan under consideration to force workers to save is that of paying wages partly in certificates which would not come due for several years.

Authorities have been seeking a method to halt what is considered to be a wave of excessive buying of unrationed articles so that industries producing these articles may work for direct war purposes. By reducing the amount of money people have to spend, it is reasoned, the government automatically would stop such buying and thus make available more cash to pay for the war.

Das Schwarze Korps said that the Nazi state was seeking to reduce income in the same measure as it is considered necessary to reduce purchasing power. It was made clear that force would be used if discipline failed.

Referring to Nazi expenditures for armaments and other purposes to increase German world prestige, the paper said: "reduction of purchasing power is the entrance price each individual is paying for Germany's entrance into the world constellation of powers."

The rush to buy anything not rationed is attributed partly to a psychological reaction, to shortage fears and to fears of inflation caused by issuance of additional paper bills and small coins in aluminum.

One woman worker who spent her savings for unnecessary articles said "the appearance of the aluminum coins was a signal for me."

Earl Lilly Indicted

Hinton, W. Va., Jan. 15 (AP)—Earl Lilly, 24, was indicted by the Summers county grand jury here in the fatal stabbing of Matthew Lee Keaton, 28-year-old farmer at Pipestem Christmas Eve.

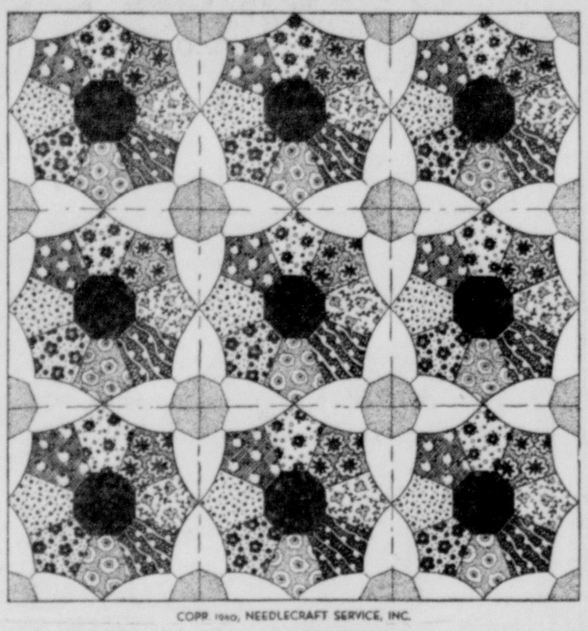

It is an ancient custom in Persia to present a bag of flour to friends and relatives on their birthdays.

FALSE TEETH

That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wabbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

Missing Girl Found, Says She Is Married

Pittsburgh, Jan. 11 (AP) — The mysterious disappearance last December of curly, red-haired Anna Hurchinson, 18, from her Canton, O., home was solved Wednesday with her discovery in a rooming house here.

Detectives Joseph Baker of Pittsburgh and Henry Armstrong of Canton said they found her with Don Stone, 28, also of Canton, whom she said she married in Youngstown last November 25, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Edna Stone.

The detectives and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents questioned the three late into the night regarding a letter received by the girl's mother, Mrs. Anna Marshall, and stepfather, Angelo Marshall, demanding $2,000 if they cared to have their daughter "returned alive."

News Will Forward Funds to the Finns

$10,000,000 Credit Extended to Norway

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—The United States has extended credits of $10,000,000 to Norway—a step widely regarded as another effort to Bolster Scandinavia in the face of the Soviet Russian invasion of Finland.

Officials compared it with $10,000,000 advances to Finland shortly after Russia moved against her.

Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator, said the credits to Norway were being established by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Export-Import Bank for the purchase in this country of agricultural products, manufactured goods and other supplies.

The northern part of Norway is only about twenty-five miles from the peace-time border between Russia and Finland.

Officials recalled President Roosevelt's message of Oct. 18 to the King of Sweden when the kings of Norway, Sweden and Denmark and the president of Finland met at Stockholm to consider Russia's demands on Finland. The message was a warm statement of American sympathy and moral support for the Scandinavian nations.

Linda Hayes Wins Divorce from Germano

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP)—Londa Hayes of the movies ,testifying that her husband dragged her across the floor by her hair, won a divorce in superior court.

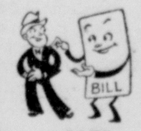

She also said that Dominic J. Germano "treated me so that I became a nervous wreck." The Germanos were married in December, 1936.

Concentration Is Needed in Child's Training Habits

Parents Should Read to Children Soon as They Will Listen

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

I can think of no better training in habits of concentration in the child than for parents to read to him, beginning as soon as he will listen, before he is two years old, and continuing past the time he enters school.

Begin with a well-illustrated book which has little reading matter, such as "Johnny Crow's Garden," by Leslie Brooks, or a well-pictured book of nursery rhymes. The tot looks at the picture as you read about it. Gradually what he hears you read connects up in his little mind with what he sees. What you read enriches what he sees in the picture.

Quit When He Squirms

As soon as he grows restless and wishes to squirm and run about, close the book and put it away. You don't cultivate good habits of concentration if you read while the youngster is on the move. After several weeks of experience at listening while he sees a picture, he gradually will learn to wait and listen while you read from a page without pictures.

Since one does not need to know much in order to read to the young child, we dads can do it. It is our chance to win the child's companionship and relieve the weary mother.

As we read to the little child we fire his imagination, give him something to think about and talk about. We also give him excellent patterns of language.

The child who has been read to from infancy usually has easy, forceful speech later at home and school. As we read to him he hears better language patterns than he would hear if we told the story, and he hears them in exactly the same way over and over again. Indeed, if we should miscall a single word, he will correct us.

Encourages Reading

We thus motivate him to want to learn to read so he can get such precious stories from the book for himself. Besides, the book from which we read these stories takes on a personality and the child grows tender and careful in the handling of this book.

The older child can read to the younger child, causing both to feel more kindly towards each other. The older child can improve his reading skill with this practice.

Nothing makes me happier than to learn from many parents who read this column that they have been reading to their young children. Judging from the letters I receive, thousands of my readers are reading to their tots every day. Indeed, many of my readers have written me, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it, to ask for a list of good books to read to the baby and young child. Others may have this list in like fashion.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. What about tickling children?

A. Some adults, even parents, and older children, for self-amusement, tickle the young child. In doing so they excite the child unduly, rendering him less stable emotionally, and visiting on him a great deal of unhappiness. Don't fool yourself. Even though the tickled child may laugh heartily, he is liable to be under tension.

Q. I once tried having my five-year-old boy sit on a chair to punish him. He said he liked it and I gave it up as ineffectual.

A. Your child outsmarted you. Resume this punishment, make the time definite, say twenty minutes, and for the same offense apply exactly the same penalty. Quit talking and arguing.

Impersonations Legal Now in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP)—It's legal now in Los Angeles to impersonate a member of the opposite sex—but only under a special police permit.

The Police Commission modified its prohibition of such impersonations after Julian Eltinge, famous female impersonator, complained the restriction interfered with the work of actors.

The commission also ordered that all entertainers in beer halls or cocktail bars keep at least four feet away from the customers.

Concentration Is Needed in Child's Training Habits

Parents Should Read to Children Soon as They Will Listen

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

I can think of no better training in habits of concentration in the child than for parents to read to him, beginning as soon as he will listen, before he is two years old, and continuing past the time he enters school.

Begin with a well-illustrated book which has little reading matter, such as "Johnny Crow's Garden," by Leslie Brooks, or a well-pictured book of nursery rhymes. The tot looks at the picture as you read about it. Gradually what he hears you read connects up in his little mind with what he sees. What you read enriches what he sees in the picture.

Quit When He Squirms

As soon as he grows restless and wishes to squirm and run about, close the book and put it away. You don't cultivate good habits of concentration if you read while the youngster is on the move. After several weeks of experience at listening while he sees a picture, he gradually will learn to wait and listen while you read from a page without pictures.

Since one does not need to know much in order to read to the young child, we dads can do it. It is our chance to win the child's companionship and relieve the weary mother.

As we read to the little child we fire his imagination, give him something to think about and talk about. We also give him excellent patterns of language.

The child who has been read to from infancy usually has easy, forceful speech later at home and school. As we read to him he hears better language patterns than he would hear if we told the story, and he hears them in exactly the same way over and over again. Indeed, if we should miscall a single word, he will correct us.

Encourages Reading

We thus motivate him to want to learn to read so he can get such precious stories from the book for himself. Besides, the book from which we read these stories takes on a personality and the child grows tender and careful in the handling of this book.

The older child can read to the younger child, causing both to feel more kindly towards each other. The older child can improve his reading skill with this practice.

Nothing makes me happier than to learn from many parents who read this column that they have been reading to their young children. Judging from the letters I receive, thousands of my readers are reading to their tots every day. Indeed, many of my readers have written me, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it, to ask for a list of good books to read to the baby and young child. Others may have this list in like fashion.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. What about tickling children?

A. Some adults, even parents, and older children, for self-amusement, tickle the young child. In doing so they excite the child unduly, rendering him less stable emotionally, and visiting on him a great deal of unhappiness. Don't fool yourself. Even though the tickled child may laugh heartily, he is liable to be under tension.

Q. I once tried having my five-year-old boy sit on a chair to punish him. He said he liked it and I gave it up as ineffectual.

A. Your child outsmarted you. Resume this punishment, make the time definite, say twenty minutes, and for the same offense apply exactly the same penalty. Quit talking and arguing.

Impersonations Legal Now in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP)—It's legal now in Los Angeles to impersonate a member of the opposite sex—but only under a special police permit.

The Police Commission modified its prohibition of such impersonations after Julian Eltinge, famous female impersonator, complained the restriction interfered with the work of actors.

The commission also ordered that all entertainers in beer halls or cocktail bars keep at least four feet away from the customers.

U. S. Not To Object to Censor of Mails with Money for Germany

By ANDRUE BERDING

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Although the administration is on record with a "vigorous protest," against British interference with American mails, it will not let its objections be used to promote the passage of checks, money orders and securities to Germany in American postal sacks, thus aiding the Nazis in financing the war.

The note sent to Britain on the subject of the mails said nothing about chits for money. The protest simply refused to admit the right of British authorities to interfere with American mails on the high seas or to censor mail on ships which involuntarily enter British ports.

The writer learns on high authority, however, that the state department does not feel free to object to British search of American mails which contain checks, money orders, drafts, notes and other negotiable instruments destined to Germany.

One reason is that such paper is absolute contraband by both British and German definitions, and by United States description in the World war.

The American note objects to interference with American mails, but says nothing about Britain's right to seize checks, money orders, etc., destined directly or indirectly to Germany. But how are British authorities going to seize the checks, etc., unless they open the mail?

The controversy between the two countries over mail, if it can be called that, seems likely to center on censorship of American private mails addressed to Germany or neutral countries and taken off ships which have involuntarily entered British ports.

In former years the flow of immigrants' remittances from the United States to Germany was heavy; now it is much less (an estimate for 1938 made by a competent official was between $7,500,000 and $10,000,000).

Future Looks Bright To Girl Brick Tosser

Los Angeles, Jan .11 (AP)—The future took on a sunny look for diminutive Patricia Winfrey, 27, although outside the jail it was raining.

She tossed a brick through a window and explained to police it was because the only work she could get was strip-tease dancing. She wanted food and a warm place to sleep.

She was released Wednesday to Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, who lost his parish and was forced to leave England because he Married Wallis Simpson and the Duke of Windsor, and will live with him and his wife until she reestablishes herself.

She must appear in court Monday for sentence and a probation hearing. It appeared this would be a formality.

"I'm so happy I could cry," said Miss Winfrey.

Thief Robbed, He Tells Jersey Judge

Camden, N. J., Jan. 15 (AP)—Roy Moran admitted he stole one electric iron, two men's shirts, two pairs of socks and a five-pound box of candy.

"What did you do with them," asked the judge. "Can you give them back?"

Morgan looked sad.

"Somebody," he said, "stole them all from me."

Councilman Resigns

West Fairview, Pa., Jan. 11 (AP)—Irwin Bretz, head of the Borough council, resigned Tuesday because:

"I didn't want the job in the first place; every night someone called and wanted a family argument settled or complained about ashes dumped in the street, or dogs fighting. I hadn't an enemy in the world before I took the job; now I must have at least fifty."

House Which Straddled State Line Is Razed

Middleburg, Md., Jan. 11 (AP)—A house built in 1812 as a wilderness outpost, straddling the Pennsylvania and Maryland state line, has been razed.

The house belonged to Mrs. Maggie Burger who lived there from October, 1884 until 1927 when she moved to Hagerstown.

The one and a half story house, built of oak and hickory logs, stands partly in Washington county, Maryland, and Franklin county, Pennsylvania.

Its strategic position was capitalized by a sheep stealer, according to legend, back in the early 1800's. When Maryland officers sought to arrest him, he crossed into the kitchen. When Pennsylvania officers went after him he went to the bedroom.

The legend said nothing about what happened when he was sought by both states in concerted action.

The community was known as Spiglersburg when the cabin was built but was changed to Middleburg for the prosaic reason because it is midway between Hagerstown and Greencastle.

Furniture Men Elect Huffard

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP)—J. Hudson Huffard of Bluefield, Va., was elected president of the National Retail Furniture Association Tuesday, succeeding Nathan Sachs of New York City who became chairman of the board.

Huffard said 1939 sales of home furnishings were approximately ten per cent ahead of the previous year. He attributed the increase to a reawakened interest in the home and to "progress made by the industry in meeting demands of fashion and style conscious women." He predicted a continued rise for 1940.

Father Prefers Death To Operation for Baby

Chandler, Okla., Jan. 11 (AP)—The father of a baby girl born with a portion of her brain exposed here refused to permit an operation which might save her life but leave her sub-normal.

Without the operation, physicians informed the father, laborer Ray Calvin, death is certain within two or three weeks.

The baby, a week old today, has a hole about the size of a twenty-five-cent piece in the skull. There is a tumor on the brain at the opening.

Dr. J. W. Adams, attending physician, had suggested that the child's life might be saved if the tumor were removed and the brain covered by pulling the scalp together.

He said later, however, that consulting doctors agreed that the baby would not be normal if it survived.

Civilian Clerks To Help State Police

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP)—Appointment of four civilian clerks to replace uniformed officers at state police substations has been announced by Col. Beverly Ober, state police superintendent.

Those named were R. H. Carter, Jr., Rock Hall; G. H. Channell, Baltimore; W. E. Hopkins, Easton, and T. M. Ward, Crisfield. They will receive $1,200 annually and maintenance. Five other clerks were appointed two weeks ago.

Use of the civilian clerks will release the regular officers from those jobs and allow a larger road patrol, Ober said.

The writer learns on high authority, however, that the state department does not feel free to object to British search of American mails which contain checks, money orders, drafts, notes and other negotiable instruments destined to Germany.

One reason is that such paper is absolute contraband by both British and German definitions, and by United States description in the World war.

The American note objects to interference with American mails, but says nothing about Britain's right to seize checks, money orders, etc., destined directly or indirectly to Germany. But how are British authorities going to seize the checks, etc., unless they open the mail?

The controversy between the two countries over mail, if it can be called that, seems likely to center on censorship of American private mails addressed to Germany or neutral countries and taken off ships which have involuntarily entered British ports.

In former years the flow of immigrants' remittances from the United States to Germany was heavy; now it is much less (an estimate for 1938 made by a competent official was between $7,500,000 and $10,000,000).

Future Looks Bright To Girl Brick Tosser

Los Angeles, Jan .11 (AP)—The future took on a sunny look for diminutive Patricia Winfrey, 27, although outside the jail it was raining.

She tossed a brick through a window and explained to police it was because the only work she could get was strip-tease dancing. She wanted food and a warm place to sleep.

She was released Wednesday to Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, who lost his parish and was forced to leave England because he Married Wallis Simpson and the Duke of Windsor, and will live with him and his wife until she reestablishes herself.

She must appear in court Monday for sentence and a probation hearing. It appeared this would be a formality.

"I'm so happy I could cry," said Miss Winfrey.

Thief Robbed, He Tells Jersey Judge

Camden, N. J., Jan. 15 (AP)—Roy Moran admitted he stole one electric iron, two men's shirts, two pairs of socks and a five-pound box of candy.

"What did you do with them," asked the judge. "Can you give them back?"

Morgan looked sad.

"Somebody," he said, "stole them all from me."

Councilman Resigns

West Fairview, Pa., Jan. 11 (AP)—Irwin Bretz, head of the Borough council, resigned Tuesday because:

"I didn't want the job in the first place; every night someone called and wanted a family argument settled or complained about ashes dumped in the street, or dogs fighting. I hadn't an enemy in the world before I took the job; now I must have at least fifty."

House Which Straddled State Line Is Razed

Middleburg, Md., Jan. 11 (AP)—A house built in 1812 as a wilderness outpost, straddling the Pennsylvania and Maryland state line, has been razed.

The house belonged to Mrs. Maggie Burger who lived there from October, 1884 until 1927 when she moved to Hagerstown.

The one and a half story house, built of oak and hickory logs, stands partly in Washington county, Maryland, and Franklin county, Pennsylvania.

Its strategic position was capitalized by a sheep stealer, according to legend, back in the early 1800's. When Maryland officers sought to arrest him, he crossed into the kitchen. When Pennsylvania officers went after him he went to the bedroom.

The legend said nothing about what happened when he was sought by both states in concerted action.

The community was known as Spigiersburg when the cabin was built but was changed to Middleburg for the prosaic reason because it is midway between Hagerstown and Greencastle.

Furniture Men Elect Huffard

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP)—J. Hudson Huffard of Bluefield, Va., was elected president of the National Retail Furniture Association Tuesday, succeeding Nathan Sachs of New York City who became chairman of the board.

Huffard said 1939 sales of home furnishings were approximately ten per cent ahead of the previous year. He attributed the increase to a reawakened interest in the home and to "progress made by the industry in meeting demands of fashion and style conscious women." He predicted a continued rise for 1940.

Father Prefers Death To Operation for Baby

Chandler, Okla., Jan. 11 (AP)—The father of a baby girl born with a portion of her brain exposed here refused to permit an operation which might save her life but leave her sub-normal.

Without the operation, physicians informed the father, laborer Ray Calvin, death is certain within two or three weeks.

The baby, a week old today, has a hole about the size of a twenty-five-cent piece in the skull. There is a tumor on the brain at the opening.

Dr. J. W. Adams, attending physician, had suggested that the child's life might be saved if the tumor were removed and the brain covered by pulling the scalp together.

He said later, however, that consulting doctors agreed that the baby would not be normal if it survived.

Civilian Clerks To Help State Police

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP)—Appointment of four civilian clerks to replace uniformed officers at state police substations has been announced by Col. Beverly Ober, state police superintendent.

Those named were R. H. Carter, Jr., Rock Hall; G. H. Channell, Baltimore; W. E. Hopkins, Easton, and T. M. Ward, Crisfield. They will receive $1,200 annually and maintenance. Five other clerks were appointed two weeks ago.

Use of the civilian clerks will release the regular officers from those jobs and allow a larger road patrol, Ober said.

Conn Is Seen as Good "Gate" Attraction

amp's Manager inks He Would e Good Opponent

is Plans To Defend His Title Four Times in 1940

e Is Surprised Conn Did ot Knock Cooper Out Wednesday Night

ltimore, Jan. 11—Four championship battles, two of which will held outdoors, are on Joe Louis' ram for the current year, John borough, one of the heavyght titleholder's managers, said y.

he first of the title frays will be ed February 9 in New York's dison Square Garden, with Ar- Godoy, the Chilean, in the llenger's role. Another indoor is scheduled late in March, le the outdoor battles will be in e and September.

ouis, Roxborough and Jack kburn, the Brown Bomber's ner, were here to attend the fifn-round joust between Holman lliams, stablemate and fellowsman of the champion, and is (Kid) Cocoa, of Hartford.

o far as Roxborough and Louis concerned, there'll be no enement for them at Miami.

'Taint 'nuff people down thar to e a good gate," the champion arked.

Prefers Shot At Conn

either Louis or Roxborough ws who will be Joe's opponent March, but the negro titleholder's nager expressed the belief that y Conn would make a suitable onent for his first outdoor title ense.

sked about a return fight with lento and whether he would pre- Conn over Two-Ton Tony, Roxough said: "Conn shapes up as a ter attraction with Joe. Billy bably has more appeal to the fans now than any other big ow. However, he's got to put on e more heft before becoming a l heavyweight contender."

Conn, light-heavyweight champ, scaled only 173½ pounds when defeated Henry Cooper last night Madison Square Garden.

Surprise To Champion

What round did Conn knock 'im in?" Louis asked.

When told Cooper went the full ive rounds, the heavyweight king sed his eyebrows in an inquiring nner.

Humph," Joe said. He fifured nn would make short work of his al. And Blackburn, lightweight r of yesteryear, also expressed prise that Conn didn't win by a ockout.

Louis appeared in fine physical m, and intimated he will need mparatively little strenuous work prepare for defense of his title inst Godby, the South Ameri- n.

Incidentally, the Louis entourage late tonight for Pompton Lakes, Y., where Joe's training camp l be opened Saturday.

Joe now is down to 207 pounds," xborough said.

That shows he does not possess ch excessive poundage, and he l have sixteen boxing days in ich to attain peak form. As a tter of fact, Joe has been indulg- in roadwork for the past three ks in Detroit, so he will have a rd start on his training when gets to Pompton Lakes."

Louis is paying his second visit Baltimore. He appeared here 1938 with a softball team.

For Roxborough, however, the trip es to renew old acquaintances. Yep, been coming to Baltimore and on for a long time," Louis' t said.

Praise For Joe Gans

Once visited the Goldfield, the place of Joe Gans. But I won't l you the date, 'cause that was me time ago. That Gans was a hter for you. A real champ."

Would Joe follow in the steps of er champions and open a public ce, such as a restaurant or sa- n?

Roxborough was quick to answer. Nothing like that," he said.

Louis is a great lover of horses, d when he retires he'll be a mer and operator of a 'dude' nch. Horses are his hobby. But y will be of the show and saddle iety; racing horses are out."

And the champion nodded his approval of the latter statement.

Got three fine saddle horses w," Louis said, "and they're sure e pieces of horse flesh."

How soon Joe will be able to de- e his full time to agricultural uits and the fad of "dude" ching is a matter of conjecture may be late next year or in 1942, right now Louis is not giving ch thought to retiring.

There are some good matches around and when Joe has takcare of this business we'll get und to talk about retiring," Roxough said.

The man who currently is the atest figure in the fight game ated only a ripple of excitement morning as he strode through on Station

By JOHN LARDNER
Released by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

New York, Jan. 11—Some of the boys in the Kauliflowerstrasse the other day were ruminating on the fact that fight managers don't throw punches any more. Only the fighters do.

"And very few of those," added Dumb Dan Morgan dolefully. Mr. Morgan managed Jack Britton through twenty-eight fights with Ted Kid Lewis for the welterweight championship. Mr. Morgan was a better fighter than either of them, according to Morgan's history of boxing, volume II.

"I threw plenty of punches back in those days when I had all my hair," said Mr. Morgan, searching his scalp for the last lock of summer, the ultimate objective of every barber in the neighborhood. "I would sooner fight than eat."

"Dan threw a pretty good punch," admitted Joe Gould, "but, if he missed with the first one, he run like a thief."

"Tut, tut," said Mr. Morgan gently. "Stick to the facts, young man. I used to leave 'em for dead."

A Tribute to Bill Duffy

"Talking about managers who could fight," said Mr. Gould, the pilot of James J. Braddock, Tommy Farr, and Steve Dudas, "my money goes with Bill Duffy. He had the best right I ever seen, and a good left, too."

Mr. Duffy (when in circulation) was the manager of Primo Carnera and other syndicate fighters. Mr. Morgan commented briefly on Mr. Duffy's prowess.

"Tchah!" he said.

"And tchah to you, double," replied Mr. Gould. "Duffy could pick his teeth with guys like you. And Jack Kearns was handy with his dukes, too. He could lick Dempsey when he managed him."

"No, he couldn't," contradict Mr. Morgan. "But he thought he could. I'll admit he thought he could."

At this point, as usual, somebody brought up the name of Harry Pollak, a fight manager of yesteryear who was notoriusly quick on the draw. Mr. Pollak once figured in an episode which causes fight managers to shudder when they think of it. He violated every union rule by fighting for nothing in the presence of a fighter. That sort of thing puts wrong ideas in a fighter's head, and even Mr. Pollak's best friends admit that he acted rashly.

At the time I speak of, Frank Moran, whose right hand was famous as Mary Ann, was training to fight Jess Willard for the heavyweight title. Mr. Moran had a little legal argument with his former manager, Dapper Dan McKetrick, over the division of past spoils, and, when the case came to court, Moran won the decision, thanks to Frankie O'Neil, his lawyer and a former boxing commissioner.

Fighter Gets an Eyeful

The case being closed, all parties concerned repaired to a nearby chop house to talk it over. Mr. McKetrick, the loser, chose a table with his friend, Harry Pollak. They brooded together about the injustice of the world and the thanklessness of fighters in general. Mr. Moran, the thankless fighter, chose another table close by and began to carve a steak with ruthless relish.

"After all I done for him," lamented Mr. McKetrick.

"It's terrible," agreed Mr. Pollak.

At this point, Mr. O'Neil, the winning lawyer, breezed into the joint flushed with victory. He paused at Mr. McKetrick's table to hurl a cheerful taunt.

"We licked you good," he began.

He got no further, for Mr. McKetrick delivered a sitting-standing punch to the belly. Mr. O'Neil promptly knocked Mr. McKetrick into a full tureen of turtle soup, where Dan cautiously remained for thirty-eight seconds (the full manager's count). Meanwhile, forgetting himself, Mr. Pollak arose and whipped a right to Mr. O'Neil's jaw. The attorney fled from the premises.

Mr. McKetrick, hearing the all quiet signal, emerged from his defenses behind the tureen and was shocked to see that Frank Moran, the thankless fighter, was still sitting by, chuckling merrily at the sight of managers fighting for nothing.

"You shouldn't of done it, Harry," he said.

"I know it," said Mr. Pollak, scowling at Moran. "The next time I throw a punch, I will charge that palooka $25 for a seat."

However, the damage was done, and the managers of the present day look back on the whole incident as an instance of the poorest kind of judgment.

"Still, Pollak could fight," mused Dumb Dan Morgan.

"Not like Bill Duffy," said Mr. Gould. "Why, I've seen Duffy—" this was where we came in.

Wrestling Enjoys Great Growth in Eastern Colleges

Pennsylvania Coach Says Southwest Will Hold Sway

Philadelphia, Jan. 11 (AP)—College wrestling is experiencing its greatest growth in the East this year, but the Southwest still reigns supreme in the sport, an official of the National Wrestling Coaches Association reported today.

W. Austin Bishop, University of Pennsylvania coach and executive secretary of the national association, said a survey showed 835 colleges and universities in the nation now support wrestling as compared with an estimated 100 in 1923. He termed the mat game "one of the nation's fastest growing sports in respect to the number of individuals participating."

Pacing the sport's growth, Bishop said, is the three-state area of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey, where a majority of the colleges now support wrestling and such teams as Lehigh, Penn State, Navy and Franklin and Marshall annually rank with the best in the country.

Material Divided

But Bishop held little hope that the East will ever break the domination of Southwestern rivals—led by Oklahoma A. and M.

"The material is too well divided in the East, for one thing," he explained. "Where one of the many eastern colleges may get even two state schoolboy champions on its squad, the Oklahoma schoolboy output is concentrated in three or four institutions such as Oklahoma A. and M., Oklahoma U., and Southwestern Teachers with the result that the Southwestern colleges have the jump on the East from the start."

Popularity of wrestling has increased, the Penn coach said, through such factors as standardization or rules, increased high school participation, virtual elimination of permanent injuries and a revival of club competition sponsored by the A.A.U.

Bishop added, however, that the sport has lagged in spectator interest. That's because wrestling fans usually must be experts to appreciate the sport, he said—"but once a wrestling fan, always one."

Five Year Contract To Be Effective April 1

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP)—Clark D. Shaughnessy, head football coach at the University of Chicago for seven years, tonight accepted a five-year contract to serve as director of football at Stanford University, succeeding Claude E. (Tiny) Thornhill. He will take up his new duties April 1.

In accepting the Stanford offer, Shaughnessy gave up a lifetime sinecure as professor of physical education at a reported salary of $7,500 annually.

Determination to prove that he still is a capable coach despite four disastrous years at Chicago was a major factor in Shaughnessy's decision to leave the midway. He declined to disclose the financial details of the new contract or whether he had made up his mind to quit Chicago when the school's trustees decided Dec. 21 to abandon the sport made famous at the Western Conference institution by Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Shaughnessy succeeded Stagg as Chicago's football coach in 1933, coming from Loyola University at New Orleans. The Maroon grid slump already was under way at that time, and although his teams were able to salvage a few Big Ten victories during the career of All-America Jay Berwanger in the 1933-35 period, the situation grew steadily worse.

Shaughnessy stated he hoped to continue "football coaching for years to come," and added:

"It is with pleasure that I accept Stanford's offer."

Shaughnessy began his college football career as a star at the University of Minnesota, playing in 1911-12-13 . . . He was an end the first year, a tackle the second and a fullback the third . . . of the three, he preferred tackle . . . 47 years old, Shaughnessy has spent twenty-three of them coaching . . . He is a teetotaler . . . Long distance automobile driving is one of his hobbies.

Lombardi Refuses To Sign Contract

San Francisco, January 11 —Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati Red catcher, has returned unsigned his 1940 contract which reportedly reduced his salary of $20,000 by $6,000.

"I'm not mad at General Manager Warren Giles, but I can't figure where I'm entitled to a cut like that," he said.

Lombardi Returns Contract to Reds

Big Catcher Doesn't Want To Be Classed as a Holdout However

Cincinnati, Jan. 11 (AP)—Intimations from the West coast to the contrary, brasshats of the National League Cincinnati Reds couldn't imagine big Ernie Lombardi on a "strike" today—and in fact, had Ernie's word that he wasn't.

Ernie did return his 1940 contract unsigned but in a letter accompanying it, wrote:

"I don't think you should ask me to sign (it), but I don't want to be classed as a holdout."

The gargantuan backstop who, voted the League's most valuable player in 1938, gained greater fame because of his World Series "snooze" was pictured in Oakland, Calif., as "disgusted" as he explained:

"I led the league in hitting in 1938 and they raised my pay $6,000 (for 1939). Now, because I only hit .287 they are taking the $6,000 away from me."

"No," soothed General Manager Warren C. Giles, orally, "we're not trying to cut Ernie by $6,000. He didn't draw $20,000, as some people have said. Ernie is certainly one of the best catchers in the league and a contract has been offered on that basis. In addition to being a good catcher, Ernie's a reasonable fellow and I feel can soon agree on terms."

Lombardi remained silent for weeks after his "swan-dive" at home plate enabled the Yanks to win in four straight.

"I was just out," he said later. "Charley Keller hit me hard. One leg hit me on the wrist and seemed to paralyze me. The other leg struck me in the chest. I was out on the ground and didn't know who was scoring. Until I got to my feet I didn't know just what had happened."

Charley Gelbert Signed By Senators for Season

Washington, Jan. 11.—Charley Gelbert, infielder of the Nats, who knows the ups and downs of baseball as do few others, yesterday signed his 1940 contract and predicted next season would be one of the brightest in his checkered career.

Gelbert, star of the St. Louis Cardinals and holder of a fielding record for chances accepted in a World Series, almost blasted himself out of baseball in a hunting accident. No one but a gamester like Charley would have fought his way back to the majors, but he tackled the job and made the grade.

Whether Gelbert just desired to affix his signature in the Nat office, or whether he was dissatisfied with the figures offered in the first document, was not revealed at Griffith Stadium. However, after a little confab in the inner office, Gelbert signed for the year and will be in Orlando, Fla., when the veterans report on March 1.

Mac Mitchell Not To Be Rushed into Top Competition

New York U's Sophomore Star To Be Held Back Year

New York, Jan. 11 (AP)—Track Coach Emil Von Elling of New York U. is much like a smart fight manager with a good prospect. Von Elling has the miler of the future under his wing in sophomore Les MacMitchell. But, like a fight manager, he doesn't want to rush his boy into the big-time before he's ready.

There's no question of MacMitchell's ability or potentialities. He won the intercollegiate cross-country title last Fall in just short of record time; he ran a 9:09.7 two-mile in his first try at the distance last Saturday; he has run the mile in a shade over 4:14 on a slow indoor track, and in addition runs a smart half-mile anchor leg for N. Y. U.'s two-mile relay team.

He could, probably, go into a string of this season's invitation specials and acquit himself with great credit. But Von Elling and MacMitchell, who turned down a bid to run in the Sugar Bowl, have agreed it would be best to pick their spots.

"After all, the boy's only 19," the N. Y. U. coach said today, "and he has two more years of running before he gets through college. If he started running all the major miles now, he'd spend all his time between Saturdays worrying about how to handle himself against the experienced Cunninghams, Fenskes and San Romanis.

MacMitchell's first big-time start will be on Feb. 3, when he runs in the Wanamaker mile of the Millrose games at Madison Square Garden. If he does well there, he may go into the Baxter mile in the New York A. C. meet two weeks later.

In many ways this picture runner is reminiscent of Cunningham, the man he may replace as the world's No. 1 miler. He's a shade taller, but weighs about the same—156 to 158 pounds—and has much the same build—barrel chest and powerful, smooth-muscled legs.

A personable, pleasant youngster who stands high in all his classes, MacMitchell's chief weakness at the moment is lack of Cunningham's running "savvy." But that's the thing Von Elling expects him to pick up.

Ridgeley Defeats Elk Garden 31-21

Ridgeley high schools basketball basketball team continued to play a fine brand of ball last night turning back Elk Garden 31 to 21 at Ridgeley.

Ridgeley ran up a 14 to 2 lead in the first quarter and the visitors were never able to get back into the ball game, although Ridgeley slowed up somewhat in the last three quarters.

Lookabough and DeRosa each with ten points led the attack for the winners while Lions with nine and Rawlings with eight were best for Elk Garden.

Lobert, Sylvester To Return To Phils

Philadelphia, Jan. 11 (AP)—Gerry Nugent, president of the Phillies, announced today that both Honus Lobert and Sylvester Johnson will be back with the local National League club next season. Lobert is an infielder and Johnson a pitcher.

"Neither man has signed a contract," Nugent said, "but that is because we have not sent them out. I feel sure, however, that both will be happy to accept the terms we offer."

Navy Boxers To Oppose Cornell Team Tomorrow

Coach Spike Webb Names Middie Mittmen for Card

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 11 (AP)—Coach Spike Webb named the Navy boxers who will match punches with the strong Cornell mittmen Saturday to open the Navy boxing season.

Capt. Jesse Worley, the only man with match experience on the squad, will handle the 135-pound assignment. Worley had only one match last year, losing to Stauber of Syracuse. He won from a Western Maryland opponent, but by default.

Johnny Williams, New Orleans, was named by Webb to take over the 120-pound chores against the Big Red. Ed Weed, Jacksonville, Fla., will go in the 127-pound class.

Webb went to the other end of the Eastern seaboard for his welterweight, nominating Kenny Brown of Bradford, N. H. The Navy middleweight named was Jimmy Marion, Greenwood, Miss.

At 165 pounds, Bill Peterson of Norfolk, Va., got the call. Jesse Miller, Ohumwa, Iowa, rated the nod as Navy's starter in the light-heavyweight division. Johnny Hebron, New York city, will heave the punches as Navy's hope in the featured heavyweight class.

Webb will depend heavily on green timber to bring home the boxing bacon for the Midshipmen this year. Peterson, Miller and Hebron are all youngsters (sophomores) in their first year of competition. Brown and Marion are second classmen (juniors).

Only the three lighter divisions have first classmen representing the Midshipmen.

Limit to Sideshow Stuff in Baseball

Sarasota, Fla., Jan. 11 (AP)—Baseball's clown prince, 63-year-old Nick Altrock, turned serious here today long enough to caution against mixing too much "sideshow" with baseball.

The veteran coach and funnyman for the Washington Senators recalled that the late Ban Johnson, former president of the American League, once told him his stunts were 'great stuff, but don't let it interfere with the actual playing of the ball game.'

"Sideshow promoters would do well to follow Johnson's advice—putting on sideshows along with baseball is a good idea just as long as it is not allowed to overshadow the game," Altrock said.

But don't jump at any hasty conclusion—the funny stuff has a place in baseball. "In fact, it's saved the day for many a fan when the game itself was not so hot."

Only last year, Altrock related, the Senators were trailing Detroit by something like 17-2 and fans were yawning with boredom when Manager Bucky Harris gave him the high sign.

"I got into action about the sixth inning and not a fan left before the contest was over."

Altrock's shadow boxing act (he first introduced it in 1912) still gets plenty of laughs, but butterflies (yes, butterflies) are his most reliable stooges. His elaborate "stalking" of the harmless little insects gets a grin from even the sourest "sour puss" back of first base.

Conn Is Seen as Good "Gate" Attraction

...amp's Manager ...inks He Would ...e Good Opponent

...e Is Surprised Conn Did ...ot Knock Cooper Out Wednesday Night

...ltimore, Jan. 11—Four champ...ship battles, two of which will ...held outdoors, are on Joe Louis' ...ram for the current year, John ...borough, one of the heavy...ht titleholder's managers, said ...y.

...he first of the title frays will be ...ed February 9 in New York's ...ison Square Garden, with Ar... Godoy, the Chilean, in the ...llenger's role. Another indoor ... is scheduled late in March, ...e the outdoor battles will be in ...e and September.

...uis, Roxborough and Jack ...kburn, the Brown Bomber's ...ner, were here to attend the fif...-round joust between Holman ...iams, stablemate and fellow-...nsman of the champion, and ...is (Kid) Cocoa, of Hartford.

...o far as Roxborough and Louis ... concerned, there'll be no en...ement for them at Miami.

"Taint 'nuff people down thar to ...e a good gate," the champion ...arked.

Prefers Shot At Conn

...either Louis or Roxborough ...ws who will be Joe's opponent ...March, but the negro titleholder's ...ager expressed the belief that ...y Conn would make a suitable ...onent for his first outdoor title ...nse.

...sked about a return fight with ...ento and whether he would pre... Conn over Two-Ton Tony, Rox...ough said: "Conn shapes up as a ...er attraction with Joe. Billy ...obably has more appeal to the ... fans now than any other big ...w. However, he's got to put on ...e more heft before becoming a ... heavyweight contender."

...onn, light-heavyweight cham..., scaled only 173½ pounds when ... defeated Henry Cooper last night ... Madison Square Garden.

Surprise To Champion

"What round did Conn knock 'im ...in?" Louis asked.

When told Cooper went the full ...ive rounds, the heavyweight king ...sed his eyebrows in an inquiring ...nner.

"Humph," Joe said. He fifured ...an would make short work of his ...al. And Blackburn, lightweight ... of yesteryear, also expressed ...prise that Conn didn't win by a ...ockout.

Louis appeared in fine physical ...n, and intimated he will need ...mparatively little strenuous work ... prepare for defense of his title ...inst Godby, the South Ameri...n.

Incidentally, the Louis entourage ... late tonight for Pompton Lakes, ...Y., where Joe's training camp ... be opened Saturday.

"Joe now is down to 207 pounds," ...borough said.

"That shows he does not possess ...ch excessive poundage, and he ... have sixteen boxing days in ...ich to attain peak form. As a ...tter of fact, Joe has been indulg... in roadwork for the past three ...ks in Detroit, so he will have a ...d start on his training when ... gets to Pompton Lakes."

Louis is paying his second visit ... Baltimore. He appeared here ... 1938 with a softball team.

For Roxborough, however, the trip ...es to renew old acquaintances. "Yep, been coming to Baltimore ... and on for a long time," Louis' ...t said.

Praise For Joe Gans

"Once visited the Goldfield, the ... place of Joe Gans. But I won't ... you the date, 'cause that was ...e time ago. That Gans was a ...ter for you. A real cham...n."

Would Joe follow in the steps of ...er champions and open a public ...e, such as a restaurant or sa...n?

Roxborough was quick to answer. "Nothing like that," he said.

"Louis is a great lover of horses, ... when he retires he'll be a ...mer and operator of a 'dude' ...ch. Horses are his hobby. But ...r will be of the show and saddle ...iety; racing horses are out."

And the champion nodded his ap...val of the latter statement.

Fight Managers Look Back On Their Fistic Prowess

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

New York, Jan. 11—Some of the boys in the Kauliflowerstrasse the other day were ruminating on the fact that fight managers don't throw punches any more. Only the fighters do.

"And very few of those," added Dumb Dan Morgan dolefully. Mr. Morgan managed Jack Britton through twenty-eight fights with Ted Kid Lewis for the welterweight championship. Mr. Morgan was a better fighter than either of them, according to Morgan's history of boxing, volume II.

"I threw plenty of punches back in those days when I had all my hair," said Mr. Morgan, searching his scalp for the last lock of summer, the ultimate objective of every barber in the neighborhood. "I would sooner fight than eat."

"Dan threw a pretty good punch," admitted Joe Gould, "but, if he missed with the first one, he run like a thief."

"Tut, tut," said Mr. Morgan gently. "Stick to the facts, young man. I used to leave 'em for dead."

A Tribute to Bill Duffy

"Talking about managers who could fight," said Mr. Gould, the pilot of James J. Braddock, Tommy Farr, and Steve Dudas, "my money goes with Bill Duffy. He had the best right I ever seen, and a good left, too."

Mr. Duffy (when in circulation) was the manager of Primo Carnera and other syndicate fighters. Mr. Morgan commented briefly on Mr. Duffy's prowess.

"Tchah!" he said.

"And tchah to you, double," replied Mr. Gould. "Duffy could pick his teeth with guys like you. And Jack Kearns was handy with his dukes, too. He could lick Dempsey when he managed him."

"No, he couldn't," contradict Mr. Morgan. "But he thought he could. I'll admit he thought he could."

At this point, as usual, somebody brought up the name of Harry Pollak, a fight manager of yesteryear who was notoriusly quick on the draw. Mr. Pollak once figured in an episode which causes fight managers to shudder when they think of it. He violated every union rule by fighting for nothing in the presence of a fighter. That sort of thing puts wrong ideas in a fighter's head, and even Mr. Pollak's best friends admit that he acted rashly.

At the time I speak of, Frank Moran, whose right hand was famous as Mary Ann, was training to fight Jess Willard for the heavyweight title. Mr. Moran had a little legal argument with his former manager, Dapper Dan McKetrick, over the division of past spoils, and, when the case came to court, Moran won the decision, thanks to Frankie O'Neil, his lawyer and a former boxing commissioner.

Fighter Gets an Eyeful

The case being closed, all parties concerned repaired to a nearby chop house to talk it over. Mr. McKetrick, the loser, chose a table with his friend, Harry Pollak. They brooded together about the injustice of the world and the thanklessness of fighters in general. Mr. Moran, the thankless fighter, chose another table close by and began to carve a steak with ruthless relish.

"After all I done for him," lamented Mr. McKetrick.

"It's terrible," agreed Mr. Pollak.

At this point, Mr. O'Neil, the winning lawyer, breezed into the joint flushed with victory. He paused at Mr. McKetrick's table to hurl a cheerful taunt.

"We licked you good," he began.

He got no further, for Mr. McKetrick delivered a sitting-standing punch to the belly. Mr. O'Neil promptly knocked Mr. McKetrick into a full tureen of turtle soup, where Dan cautiously remained for thirty-eight seconds (the full manager's count). Meanwhile, forgetting himself, Mr. Pollak arose and whipped a right to Mr. O'Neil's jaw. The attorney fled from the premises.

Mr. McKetrick, hearing the all quiet signal, emerged from his defenses behind the tureen and was shocked to see that Frank Moran, the thankless fighter, was still sitting by, chuckling merrily at the sight of managers fighting for nothing.

"You shouldn't of done it, Harry," he said.

"I know it," said Mr. Pollak, scowling at Moran. "The next time I throw a punch, I will charge that palooka $25 for a seat."

However, the damage was done, and the managers of the present day look back on the whole incident as an instance of the poorest kind of judgment.

"Still, Pollak could fight," mused Dumb Dan Morgan.

"Not like Bill Duffy," said Mr. Gould. "Why, I've seen Duffy—" this was where we came in.

Wrestling Enjoys Great Growth in Eastern Colleges

Pennsylvania Coach Says Southwest Will Hold Sway

Philadelphia, Jan. 11 (AP)—College wrestling is experiencing its greatest growth in the East this year, but the Southwest still reigns supreme in the sport, an official of the National Wrestling Coaches Association reported today.

W. Austin Bishop, University of Pennsylvania coach and executive secretary of the national association, said a survey showed 835 colleges and universities in the nation now support wrestling as compared with an estimated 100 in 1923. He termed the mat game "one of the nation's fastest growing sports in respect to the number of individuals participating."

Pacing the sport's growth, Bishop said, is the three-state area of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey, where a majority of the colleges now support wrestling and such teams as Lehigh, Penn State, Navy and Franklin and Marshall annually rank with the best in the country.

Material Divided

But Bishop held little hope that the East will ever break the domination of Southwestern rivals—led by Oklahoma A. and M.

"The material is too well divided in the East, for one thing," he explained. "Where one of the many eastern colleges may get even two state schoolboy champions on its squad, the Oklahoma schoolboy output is concentrated in three or four institutions such as Oklahoma A. and M., Oklahoma U., and Southwestern Teachers with the result that the Southwestern colleges have the jump on the East from the start."

Popularity of wrestling has increased, the Penn coach said, through such factors as standardization of rules, increased high school participation, virtual elimination of permanent injuries and a revival of club competition sponsored by the A.A.U.

Bishop added, however, that the sport has lagged in spectator interest. That's because wrestling fans usually must be experts to appreciate the sport, he said—"but once a wrestling fan, always one."

Five Year Contract To Be Effective April 1

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP)—Clark D. Shaughnessy, head football coach at the University of Chicago for seven years, tonight accepted a five-year contract to serve as director of football at Stanford University, succeeding Claude E. (Tiny) Thornhill. He will take up his new duties April 1.

In accepting the Stanford offer, Shaughnessy gave up a lifetime sinecure as professor of physical education at a reported salary of $7,500 annually.

Determination to prove that he still is a capable coach despite four disastrous years at Chicago was a major factor in Shaughnessy's decision to leave the midway. He declined to disclose the financial details of the new contract or whether he had made up his mind to quit Chicago when the school's trustees decided Dec. 21 to abandon the sport made famous at the Western Conference institution by Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Shaughnessy succeeded Stagg as Chicago's football coach in 1933, coming from Loyola University at New Orleans. The Maroon grid slump already was under way at that time, and although his teams were able to salvage a few Big Ten victories during the career of All-America Jay Berwanger in the 1933-35 period, the situation grew steadily worse.

Shaughnessy stated he hoped to continue "football coaching for years to come," and added:

"It is with pleasure that I accept Stanford's offer."

Shaughnessy began his college football career as a star at the University of Minnesota, playing in 1911-12-13 . . . He was an end the first year, a tackle the second and a fullback the third . . . of the three, he preferred tackle . . . 47 years old, Shaughnessy has spent twenty-three of them coaching . . . He is a teetotaler . . . Long distance automobile driving is one of his hobbies.

Lombardi Refuses To Sign Contract

San Francisco, January 11 —Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati Red catcher, has returned unsigned his 1940 contract which reportedly reduced his salary of $20,000 by $6,000.

"I'm not mad at General Manager Warren Giles, but I can't figure where I'm entitled to a cut like that," he said.

Big Catcher Doesn't Want To Be Classed as a Holdout However

Cincinnati, Jan. 11 (AP)—Intimations from the West coast to the contrary, brasshats of the National League Cincinnati Reds couldn't imagine big Ernie Lombardi on a "strike" today—and in fact, had Ernie's word that he wasn't.

Ernie did return his 1940 contract unsigned but in a letter accompanying it, wrote:

"I don't think you should ask me to sign (it), but I don't want to be classed as a holdout."

The gargantuan backstop who, voted the League's most valuable player in 1938, gained greater fame because of his World Series "snooze" was pictured in Oakland, Calif., as "disgusted" as he explained:

"I led the league in hitting in 1938 and they raised my pay $6,000 (for 1939). Now, because I only hit .287 they are taking the $6,000 away from me."

"No," soothed General Manager Warren C. Giles, orally, "we're not trying to cut Ernie by $6,000. He didn't draw $20,000, as some people have said. Ernie is certainly one of the best catchers in the league and a contract has been offered on that basis. In addition to being a good catcher, Ernie's a reasonable fellow and I feel can soon agree on terms."

Lombardi remained silent for weeks after his "swan-dive" at home plate enabled the Yanks to win in four straight.

"I was just out," he said later. "Charley Keller hit me hard. One leg hit me on the wrist and seemed to paralyze me. The other leg struck me in the chest. I was out on the ground and didn't know who was scoring. Until I got to my feet I didn't know just what had happened."

Charley Gelbert Signed By Senators for Season

Washington, Jan. 11.—Charley Gelbert, infielder of the Nats, who knows the ups and downs of baseball as do few others, yesterday signed his 1940 contract and predicted next season would be one of the brightest in his checkered career.

Gelbert, star of the St. Louis Cardinals and holder of a fielding record for chances accepted in a World Series, almost blasted himself out of baseball in a hunting accident. No one but a gamester like Charley would have fought his way back to the majors, but he tackled the job and made the grade.

Whether Gelbert just desired to affix his signature in the Nat office, or whether he was dissatisfied with the figures offered in the first document, was not revealed at Griffith Stadium. However, after a little confab in the inner office, Gelbert signed for the year and will be in Orlando, Fla., when the veterans report on March 1.

Mac Mitchell Not To Be Rushed into Top Competition

New York U's Sophomore Star To Be Held Back Year

New York, Jan. 11 (AP)—Track Coach Emil Von Elling of New York U. is much like a smart fight manager with a good prospect. Von Elling has the miler of the future under his wing in sophomore Les MacMitchell. But, like a fight manager, he doesn't want to rush his boy into the big-time before he's ready.

There's no question of MacMitchell's ability or potentialities. He won the intercollegiate cross-country title last Fall in just short of record time; he ran a 9:09.7 two-mile in his first try at the distance last Saturday; he has run the mile in a shade over 4:14 on a slow indoor track, and in addition runs a smart half-mile anchor leg for N. Y. U.'s two-mile relay team.

He could, probably, go into a string of this season's invitation specials and acquit himself with great credit. But Von Elling and MacMitchell, who turned down a bid to run in the Sugar Bowl, have agreed it would be best to pick their spots.

"After all, the boy's only 19," the N. Y. U. coach said today, "and he has two more years of running before he gets through college. If he started running all the major miles now, he'd spend all his time between Saturdays worrying about how to handle himself against the experienced Cunninghams, Fenskes and San Romanis.

MacMitchell's first big-time start will be on Feb. 3, when he runs in the Wanamaker mile of the Millrose games at Madison Square Garden. If he does well there, he may go into the Baxter mile in the New York A. C. meet two weeks later.

In many ways this picture runner is reminiscent of Cunningham, the man he may replace as the world's No. 1 miler. He's a shade taller, but weighs about the same—156 to 158 pounds—and has much the same build—barrel chest and powerful, smooth-muscled legs.

A personable, pleasant youngster who stands high in all his classes, MacMitchell's chief weakness at the moment is lack of Cunningham's running "savvy." But that's the thing Von Elling expects him to pick up.

Ridgeley Defeats Elk Garden 31-21

Ridgeley high schools basketball basketball team continued to play a fine brand of ball last night turning back Elk Garden 31 to 21 at Ridgeley.

Ridgeley ran up a 14 to 2 lead in the first quarter and the visitors were never able to get back into the ball game, although Ridgeley slowed up somewhat in the last three quarters.

Lookabough and DeRosa each with ten points led the attack for the winners while Lions with nine and Rawlings with eight were best for Elk Garden.

Navy Boxers To Oppose Cornell Team Tomorrow

Coach Spike Webb Names Middie Mittmen for Card

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 11 (AP)—Coach Spike Webb named the Navy boxers who will match punches with the strong Cornell mittmen Saturday to open the Navy boxing season.

Capt. Jesse Worley, the only man with match experience on the squad, will handle the 135-pound assignment. Worley had only one match last year, losing to Stauber of Syracuse. He won from a Western Maryland opponent, but by default.

Johnny Williams, New Orleans, was named by Webb to take over the 120-pound chores against the Big Red. Ed Weed, Jacksonville, Fla., will go in the 127-pound class.

Webb went to the other end of the Eastern seaboard for his welterweight, nominating Kenny Brown of Bradford, N. H. The Navy middleweight named was Jimmy Marion, Greenwood, Miss.

At 165 pounds, Bill Peterson of Norfolk, Va., got the call. Jesse Miller, Ohumwa, Iowa, rated the nod as Navy's starter in the light-heavyweight division. Johnny Hebron, New York city, will heave the punches as Navy's hope in the featured heavyweight class.

Webb will depend heavily on green timber to bring home the boxing bacon for the Midshipmen this year. Peterson, Miller and Hebron are all youngsters (sophomores) in their first year of competition. Brown and Marion are second classmen (juniors).

Limit to Sideshow Stuff in Baseball

Sarasota, Fla., Jan. 11 (AP)—Baseball's clown prince, 63-year-old Nick Altrock, turned serious here today long enough to caution against mixing too much "sideshow" with baseball.

The veteran coach and funnyman for the Washington Senators recalled that the late Ban Johnson, former president of the American League, once told him his stunts were 'great stuff, but don't let it interfere with the actual playing of the ball game.'

"Sideshow promoters would do well to follow Johnson's advice—putting on sideshows along with baseball is a good idea just as long as it is not allowed to overshadow the game," Altrock said.

But don't jump at any hasty conclusion—the funny stuff has a place in baseball. "In fact, it's saved the day for many a fan when the game itself was not so hot."

Only last year, Altrock related, the Senators were trailing Detroit by something like 17-2 and fans were yawning with boredom when Manager Bucky Harris gave him the high sign.

"I got into action about the sixth inning and not a fan left before the contest was over."

Shaughnessy Named Stanford Grid Coach

Chicago Mentor Who Had No Team Gets Poor Squad

Succeeds "Tiny" Thornhill Who Refused To Resign

Deposed Coach Scores "Politics" at School

Palo Alto, Calif., Jan. 11 (AP)—Clark D. Shaughnessy, 47, University of Chicago "coach without a team," inherited the remnants of a last-place Pacific Coast Conference squad today through his appointment as football director at Stanford University.

President Ray Lyman Wilbur of Stanford said the Chicago mentor had been appointed for five years but made no mention of the salary. Shaughnessy, with a ranking of professor in addition to head football coach at Chicago, was believed to have received $7,500 a year.

Trustees at Chicago decided last month to abolish football after a disastrous season. Shaughnessy succeeds Claude "Tiny" Thornhill, dismissed at the close of the Indians' most disappointing season in the university's gridiron history.

Scares "Politics"

Stanford failed to record a conference victory last year, losing six league encounters and gaining a tie with U. C. L. A. In a post-season game they defeated Dartmouth.

Earlier this week Thornhill said he wished good luck for his then unnamed successor and expressed hope the new coach would have the cooperation Thornhill said he had "not enjoyed for several years."

Explaining his refusal to resign, Thornhill said "it was not the mistaken idea of trying to save my job but to give the university a chance to clean up some bad politics both on the inside and out. This done I intended to resign."

The names of many well known football coaches were considered, but only one ballot was taken by board members and it was unanimous for Shaughnessy.

Central Hi Teams Top Grantsville

Central high school of Lonaconing sent its basketball teams to Grantsville last night, for their third game in three nights, and came back with another double-header victory. The score was 40-14 in the boys' game, and 68-11 in the girls' game.

Grantsville could do nothing against the Central defense and trailed 11-2 at the first quarter, then failed to score in the second period as Central got 11 more points, the half-time count reading 22-2.

It was almost as bad in the third period, the time-out tally reading 34-4.

In the final period Coach Henry sent in his second stringers and Grantsville managed to amass 10 points.

Wehrle and Wood Tie for Lead in Golf Tournament

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 11 (AP)—Rain soaked troopers of the golfing world, bearing up under such annoyance as water down the neck and a mushy course, gave par a belting today in first round competition of the 72-hole $5,000 Oakland medal play open tournament.

Amateur Wilford Wehrle, of Racing, Wis., and Chicago, and professional Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., set the pace with cards of 67, three under par and a sensational display of fairway fireworks in view of the weather.

On the heels of the two pace setters were Jim Demaret of Houston and bulky Clayton Heafner, Linville, N. C., each carding a pair of 34's.

Bracket 69 was jammed with par busters. They included Bill Williamson, Hollywood; Fred Wetmore, San Francisco; Bruce Coltart, Haddonfield, N. J.; Ed Oliver, Hronell, N. Y.; Ben Hogan, White Plains, N. Y.; Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill.; Ben Coltrain, San Francisco; Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., and Lawson Little, Bretton Wood, N. H., who won the Los Angeles Open last Monday.

1940 Version of Annie Oakley Is Pistol Champion

Gloria Jacobs, 17, Best in Country with 22-Caliber

AP Feature Service

Woodland, Calif, Jan. 11—Gloria Jacobs, seventeen-year-old women's national pistol champion from Woodland, is a charming 1940 version of the old West's accurate-firing Annie Oakley.

She's the best .22 caliber revolver shooter in the country, man or woman, over the 25-yard course but there's nothing tomboyish about her. Gloria is as pretty and sweet and soft as any high school senior out this way.

The slim, poker-faced blonde scored 299 points out of a possible 300 to set the best mark ever made and win the national title at Fort Funston in San Francisco. She is the first girl ever to make the men sharpshooters take a back seat.

Started Young

Gloria has been breaking targets since she was just a young school girl. She comes by her shooting naturally for her father, Henry R. Jacobs, captain of the Yolo county California highway patrol, is a crack shot. She has, it seems, always been interested in firearms and her father bought her a .38 before she got in her teens.

When she was 12 she won her first medal. At 15 she was state women's champion. Now she prefers to shoot against the men. Gloria travels to shooting matches with her father and two years ago, at Camp Perry, Ohio, she won first place among the civilian firers.

Although a slim, childish looking contestant, Gloria shoots with a coolness and concentration that amazes the old heads. Gloria always has to shoot under pressure because of the crush of curious spectators.

No one would suspect her of being the type who would touch a gun. She recently gave a traveling carnival man the surprise of his life. He was afraid for her to shoot at his clay pigeons and was careful to instruct her on which end of the weapon the bullets came from. But when she finished downing the birds the carnival man had to put in a rush order for a fresh supply.

Plenty of Titles

Besides her 299 record, the National Rifle Association says she is women's champion in these events:

Fifty yards with a .38 pistol, 283 out of 300; twenty-five yards with a .38, 291 out of 300; twenty-five yards, twenty shots with a .38, 182 out of 200; twenty-five yards, time fire, with a .38, 195 out of 200 and 50 yards with a .22 pistol, 291 out of 300.

In scoring her near perfect 299 record, the school girl fired 29 shots from a distance of 25 yards into a circle three and one-eighth inches in diameter. The shot that cut her out of a perfect score grazed the ten circle.

Gloria makes good grades, is a pianist, and plays clarinet in the school band. She sews, cooks and likes to dance, swims, rides and plays tennis.

Sure, she has a boy friend.

Berkeley Cagers Beat Paw Paw 26-23

Paw Paw, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Special)—Paw Paw high school defending champs of Morgan county lost to the Berkeley high cage artists here tonight in an extra period as Robertson of the losers missed a foul toss in the last seven seconds of the regular game that ended in a 22-22 tie. The Berkeley cagers finally won 26-23.

Michaels, forward on the Health boys outfit looped in six goals to lead both teams in scoring. F. Bohrer sank three goals for the Paw Paw lads.

Race Commissioners For Stricter Turf Rules

Miami, Fla., Jan. 11 (AP)—The National Association of State Racing Commissioners recommended today that the various States adopt a rule requiring that registration papers be filed with track secretaries wherever a horse races, the papers to be turned over to the new owner when a horse changes hands.

The rule is designed to enforce a stricter record of race horses to aid in identification.

It also was recommended that owners present the records of imported horses.

Miami was awarded the 1941 winter convention.

Frostburg Jayvees Beat Barton 39 to 17

Frostburg, Jan. 11 (Special) — Frostburg State Teachers College Jayvees jolted Barton high with a 39-17 setback last night at the State Teacher's gym here. The Jayvees, paced by Connor with 14 points, led all the way, 9-2, 26-14 and 30-15. Thomas joined with Connor in a spectacular all around game. Shuck, although held scoreless, played a good game for Barton.

In the preliminary Sacco's Aces defeated Blackwell's Aces 33-21.

Candy Kitchen hoopmen again tied the Merchants for first place in the South End Booster Basketball League, defeating Keegan's Gassers, 34-32, Wednesday on the Penn Avenue floor for their fourth consecutive victory.

Jim Roby and Roy Whiteman shared 17 of the Kitcheners' points while Joe Kelley and Bob Butts tallied 13 of the Gassers' markers. "Bus" Miller of Keegan's crew and Roby and "Pooch" Orndorff of Candy Kitchen stood out on the defense.

In the other battle, Smith's passers turned back Columbus Lodge, 31-24, for their first triumph of the campaign. Tom Spicer tallied ten points for the Smiths while Al Pannone gathered a dozen for the losers.

In this evening's doubleheader, the Merchants will tangle with Garrett & Zilch at 7:30, and Post's Pirates will engage the Smiths at 8:15. Both the Merchants and G and Z. are unbeaten. The lineups:

W. Va. U. Boxing Team To Open Season in New York

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 11—West Virginia University's Mountaineer boxing team makes its debut under Bill Neely Saturday when the City College of New York will be met in New York city.

Neely, former Mountaineer captain and twice 135-pound champion in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference, stepped into the boxing coaching picture when Dr. Edward Vacheresse resigned last year to devote full time to medical work.

Neely believes the Mountaineer leather throwers will be stronger this winter, but looks beyond the opening match when he says so. The reason he looks beyond the opening match is that one of his prize sophomore candidates, Guice Tudor, 145, will be unable to make the trip to New York, thus weakening the team noticeably.

His other prize sophomore, Crispan, 135, of Mexican descent, will be available however.

Either George Sparacino, of Mt. Hope, or Robert Brown, of Kingwood, will fight at 120 pounds, with Clem Hamilton at 127. Hernandez will hold down the next class assignment, with Joe Suarez, of Annmoore, at 145.

Charley Ward, Beryl Maurer, and Beecher Hinkle, all squad holdovers, will fight at 155, 165, and 175 respectively, with Hank Goodman, sophomore reserve tackle on the football team, the team heavyweight. Goodman, from Bradford, Pa., is the only out-of-state boy on the squad.

"Dizzy" Dean Is Asking $15,

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP)—"Dizzy" Dean's 1940 contract with the Chicago Cubs arrived at the Cubs offices today with no signature on the dotted line.

Instead, Dean sent from Tex., a note to Phil K. Wrigley, owner of the team, which said:

"I realize I haven't been much help to the club the last two years but I still think the cut is too much. However, I'm sure we can straighten things and I'll be all set for spring training on time."

Dean, reported to have received $20,500 last season, was offered as much as the result of winning only six games in 1939. Owen Drake, assistant to Wrigley, said Dean wants $15,000.

Shaughnessy Named Stanford Grid Coach

Chicago Mentor Who Had No Team Gets Poor Squad

Succeeds "Tiny" Thornhill Who Refused To Resign

Deposed Coach Scores "Politics" at School

Palo Alto, Calif., Jan. 11 (AP)—Clark D. Shaughnessy, 47, University of Chicago "coach without a team," inherited the remnants of a last-place Pacific Coast Conference squad today through his appointment as football director at Stanford University.

President Ray Lyman Wilbur of Stanford said the Chicago mentor had been appointed for five years but made no mention of the salary. Shaughnessy, with a ranking of professor in addition to head football coach at Chicago, was believed to have received $7,500 a year.

Trustees at Chicago decided last month to abolish football after a disastrous season. Shaughnessy succeeds Claude "Tiny" Thornhill, dismissed at the close of the Indians' most disappointing season in the university's gridiron history.

Scares "Politics"

Stanford failed to record a conference victory last year, losing six league encounters and gaining a tie with U. C. L. A. In a post-season game they defeated Dartmouth.

Earlier this week Thornhill said he wished good luck for his then unnamed successor and expressed hope the new coach would have the cooperation Thornhill said he had "not enjoyed for several years."

Explaining his refusal to resign, Thornhill said "it was not the mistaken idea of trying to save my job but to give the university a chance to clean up some bad politics both on the inside and out. This done I intended to resign."

The names of many well known football coaches were considered, but only one ballot was taken by board members and it was unanimous for Shaughnessy.

Central Hi Teams Top Grantsville

Central high school of Lonaconing sent its basketball teams to Grantsville last night, for their third game in three nights, and came back with another double-header victory. The score was 40-14 in the boys' game, and 68-11 in the girls' game.

Grantsville could do nothing against the Central defense and trailed 11-2 at the first quarter, then failed to score in the second period as Central got 11 more points, the half-time count reading 22-2.

It was almost as bad in the third period, the time-out tally reading 34-4.

Wehrle and Wood Tie for Lead in Golf Tournament

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 11 (AP)—Rain soaked troopers of the golfing world, bearing up under such annoyance as water down the neck and a mushy course, gave par a belting today in first round competition of the 72-hole $5,000 Oakland medal play open tournament.

Amateur Wilford Wehrle, of Racing, Wis., and Chicago, and professional Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., set the pace with cards of 67, three under par and a sensational display of fairway fireworks in view of the weather.

On the heels of the two pace setters were Jim Demaret of Houston and bulky Clayton Heafner, Linville, N. C., each carding a pair of 34's.

Bracket 69 was jammed with par busters. They included Bill Williamson, Hollywood; Fred Wetmore, San Francisco; Bruce Coltart, Haddonfield, N. J.; Ed Oliver, Hronell, N. Y.; Ben Hogan, White Plains, N. Y.; Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill.; Ben Coltrain, San Francisco; Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., and Lawson Little, Bretton Wood, N. H., who won the Los Angeles Open last Monday.

1940 Version of Annie Oakley Is Pistol Champion

Gloria Jacobs, 17, Best in Country with 22-Caliber

AP Feature Service

Woodland, Calif, Jan. 11—Gloria Jacobs, seventeen-year-old women's national pistol champion from Woodland, is a charming 1940 version of the old West's accurate-firing Annie Oakley.

She's the best .22 caliber revolver shooter in the country, man or woman, over the 25-yard course but there's nothing tomboyish about her. Gloria is as pretty and sweet and soft as any high school senior out this way.

The slim, poker-faced blonde scored 299 points out of a possible 300 to set the best mark ever made and win the national title at Fort Funston in San Francisco. She is the first girl ever to make the men sharpshooters take a back seat.

Started Young

Gloria has been breaking targets since she was just a young school girl. She comes by her shooting naturally for her father, Henry R. Jacobs, captain of the Yolo county California highway patrol, is a crack shot. She has, it seems, always been interested in firearms and her father bought her a .38 before she got in her teens.

When she was 12 she won her first medal. At 15 she was state women's champion. Now she prefers to shoot against the men. Gloria travels to shooting matches with her father and two years ago, at Camp Perry, Ohio, she won first place among the civilian firers.

Although a slim, childish looking contestant, Gloria shoots with a coolness and concentration that amazes the old heads. Gloria always has to shoot under pressure because of the crush of curious spectators.

No one would suspect her of being the type who would touch a gun. She recently gave a traveling carnival man the surprise of his life. He was afraid for her to shoot at his clay pigeons and was careful to instruct her on which end of the weapon the bullets came from. But when she finished downing the birds the carnival man had to put in a rush order for a fresh supply.

Plenty of Titles

Besides her 299 record, the National Rifle Association says she is women's champion in these events:

Fifty yards with a .38 pistol, 283 out of 300; twenty-five yards with a .38, 291 out of 300; twenty-five yards, twenty shots with a .38, 182 out of 200; twenty-five yards, time fire, with a .38, 195 out of 200 and 50 yards with a .22 pistol, 291 out of 300.

In scoring her near perfect 299 record, the school girl fired 29 shots from a distance of 25 yards into a circle three and one-eighth inches in diameter. The shot that cut her out of a perfect score grazed the ten circle.

Gloria makes good grades, is a pianist, and plays clarinet in the school band. She sews, cooks and likes to dance, swims, rides and plays tennis.

Sure, she has a boy friend.

Berkeley Cagers Beat Paw Paw 26-23

Paw Paw, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Special)—Paw Paw high school defending champs of Morgan county lost to the Berkeley high cage artists here tonight in an extra period as Robertson of the losers missed a foul toss in the last seven seconds of the regular game that ended in a 22-22 tie. The Berkeley cagers finally won 26-23.

Michaels, forward on the Health boys outfit looped in six goals to lead both teams in scoring. F. Bohrer sank three goals for the Paw Paw lads.

Race Commissioners For Stricter Turf Rules

Miami, Fla., Jan. 11 (AP)—The National Association of State Racing Commissioners recommended today that the various States adopt a rule requiring that registration papers be filed with track secretaries wherever a horse races, the papers to be turned over to the new owner when a horse changes hands.

The rule is designed to enforce a stricter record of race horses to aid in identification.

It also was recommended that owners present the records of imported horses.

Miami was awarded the 1941 winter convention.

Wes Ferrell To Get Trial with Dodgers

New York, January 11—Wesley Ferrell, who during his checkered career with Cleveland, Boston, Washington and the Yankees, won more than 20 games a season six times, will try to come back with the Brooklyn Dodgers this year.

The Dodgers announced that they would give a tryout to the 32-year-old righthander, who has been a free agent since the Yanks released him with an ailing pitching arm last summer.

Frank Howard Succeeds Neely at Clemson

Clemson, S. C., Jan. 11 (AP)—The Clemson College Athletic Council tonight chose Frank Howard, line coach at Clemson since 1931, to succeed Jess Neely as head football coach. Neely resigned yesterday to become head coach at Rice Institute. Howard was given a four-year contract. The salary was not disclosed.

W. Va. U. Boxing Team To Open Season in New York

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 11—West Virginia University's Mountaineer boxing team makes its debut under Bill Neely Saturday when the City College of New York will be met in New York city.

Neely, former Mountaineer captain and twice 135-pound champion in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference, stepped into the boxing coaching picture when Dr. Edward Vacheresse resigned last year to devote full time to medical work.

Neely believes the Mountaineer leather throwers will be stronger this winter, but looks beyond the opening match when he says so. The reason he looks beyond the opening match is that one of his prize sophomore candidates, Guice Tudor, 145, will be unable to make the trip to New York, thus weakening the team noticeably.

His other prize sophomore, Crispan, 135, of Mexican descent, will be available however.

Either George Sparacino, of Mt. Hope, or Robert Brown, of Kingwood, will fight at 120 pounds, with Clem Hamilton at 127. Hernandez will hold down the next class assignment, with Joe Suarez, of Annmoore, at 145.

Charley Ward, Beryl Maurer, and Beecher Hinkle, all squad holdovers, will fight at 155, 165, and 175 respectively, with Hank Goodman, sophomore reserve tackle on the football team, the team heavyweight. Goodman, from Bradford, Pa., is the only out-of-state boy on the squad.

LaSalle Is Host to Fort Hill Five Tonight

entinels Open efense of City asketball Title

orthenders Given Edge Over Champs on SS. P. & P. Court

. Va. Teams Busy Tonight; Davis at Allegany Hi Tomorrow

Fort Hill high school's basketball m opens defense of one of its rt crowns tonight when the Sen- els tackle LaSalle high at SS. ter & Paul school gym at 8:15 lock with a preliminary at 7:15. It will be the lid-lifter of the mberland city series and will be e 28th meeting of teams repre- nting the two schools dating back the 1926-27 series when the new rt Hill sported the name of Penn enue high.

For the past three years the ies games have been even-break airs, neither being able to sweep e annual dual bill, but Fort Hill ds a 16-11 edge since the two ools became court rivals.

The odd contest came about in 8 when after dividing in home d-home tussles, a third game was cessary to decide the city title. is playoff engagement went to rt Hill 21-20.

Last year, Fort Hill copped the ener 37-25 but in the return skir- sh dropped to the North Enders -19 for its only setback of the ason. In 1937, there was another lit with the Sentinels winning -25 and then losing 37-27. Other lits occurred in 1930 and 1933.

LaSalle Made Favorite

LaSalle copped both games in 27 and 1928. In 1929, the teams vided while in 1931, LaSalle won o. In 1932, Penn swept the series d after the 1933 split, the South nders won the next six battles.

Holding victories over Beall 35- , Alumni 35-31, St. Francis of rgantown 42-20, Calvert Hall of altimore 25-14, Gallitzin (Pa.) gh 29-21 and Ridgeley 36-33 and ith their only loss a 30-25 setback the hands of College Alumni, the rth Enders will be slightly fav- ed to best Coach "Bobby" Cava- augh's passers.

Another thing in LaSalle's favor the fact that the Blue and Gold oopmen will be playing on their me floor. Fort Hill has won six, nine contests, defeating the Frost- rg State Jayvees 42-38 in two ex- a periods after losing to the home am 22-20, Piedmont 43-25, Alumni 3-29, Grafton 35-34, Piedmont 32- 0, and Keyser 42-29 and losing also Davis twice 39-23 and 36-22.

Other games tonight find Circle- ille at Franklin, Keyser at Pied- ont, Parsons at Petersburg,, Rom- ey at Moorefield, Oakland at Bay- rd, Thomas at Tygarts Valley, Po- mac State at West Liberty and rostburg State at Davis Elkins.

The contests at Franklin, Pied- ont, Petersburg and Moorefield ill be Potomac Valley Conference attles with Circleville, Piedmont, Parsons and Romney the favorites.

Davis Here Tomorrow

Tomorrow, Allegany will figure in s second tough game of the week, meeting the Davis (W. Va.) High Wildcats on the Campobello floor.

The Campers, in their last start, ook across Massanutten Military Academy of Woodstock, Va., 40-31, nd hope to remain unbeaten gainst scholastic foes by upsetting he Wildcats, riding a five-game inning streak.

A real comparison of the strength f Fort Hill and Allegany should e furnished by tomorrow's tussle. Davis holds two victories over the Sentinels by fairly large margins.

In two other Saturday night tests, Bayard will journey to Circleville for a Potomac Valley Conference en- counter and Hancock and Berkeley Springs will clash at the latter place.

The SPORT TRAIL

New York, Jan 11 (AP)—Fight night:

The black letters on the pale marquee background spell out: "Boxing tonight—Conn vs. Cooper." Inside the Garden box offices the ticket sellers get ready for either a feast or a famine. Early arrivals stand alone or in groups about the outer lobby.

Worn-out pugs stand about hopefully waiting recognition; old punch collectors, their scarred faces, masked noses and biscuit ears souvenirs of the glory road, their seedy dress a hint that the end was not all glory. The life-sized bronze statute of a fighter, purportedly Joe Gans, flonked by the Muldoon trophy, silently mocks the faded warriors.

The crowd arrives faster now, filing noisily through long, roped-off lanes to the ticket takers. Inside, a pigeon-blue clad special cop intones: "Keep moving, everybody. Find your seat." Nobody pays any attention to him. Managers, fighters, hangers-on and just fans stand or roam about greeting friends, if any, and discussing one subject—fights.

A muffled roar from the arena tells that the preliminaries have started. In the smoke-hazed glare of the ring spotlight two large young men are puffing and wheezing and slugging. The crowd boos lustily if a round passes without some semblance of mayhem. A wiling lad who can't fight a lick provides a humorous interlude with his wild swings which miss his lanky Puerto Rican foe by six feet, and a shrill voice from the gallery ensourages: "Killum Kellum."

The semi-windup pits a huge, awkward lad vaguely resembling Primo Carnera against a well-knot, handy youth from Des Moines named Lee Savold, whose cold eyes and almost casual manner belie his savage style of attack. He closes his opponent's eye with one quick, short hook, never throws a punch unless sure it will land. He left the ring with the respect of the fans. "He was nervous, it was his first time here," explains his spidery little manager, Pinkie George. Savold appeared about as nervous as a ring post.

Now Billy Conn mounts the short steps and ducks through the ropes. His handsome face pictures serenly. He doesn't glance at the stolid Henry Cooper in the opposite corner. Short, tousle-haired, gold-toothed Johnny Ray, Billy's manager, does his worrying for him. He hovers over the nonchalant Billy like a mother chick, wide eyes and washboard brow a study in perpetual apprehension.

The announcer, dapper and verboe, summons fighters for the ringside introductions. They bob through the ropes dolled up in their Sunday best and self-conscious as schoolgirls, make a pivoting bow, walk over to grasp the gloves of each fighter, mumble something, and drop out of sight in the sea of pale faces gazing up from the ringside.

Referee Arthur Donovan calls the fighters to the center of the ring and repeats word-worn instructions, the seconds give one last word of advice and an encouraging pat, then the gong sounds.

Conn dances out, such a handsome, graceful figure that were he in a screen play he would be dubbed a phony. His long left begins to dart out. Bop, bop, bop, he dots the eyes and Cooper's face seems to slowly flatten out before your very eyes like a melting pad of of butter.

Cooper edges stolidly forward, like a Volga Boatman tugging in a rope and facing a driving rain. When he tries to hit the agile Conn he is swinging at the little man who wasn't there.

It goes on for twelve rounds, and the decision is a matter of course.

The unmarked Conn poses for a victory picture, the crowd departs quickly except for stragglers about the press box. Joe Jacobs wanders about disconsolately. "No Galento-Baer bout," he says. "Hear what they done to me? Wouldn't give me a license."

The Garden at last is practically deserted, dark and decolate. Walter St. Denis, Mike Jacobs' publicity man, tucks a bundle of papers under his arm, turns his coat collar up under his sad face, and heads into the lights and chill of Eighth avenue at midnight.

"Good night," he says.

Fight night.

Mountaineer Wrestlers Open with W. & L. Squad

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 11—West Virginia University's wrestling team, expected to improve considerably on its record last winter, makes its first 1940 start here Saturday against Washington and Lee. It will be the first match with the Generals since 1925. The Mountaineers won that year, and also took two other previous matches the two schools have wrestled.

Coach Albert Gwynhe is just about set on his starting lineup. John Sweeney, of Summersville, will be at 121; John Tyson at 129; Paul Satterfield at 136; Bob Hartley 145; John Hammer 156; Ed Kimble or Allen Bertschy 165; Lewis Hatch, 175, and probably Albert (The Tiger) Baisi, heavyweight.

Except for Baisi and Hatch, the latter an outstanding sophomore candidate, the team is virtually an experienced one. Baisi, three years a regular tackle on the football team, came out for wrestling only this winter. His presence is expected to add considerable color to the program, even if he doesn't know much about the sport.

CHAMPIONS AND THEIR CHANCES

Los Angeles, Jan. 11—This may be—it can be—the best year for the handicap horses that the turf has known in a long time. Disaster overtook some of the best of the three-year-olds of 1939 but most of them came through sound and ready to race, while the older horses, for the most part, stood up strongly through the campaign. The result is that fifteen or sixteen outstanding candidates, plus at least twenty others that rank just below them, are—or soon will be—in training for the Santa Anita Handicap, the Widener Challenge Cup, the Suburban, the Brooklyn, the Saratoga, the Paumonok, the Massachusetts and other handicap events.

Add to this the fact that, with the coming of the mutuels to New York, the purses for some of these races are likely to be increased. It looks like a big year in this field.

The best of the older horses last year was C. S. Howard's Kayak II that won the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, the Bowie Handicap, the Hollywood Gold Cup, the Continental and the American. This year the Argentine again is favored to win at Santa Anita on March 2—and go on from here. But he will have a terrific struggle trying to keep on top of the heap, for W. L. Brann's Challedon, three-year-old champion of 1939 and twice conqueror of the Howard horse, is moving back toward further clashes with him.

They are not likely to meet at Santa Anita. The continent will separate them that day, I think with Kayak II going to the post here and Challedon striving for the Widener Cup at Hialeah. But they will be looking at the same starter on summer days at Saratoga or on one of the other eastern tracks. I still like Kayak's chances of taking the Maryland horse, in spite of those two defeats for the Argentine last year in special races, one at Narragansett and the other at Pimlico. I have seen him give too many smashing performances to weaken on him. But I know he'll have a struggle.

The Gallant Seabiscuit

There is a gallant and always dangerous Seabiscuit. The old campaigner—now seven years old—was forced out of training last year but he's back—back with most of his old speed and all his old strength and courage. He drew top weights from the handicappers for both the Santa Anita and the Widener.

Another threat may be carried by the sleek Bimelech, E. R. Bradley's 1939 two-year-old monarch and winter book favorite for the Kentucky Derby. Let Bimelech win the roses at Churchhill Downs and crash on to a few more triumphs and the late season will find him tussling with the older horses. Unbeaten as a two-year-old, winner of the Saratoga Special, the Hopeful and the Belmont and Pimlico Futurities, he's red hot as another season looms.

Some of The Others

Challedon — Seabiscuit — Bimelech—those are the main menaces to Kayak II as seen from this observation post in January. But out of the pack right behind them may move one greater than any of them. This pack includes—in alphabetical order—Bull Lea, Cravat, Eight Thirty, Hash, Heather Broom, Isolator, Lovely Night, Nedayr, Porter's Mite, Sickle T., Technician and Volitant.

Cravat finished a bad third to Challedon and Kayak II in the Pimlico Special last fall but the Townsend B. Martin horse, now five years old, won the Suburban, the Brooklyn and the Jockey Club Gold Cup.

George Widener's Eight Thirty won seven of his ten starts as a three-year-old, including the Saratoga Handicap and the Travers, Wilson and Whitney Stakes.

Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Lovely Night, running in handicap company last year as a three-year-old, won the Butler, the Constitution, the Empire City and the Queens County.

Sickle T., owned by Mrs. B. F. Whitaker now five years old, was in the money ten times in his sixteen starts through 1939. Among his victories were those in the Yonkers Handicap at Empire City and the Champlain and Merchants and Citizens at Saratoga.

They Can Come On

These horses—and the others listed here—had their disappointing days. For some—notably Technician, Heather Broom—Porter's Mite and Volitant—it was a disappointing year.

Technician, winner of the Widener at Hialeah, was liked by many in the Kentucky Derby but failed there and didn't win an important race thereafter, much to the chagrin of his owner, Herbert Woolf, who had won the Derby with Lawrin the year before. Jock Whitney's Heather Broom just missed being a top-flight colt, winning some minor races but finishing third in the Derby and fourth in the Arlington Classic. Bill Boeing's Porter's Mite, one of the very best of the two-year-olds in 1938, faded as a three-year-old. George Bull's Volitant like Heather Broom, just missed. He was second to Technician in the Widener, second to Johnstown in the Wood Memorial, third to Challedon and Gilded Knight in the Preakness.

But they can come on, these horses. Take Seabiscuit. He was a flop as a two-year-old, winning only five times in thirty-five starts. As a three-year-old he showed nothing and was sold by William Woodward to Charlie Howard for about $7,500. It wasn't until he was four years old that he began to hit his true form and he didn't reach the peak until he was five

Thus, one of those three and even four-year-old horses that just missed or missed badly in 1939 may emerge as champion as the 1940 campaign closes out.

Marrino Will Gun for Bigger Game in Next Bout

Baltimore, Jan. 11—Winner over Jerry Zeller in his last start here, Larry Marrino goes gunning for bigger game Monday night at Carlin's.

The Italian heavyweight slugger will take on Johnny Kapovitch in one of the six-round battles on the Bill Boyd-Al Boros program. The latter test will be over the 10-round route.

Marrino, who is a veteran laborer in the ring, came through with a surprise victory over Zeller, knocking out the Fullerton lad. It was Zeller's first defeat.

However, Kapovitch shapes up as a more testing rival. Johnny beat Pop Eye Irwin and Eddie Dreher in his last two battles here, and will take the better record into action.

Zeller will endeavor to get back in a winning stride when he battles Ralph Maggheim in another supporting test.

Two other matches will complete the program, according to Matchmaker Sylvan Bass.

Good Defense Is Best Offense Al Gorton Contends

Panzer College Basketball Coach Uses System Most Coaches Despise

By JAMES P. HACKETT

East Orange, N. J., Jan. 11 (AP)—Big-time college basketball coaches may be astounded at the way Al Gorton teaches the game at little Panzer College, but they'll have to admit it works.

Gorton believes a good defense is better than a good offense, a view in which most coaches don't concur.

Gorton says, "dog your man so he can't pass or receive a pass and he can't score or help a teammate score."

Panzer has won twenty-four straight games to equal a school record set in the 1930-31 seasons. Panzer's last defeat was in December, 1937, when a powerful Long Island University five turned the trick by six points Gorton's team scored one of the seasons big upsets two weeks later by humbling New York University on its own floor. Neither scheduled Panzer this year.

Gorton doesn't put too much stock in the kind of basketball taught by Howard G. Cann at N. Y. U. or Clair Bee at L. I. U. Cann holds that the principle of basketball "was, is and always will be to put the ball through a hoop as often as time will allow." Bee teaches his players to be "ball hawks" on the theory that if you can get the ball away from the other fellow, he can't score and you can.

Of course, Panzer has to score. Gorton has a veteran team which centers its attack around a six-foot, seven-inch center, Herman Knupple, who takes a position near the basket. His teammates feed him the ball, he pivots and drops it in. That's the Panzer offense.

Keyser Turns on Bruce To Win 23-19

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Special)—Keyser high school turned on Bruce of Westernport here tonight and came away with a much sought victory after being kicked around by rivals that were once easy prey. The final score was 23-19 with Keyser leading at the quarter, 4-2; trailing at half time 7-6, and again in front at the third period rest 15-10.

Crogan was high scorer for Keyser with eight points on two fouls and four for seven fouls. Reeves topped Bruce with three field goals.

Joe Murphy Begins Work for Indoor Meet

Baltimore, Jan. 11—Fully recovered from an arduous season on the gridiron, Joe Murphy, University of Maryland sprint star, has started training for the Maryland-Fifth Regiment indoor meet booked here February 10.

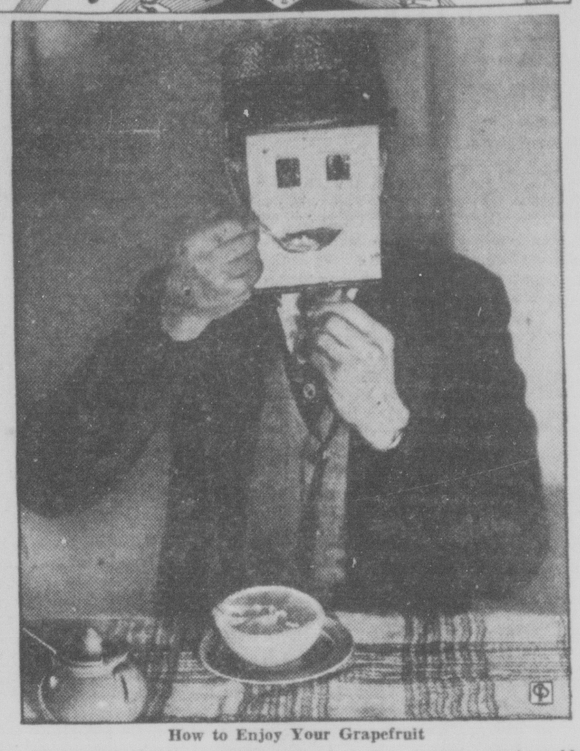

Murphy holds the Southern Conference 100 and 220-yard titles and also runs on the mile relay team. He is looking forward to sprint clashes with outstanding collegian dash men slated to appear here.

Considerable interest is being noted in Jim Kehoe's work since his home-stretch battle with Glenn Cunningham last Saturday in Brooklyn. Kehoe probably will run in the Oriole 660, co-feature with the Governor's Mile in the Armory games.

TODAY'S GOOFY GADGET

How to Enjoy Your Grapefruit

How best to enjoy squirting grapefruit has been a moot problem with inventors for eons. Russell E. Oakes, the demon gadget producer of Waukesha, Wis., has solved the difficulty with a breakfast cap. A curtain, strangely reminiscent of a window shade, is rolled down from the brim of the lightweight hat. Eye holes and a space for the mouth are provided. The shade may be raised and lowered, in rhythm with the movements of the arm of the user, the professor says, thus avoiding the annoying procilivities of the popular breakfast fruit.

Temple Owls Play W.Va.U. Tomorrow

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 11.—West Virginia's Mountaineer basketballers will have to flash play superior to anything they've shown thus far if they expect to get back into the win column here Saturday night against Temple's fast-traveling Owls.

The Mountaineers dropped for the first time Monday by Kentucky's "Sugar Bowl" champions, 47 to 38, will stack up against a Temple team that has already beaten championship teams from the Bix Six, Southwest, and Eastern Intercollegiate Conferences. Respectively, they were Oklahoma 42-36; the University of Texas's Longhorns 47-37, and Georgetown, 38 to 28.

Starting time for the game will be 7:30, with the University's Freshmen, featuring the flashy Scotty Hamilton, battling the Charleston Billiards at 6:15, and West Virginia's wrestling team making its first start of the season against Washington and Lee. The wrestling match is expected to start around 8:45.

As for the Varsity basketball game, it will mark the 19th game of a series which was started in 1929. The Owls hold the edge in the series, with 11 triumps.

orthenders Given Edge Over Champs on SS. P. & P. Court

. Va. Teams Busy Tonight; Davis at Allegany Hi Tomorrow

ort Hill high school's basketball am opens defense of one of its rt crowns tonight when the Sen- els tackle LaSalle high at SS. ter & Paul school gym at 8:15 lock with a preliminary at 7:15. t will be the lid-lifter of the mberland city series and will be e 28th meeting of teams repre- ting the two schools dating back the 1926-27 series when the new rt Hill sported the name of Penn enue high.

For the past three years the ies games have been even-break airs, neither being able to sweep annual dual bill, but Fort Hill ds a 16-11 edge since the two ools became court rivals.

The odd contest came about in 8 when after dividing in home d-home tussles, a third game was essary to decide the city title. is playoff engagement went to rt Hill 21-20.

Last year, Fort Hill copped the ener 37-25 but in the return skir- sh dropped to the North Enders -19 for its only setback of the ason. In 1937, there was another lit with the Sentinels winning -25 and then losing 37-27. Other lits occurred in 1930 and 1933.

LaSalle Made Favorite

LaSalle copped both games in 27 and 1928. In 1929, the teams vided while in 1931, LaSalle won o. In 1932, Penn swept the series d after the 1933 split, the South nders won the next six battles.

Holding victories over Beall 35- Alumni 35-31, St. Francis of organtown 42-20, Calvert Hall of altimore 25-14, Gallitzin (Pa.) gh 29-21 and Ridgeley 36-33 and th their only loss a 30-25 setback the hands of College Alumni, the rth Enders will be slightly fav- ed to best Coach "Bobby" Cava- augh's passers.

Another thing in LaSalle's favor the fact that the Blue and Gold oopmen will be playing on their me floor. Fort Hill has won six, nine contests, defeating the Frost- rg State Jayvees 42-38 in two ex- a periods after losing to the home am 22-20, Piedmont 43-25, Alumni 3-29, Grafton 35-34, Piedmont 32- 0, and Keyser 42-29 and losing also Davis twice 39-23 and 36-22.

Other games tonight find Circle- ille at Franklin, Keyser at Pied- ont, Parsons at Petersburg,, Rom- ey at Moorefield, Oakland at Bay- rd, Thomas at Tygarts Valley, Po- mac State at West Liberty and rostburg State at Davis Elkins.

The contests at Franklin, Pied- ont, Petersburg and Moorefield ill be Potomac Valley Conference attles with Circleville, Piedmont, arsons and Romney the favorites.

Davis Here Tomorrow

Tomorrow, Allegany will figure in s second tough game of the week, eeting the Davis (W. Va.) High Wildcats on the Campobello floor.

The Campers, in their last start, ook across Massanutten Military Academy of Woodstock, Va., 40-31, nd hope to remain unbeaten gainst scholastic foes by upsetting he Wildcats riding a five-game inning streak.

A real comparison of the strength f Fort Hill and Allegany should e furnished by tomorrow's tussle. Davis holds two victories over the Sentinels by fairly large margins.

In two other Saturday night tests, Bayard will journey to Circleville or a Potomac Valley Conference en- ounter and Hancock and Berkeley Springs will clash at the latter place.

The SPORT TRAIL

New York, Jan 11 (AP)—Fight night:

The black letters on the pale marquee background spell out: "Boxing tonight—Conn vs. Cooper." Inside the Garden box offices the ticket sellers get ready for either a feast or a famine. Early arrivals stand alone or in groups about the outer lobby.

Worn-out pugs stand about hopefully waiting recognition; old punch collectors, their scarred faces, masked noses and biscuit ears souvenirs of the glory road, their seedy dress a hint that the end was not all glory. The life-sized bronze statute of a fighter, purportedly Joe Gans, flonked by the Muldoon trophy, silently mocks the faded warriors.

The crowd arrives faster now, filing noisily through long, roped-off lanes to the ticket takers. Inside, a pigeon-blue clad special cop intones: "Keep moving, everybody. Find your seat." Nobody pays any attention to him. Managers, fighters, hangers-on and just fans stand or roam about greeting friends, if any, and discussing one subject—fights.

A muffled roar from the arena tells that the preliminaries have started. In the smoke-hazed glare of the ring spotlight two large young men are puffing and wheezing and slugging. The crowd boos lustily if a round passes without some semblance of mayhem. A wiling lad who can't fight a lick provides a humorous interlude with his wild swings which miss his lanky Puerto Rican foe by six feet, and a shrill voice from the gallery ensourages: "Killum Kellum."

The semi-windup pits a huge, awkward lad vaguely resembling Primo Carnera against a well-knot, handy youth from Des Moines named Lee Savold, whose cold eyes and almost casual manner belie his savage style of attack. He closes his opponent's eye with one quick, short hook, never throws a punch unless sure it will land. He left the ring with the respect of the fans. "He was nervous, it was his first time here," explains his spidery little manager, Pinkie George. Savold appeared about as nervous as a ring post.

Now Billy Conn mounts the short steps and ducks through the ropes. His handsome face pictures serenly. He doesn't glance at the stolid Henry Cooper in the opposite corner. Short, tousle-haired, gold-toothed Johnny Ray, Billy's manager, does his worrying for him. He hovers over the nonchalant Billy like a mother chick, wide eyes and washboard brow a study in perpetual apprehension.

The announcer, dapper and verboe, summons fighters for the ringside introductions. They bob through the ropes dolled up in their Sunday best and self-conscious as schoolgirls, make a pivoting bow, walk over to grasp the gloves of each fighter, mumble something, and drop out of sight in the sea of pale faces gazing up from the ringside.

Referee Arthur Donovan calls the fighters to the center of the ring and repeats word-worn instructions, the seconds give one last word of advice and an encouraging pat, then the gong sounds.

Conn dances out, such a handsome, graceful figure that were he in a screen play he would be dubbed a phony. His long left begins to dart out. Bop, bop, bop, he dots the eyes and Cooper's face seems to slowly flatten out before your very eyes like a melting pad of of butter.

Cooper edges stolidly forward, like a Volga Boatman tugging in a rope and facing a driving rain. When he tries to hit the agile Conn he is swinging at the little man who wasn't there.

It goes on for twelve rounds, and the decision is a matter of course.

The unmarked Conn poses for a victory picture, the crowd departs quickly except for stragglers about the press box. Joe Jacobs wanders about disconsolately. "No Galento-Baer bout," he says. "Hear what they done to me? Wouldn't give me a license."

The Garden at last is practically deserted, dark and decolate. Walter St. Denis, Mike Jacobs' publicity man, tucks a bundle of papers under his arm, turns his coat collar up under his sad face, and heads into the lights and chill of Eighth avenue at midnight.

"Good night," he says.

Fight night.

Mountaineer Wrestlers Open with W. & L. Squad

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 11—West Virginia University's wrestling team, expected to improve considerably on its record last winter, makes its first 1940 start here Saturday against Washington and Lee. It will be the first match with the Generals since 1925. The Mountaineers won that year, and also took two other previous matches the two schools have wrestled.

Coach Albert Gwynhe is just about set on his starting lineup. John Sweeney, of Summersville, will be at 121; John Tyson at 129; Paul Satterfield at 136; Bob Hartley 145; John Hammer 156; Ed Kimble or Allen Bertschy 165; Lewis Hatch, 175, and probably Albert (The Tiger) Baisi, heavyweight.

Except for Baisi and Hatch, the latter an outstanding sophomore candidate, the team is virtually an experienced one. Baisi, three years a regular tackle on the football team, came out for wrestling only this winter. His presence is expected to add considerable color to the program, even if he doesn't know much about the sport.

THE Sportlight BY GRANTLAND RICE

CHAMPIONS AND THEIR CHANCES

Los Angeles, Jan. 11—This may be—it can be—the best year for the handicap horses that the turf has known in a long time. Disaster overtook some of the best of the three-year-olds of 1939 but most of them came through sound and ready to race, while the older horses, for the most part, stood up strongly through the campaign. The result is that fifteen or sixteen outstanding candidates, plus at least twenty others that rank just below them, are—or soon will be—in training for the Santa Anita Handicap, the Widener Challenge Cup, the Suburban, the Brooklyn, the Saratoga, the Paumonok, the Massachusetts and other handicap events.

Add to this the fact that, with the coming of the mutuels to New York, the purses for some of these races are likely to be increased. It looks like a big year in this field.

The best of the older horses last year was C. S. Howard's Kayak II that won the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, the Bowie Handicap, the Hollywood Gold Cup, the Continental and the American. This year the Argentine again is favored to win at Santa Anita on March 2—and go on from here. But he will have a terrific struggle trying to keep on top of the heap, for W. L. Brann's Challedon, three-year-old champion of 1939 and twice conqueror of the Howard horse, is moving back toward further clashes with him.

They are not likely to meet at Santa Anita. The continent will separate them that day, I think with Kayak II going to the post here and Challedon striving for the Widener Cup at Hialeah. But they will be looking at the same starter on summer days at Saratoga or on one of the other eastern tracks. I still like Kayak's chances of taking the Maryland horse, in spite of those two defeats for the Argentine last year in special races, one at Narragansett and the other at Pimlico. I have seen him give too many smashing performances to weaken on him. But I know he'll have a struggle.

The Gallant Seabiscuit

There is a gallant and always dangerous Seabiscuit. The old campaigner—now seven years old—was forced out of training last year but he's back—back with most of his old speed and all his old strength and courage. He drew top weights from the handicappers for both the Santa Anita and the Widener.

Another threat may be carried by the sleek Bimelech, E. R. Bradley's 1939 two-year-old monarch and winter book favorite for the Kentucky Derby. Let Bimelech win the roses at Churchhill Downs and crash on to a few more triumphs and the late season will find him tussling with the older horses. Unbeaten as a two-year-old, winner of the Saratoga Special, the Hopeful and the Belmont and Pimlico Futurities, he's red hot as another season looms.

Some of The Others

Challedon—Seabiscuit — Bimelech—those are the main menaces to Kayak II as seen from this observation post in January. But out of the pack right behind them may move one greater than any of them.

This pack includes—in alphabetical order—Bull Lea, Cravat, Eight Thirty, Hash, Heather Broom, Isolator, Lovely Night, Nedayr, Porter's Mite, Sickle T., Technician and Volitant.

Cravat finished a bad third to Challedon and Kayak II in the Pimlico Special last fall but the Townsend B. Martin horse, now five years old, won the Suburban, the Brooklyn and the Jockey Club Gold Cup.

George Widener's Eight Thirty won seven of his ten starts as a three-year-old, including the Saratoga Handicap and the Travers, Wilson and Whitney Stakes.

Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Lovely Night, running in handicap company last year as a three-year-old, won the Butler, the Constitution, the Empire City and the Queens County.

Sickle T., owned by Mrs. B. F. Whitaker now five years old, was in the money ten times in his sixteen starts through 1939. Among his victories were those in the Yonkers Handicap at Empire City and the Champlain and Merchants and Citizens at Saratoga.

They Can Come On

These horses—and the others listed here—had their disappointing days. For some—notably Technician, Heather Broom—Porter's Mite and Volitant—it was a disappointing year.

Technician, winner of the Widener at Hialeah, was liked by many in the Kentucky Derby but failed there and didn't win an important race thereafter, much to the chagrin of his owner, Herbert Woolf, who had won the Derby with Lawrin the year before. Jock Whitney's Heather Broom just missed being a top-flight colt, winning some minor races but finishing third in the Derby and fourth in the Arlington Classic. Bill Boeing's Porter's Mite, one of the very best of the two-year-olds in 1938, faded as a three-year-old. George Bull's Volitant like Heather Broom, just missed. He was second to Technician in the Widener, second to Johnstown in the Wood Memorial, third to Challedon and Gilded Knight in the Preakness.

But they can come on, these horses. Take Seabiscuit. He was a flop as a two-year-old, winning only five times in thirty-five starts. As a three-year-old he showed nothing and was sold by William Woodward to Charlie Howard for about $7,500. It wasn't until he was four years old that he began to hit his true form and he didn't reach the peak until he was five

Thus, one of those three and even four-year-old horses that just missed or missed badly in 1939 may emerge as champion as the 1940 campaign closes out.

Marrino Will Gun for Bigger Game in Next Bout

Baltimore, Jan. 11—Winner over Jerry Zeller in his last start here, Larry Marrino goes gunning for bigger game Monday night at Carlin's.

The Italian heavyweight slugger will take on Johnny Kapovitch in one of the six-round battles on the Bill Boyd-Al Boros program. The latter test will be over the 10-round route.

Marrino, who is a veteran laborer in the ring, came through with a surprise victory over Zeller, knocking out the Fullerton lad. It was Zeller's first defeat.

However, Kapovitch shapes up as a more testing rival. Johnny beat Pop Eye Irwin and Eddie Dreher in his last two battles here, and will take the better record into action.

Zeller will endeavor to get back in a winning stride when he battles Ralph Maggheim in another supporting test.

Two other matches will complete the program, according to Matchmaker Sylvan Bass.

Good Defense Is Best Offense Al Gorton Contends

Panzer College Basketball Coach Uses System Most Coaches Despise

By JAMES P. HACKETT

East Orange, N. J., Jan. 11 (AP)—Big-time college basketball coaches may be astounded at the way Al Gorton teaches the game at little Panzer College, but they'll have to admit it works.

Gorton believes a good defense is better than a good offense, a view in which most coaches don't concur.

Gorton says, "dog your man so he can't pass or receive a pass and he can't score or help a teammate score."

Panzer has won twenty-four straight games to equal a school record set in the 1930-31 seasons. Panzer's last defeat was in December, 1937, when a powerful Long Island University five turned the trick by six points Gorton's team scored one of the seasons big upsets two weeks later by humbling New York University on its own floor. Neither scheduled Panzer this year.

Gorton doesn't put too much stock in the kind of basketball taught by Howard G. Cann at N. Y. U. or Clair Bee at L. I. U. Cann holds that the principle of basketball "was, is and always will be to put the ball through a hoop as often as time will allow." Bee teaches his players to be "ball hawks" on the theory that if you can get the ball away from the other fellow, he can't score and you can.

Of course, Panzer has to score. Gorton has a veteran team which centers its attack around a six-foot, seven-inch center, Herman Knupple, who takes a position near the basket. His teammates feed him the ball, he pivots and drops it in. That's the Panzer offense.

Keyser Turns on Bruce To Win 23-19

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Special)—Keyser high school turned on Bruce of Westernport here tonight and came away with a much sought victory after being kicked around by rivals that were once easy prey. The final score was 23-19 with Keyser leading at the quarter, 4-2; trailing at half time 7-6, and again in front at the third period rest 15-10.

Crogan was high scorer for Keyser with eight points on two fouls and four for seven fouls. Reeves topped Bruce with three field goals.

Joe Murphy Begins Work for Indoor Meet

Baltimore, Jan. 11—Fully recovered from an arduous season on the gridiron, Joe Murphy, University of Maryland sprint star, has started training for the Maryland-Fifth Regiment indoor meet booked here February 10.

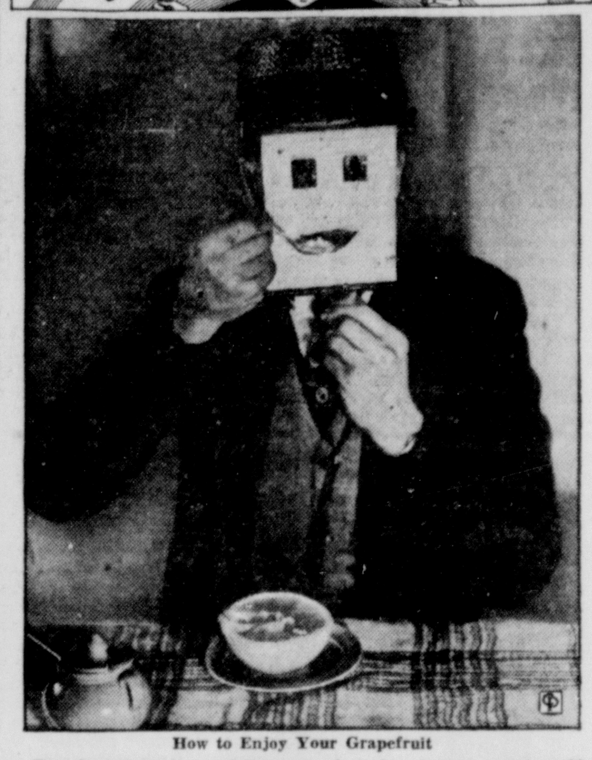

Murphy holds the Southern Conference 100 and 220-yard titles and also runs on the mile relay team. He is looking forward to sprint clashes with outstanding collegian dash men slated to appear here.

Considerable interest is being noted in Jim Kehoe's work since his home-stretch battle with Glenn Cunningham last Saturday in Brooklyn. Kehoe probably will run in the Oriole 660, co-feature with the Governor's Mile in the Armory games.

TODAY'S GOOFY GADGET

How to Enjoy Your Grapefruit

How best to enjoy squirting grapefruit has been a moot problem with inventors for eons. Russell E. Oakes, the demon gadget producer of Waukesha, Wis., has solved the difficulty with a breakfast cap. A curtain, strangely reminiscent of a window shade, is rolled down from the brim of the lightweight hat. Eye holes and a space for the mouth are provided. The shade may be raised and lowered, in rhythm with the movements of the arm of the user, the professor says, thus avoiding the annoying procilivities of the popular breakfast fruit.

Temple Owls Play W.Va.U. Tomorrow

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 11.—West Virginia's Mountaineer basketballers will have to flash play superior to anything they've shown thus far if they expect to get back into the win column here Saturday night against Temple's fast-traveling Owls.

The Mountaineers dropped for the first time Monday by Kentucky's "Sugar Bowl" champions, 47 to 38, will stack up against a Temple team that has already beaten championship teams from the Bix Six, Southwest, and Eastern Intercollegiate Conferences. Respectively, they were Oklahoma 42-36; the University of Texas's Longhorns 47-37, and Georgetown, 38 to 28.

Starting time for the game will be 7:30, with the University's Freshmen, featuring the flashy Scotty Hamilton, battling the Charleston Billiards at 6:15, and West Virginia's wrestling team making its first start of the season against Washington and Lee. The wrestling match is expected to start around 8:45.

As for the Varsity basketball game, it will mark the 19th game of a series which was started in 1929. The Owls hold the edge in the series, with 11 triumps.

"Geronimo!" Call Sheet Shows Strange Items

To know what is going on in any Hollywood studio, all you have to do is glance at the day's "call sheet" which hangs just outside the gate. This lists scenes and persons or things to act in them. When "Geronimo!" the Paramount picture is due Sunday at the Strand theater, was produced on the Paramount stage, the call board one day contained the crisp notation: "Six Apaches with practical tomahawks." "Practical," in studio parlance, is anything that works or does not look phoney. On the "Union Pacific" sheet there appeared one morning, "One Practical Preacher." Cecil B. De Mille, the director, thought it lacked reverence. He had the line changed to "One Preacher Type, in Clerical Garb."

That everything in "Geronimo!" is "practical" is indicated by the action of the film. Hand-to-hand fight scenes show rattling rifles and battling savages and soldiers, Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine, William Henry, Ralph Morgan, Chief Thunder Cloud, Gene Lockhart, Marjorie Gateson, Kitty Kelly and many others are in the cast.

The firm tells the story of the last great Indian uprising which took place in the Great Southwest territory purchased by the United States from Mexico.

"My Heart Belongs To Daddy," sang Mary Martin in last season's musical comedy, "Leave It To Me," and promptly made the song and herself a sensation of the nation! Now Mary's "heart" belongs to "The Great Victor Herbert," in Paramount's musical romance of the same name, which is now playing at the Strand theater and which continues through tomorrow.

Teamed with Allan Jones and Walter Connolly, Mary, the Texas cyclone, will be seen as the toast of Broadway in the days when Victor Herbert ruled New York and the whole world was singing his immortal love songs. Her romance with Jones, the singing idol of his day, in Herbert's greatest productions and their thrilling experiences in the show world of the gay days at the turn of the century—highlight the picture. As strong on music as it is on romance, "The Great Victor Herbert" brings back to the screen some of the best-loved of all Herbert's songs, including "Kiss Me Again," "A Kiss in the Dark," and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life."

"Remember" Now Showing at Maryland

At a time when the world needs so desperately to laugh, one of the most completely satisfying entertainments of this or any other year arrived yesterday to win enthusiastic audience approval at the Maryland theater.

It is "Remember?" a picture you won't soon forget, starring Robert Taylor and Greer Garson, with Lew Ayres. Flawlessly cast, the picture was given the deft direction of Norman Z. McLeod who made the "Topper" pictures, and a fast-action screen play by McLeod and Corey Ford, national magazine writer and humorist. Dealing with the trials and tribulations of modern married life, the story is highlighted by bright dialogue, hilarious comedy situations and a warmly human romantic theme.

Taylor has never been seen to better advantage than in the role of an ambitious advertising executive, wrapped up in his job, who falls in love with his best pal's fiancee "at sight," complicating all their lives. A delightful surprise for moviegoers who were entranced by her memorable performance in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," Miss Garson exhibits a rare talent for comedy and is as vivacious and dashing a modern girl as she was a gentle and charming "Mrs. Chips." Ayres rounds out a threesome that is doing something every minute, with never a dull moment.

Milt Britton Orchestra Monday

Coming to the stage of the Maryland theater Monday and Tuesday will be America's craziest orchestra, Milt Britton the clown prince of swing and his famous orchestra in "The Crazy Show of 1940," starring Tommy Rafferty, Joe Britton, Chubby Silvers and others.

Wins Raves In "Charlie McCarthy, Detective"

You'll generally find Edgar Bergen, between scenes, wearing fancy boots and smoking a ten-cent corncob pipe. He wears the boots because he likes them. And he smokes the pipe because he likes it.

Which doesn't mean that Edgar has gone Hollywood.

Even though his income is said to be reckoned in stratospheric figures, Bergen has not changed since he played the five-a-day vaudeville circuits wondering where his next dummy was coming from.

A few years ago Bergen was practically an unknown. Vaudeville was dead. He couldn't get a job in pictures or on the air. What little money he earned he eked out by appearing in night clubs. Today he is rated one of the highest paid performers in the world.

Bergen has just completed his fourth picture, Universal's "Charlie McCarthy, Detective," which comes to the Liberty Theatre tomorrow. He has been steadily "on the air" for the past three years. His income from the "by-products" — Charlie McCarthy dolls, comic strips, etc., some fifteen in all, is probably equal to that of a first-class screen star's salary.

Which seems pretty good, concidering that his entire investment in the business was $35, the sum paid a Chicago woodcarver, Theodore Mack, for the image which has become famous all over the world as Charlie McCarthy.

Western Movie Has New Menace

Adventures of a handsome, hard-riding, straight-shooting ranch foreman, and his desperate struggle with a new menace to the peace of the western frontier—munitions smugglers—are said to be found in "Chip of the Flying U," Universal action drama starting today at the Garden Theatre.

Johnny Mack Brown has the starring role in the famous story which is described as blending comedy, romance and unexpected thrills. Featured in the supporting cast are Bob Baker, singing star; Fuzzy Knight, cowboy comedian; Doris Weston and The Texas Rangers, popular radio musicians. Character roles are carried by Forrest Taylor, Anthony Warde, Karl Hackett, Henry Hall and Ferris Taylor.

J. M. Kerrigan credits "the luck of the Irish" together with early training at the famous Abbey Theatre in Dublin, with helping him along the road to success as an actor.

Playing a featured role in "Two Bright Boys," Universal picture which co-stars Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew today at the Garden Theatre, Kerrigan was once a famous football star at Belvidere College in Ireland. He has played in 73 films since coming to Hollywood.

"Southward Ho" and "Good Girls Go to Paris"

Opening today at the Embassy Theater is the double feature attraction "Southward Ho" starring Roy Rogers, and featuring pretty Mary Hart in the supporting role. The second feature will be "Good Girls Go to Paris". The film is said to be a frantic, romantic laughing spree from start to finish, with Walter Connolly, Alan Curtis, Joan Perry and Isabel Jeans heading the large supporting cast.

Alexander Hall, who gui[des] co-stars in their first film, [Le]son's sensational "There's A[n] Woman," also directed their coming comedy. Gladys [Sw]and Ken England penn[ed] script, said to be one of th[e] est ever written in Hollywo[od]

To The Theatergoers of Cumberland and Vicinity:

Never before in the history of talking pictures, has there been an attraction of such merit as "The Great Victor Herbert" now showing at the Strand Theatre. It is without a doubt the greatest musical of all time. During its action, twenty-eight of the famous Victor Herbert songs are introduced by Allan Jones, Mary Martin and Suzanna Foster. Walter Connolly soars to new heights in the role of the great composer.

It is truly a picture that every music lover will thoroughly enjoy and the story is filled with heart warming moments and laughter.

Superbly acted, magnificently produced, we of the Strand urge you to see "The Great Victor Herbert." It is truly a masterpiece of cinema art.

Respectfully,
CARL B. SHERRED,

"Geronimo!" Call Sheet Shows Strange Items

To know what is going on in any Hollywood studio, all you have to do is glance at the day's "call sheet" which hangs just outside the gate. This lists scenes and persons or things to act in them. When "Geronimo!" the Paramount picture is due Sunday at the Strand theater, was produced on the Paramount stage, the call board one day contained the crisp notation: "Six Apaches with practical tomahawks." "Practical," in studio parlance, is anything that works or does not look phoney. On the "Union Pacific" sheet there appeared one morning, "One Practical Preacher." Cecil B. De Mille, the director, thought it lacked reverence. He had the line changed to "One Preacher Type, in Clerical Garb."

That everything in "Geronimo!" is "practical" is indicated by the action of the film. Hand-to-hand fight scenes show rattling rifles and battling savages and soldiers. Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine, William Henry, Ralph Morgan, Chief Thunder Cloud, Gene Lockhart, Marjorie Gateson, Kitty Kelly and many others are in the cast.

The firm tells the story of the last great Indian uprising which took place in the Great Southwest territory purchased by the United States from Mexico.

"My Heart Belongs To Daddy," sang Mary Martin in last season's musical comedy, "Leave It To Me," and promptly made the song and herself a sensation of the nation! Now Mary's "heart" belongs to "The Great Victor Herbert," in Paramount's musical romance of the same name, which is now playing at the Strand theater and which continues through tomorrow.

Teamed with Allan Jones and Walter Connolly, Mary, the Texas cyclone, will be seen as the toast of Broadway in the days when Victor Herbert ruled New York and the whole world was singing his immortal love songs. Her romance with Jones, the singing idol of his day, in Herbert's greatest productions and their thrilling experiences in the show world of the gay days at the turn of the century—highlight the picture. As strong on music as it is on romance, "The Great Victor Herbert" brings back to the screen some of the best-loved of all Herbert's songs, including "Kiss Me Again," "A Kiss in the Dark," and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life."

"Remember" Now Showing at Maryland

At a time when the world needs so desperately to laugh, one of the most completely satisfying entertainments of this or any other year arrived yesterday to win enthusiastic audience approval at the Maryland theater.

It is "Remember?" a picture you won't soon forget, starring Robert Taylor and Greer Garson, with Lew Ayres. Flawlessly cast, the picture was given the deft direction of Norman Z. McLeod who made the "Topper" pictures, and a fast-action screen play by McLeod and Corey Ford, national magazine writer and humorist. Dealing with the trials and tribulations of modern married life, the story is highlighted by bright dialogue, hilarious comedy situations and a warmly human romantic theme.

Taylor has never been seen to better advantage than in the role of an ambitious advertising executive, wrapped up in his job, who falls in love with his best pal's fiancee "at sight," complicating all their lives. A delightful surprise for moviegoers who were entranced by her memorable performance in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," Miss Garson exhibits a rare talent for comedy and is as vivacious and dashing a modern girl as she was a gentle and charming "Mrs. Chips." Ayres rounds out a threesome that is doing something every minute, with never a dull moment.

Milt Britton Orchestra Monday

Coming to the stage of the Maryland theater Monday and Tuesday will be America's craziest orchestra, Milt Britton the clown prince of swing and his famous orchestra in "The Crazy Show of 1940," starring Tommy Rafferty, Joe Britton, Chubby Silvers and others.

Wins Raves In "Charlie McCarthy, Detective"

You'll generally find Edgar Bergen, between scenes, wearing fancy boots and smoking a ten-cent corncob pipe. He wears the boots because he likes them. And he smokes the pipe because he likes it.

Which doesn't mean that Edgar has gone Hollywood.

Even though his income is said to be reckoned in stratospheric figures, Bergen has not changed since he played the five-a-day vaudeville circuits wondering where his next dummy was coming from.

A few years ago Bergen was practically an unknown. Vaudeville was dead. He couldn't get a job in pictures or on the air. What little money he earned he eked out by appearing in night clubs. Today he is rated one of the highest paid performers in the world.

Bergen has just completed his fourth picture, Universal's "Charlie McCarthy, Detective," which comes to the Liberty Theatre tomorrow. He has been steadily "on the air" for the past three years. His income from the "by-products" — Charlie McCarthy dolls, comic strips, etc., some fifteen in all, is probably equal to that of a first-class screen star's salary.

Which seems pretty good, concidering that his entire investment in the business was $35, the sum paid a Chicago woodcarver, Theodore Mack, for the image which has become famous all over the world as Charlie McCarthy.

Western Movie Has New Menace

Adventures of a handsome, hard-riding, straight-shooting ranch foreman, and his desperate struggle with a new menace to the peace of the western frontier—munitions smugglers—are said to be found in "Chip of the Flying U," Universal action drama starting today at the Garden Theatre.

Johnny Mack Brown has the starring role in the famous story which is described as blending comedy, romance and unexpected thrills. Featured in the supporting cast are Bob Baker, singing star; Fuzzy Knight, cowboy comedian; Doris Weston and The Texas Rangers, popular radio musicians. Character roles are carried by Forrest Taylor, Anthony Warde, Karl Hackett, Henry Hall and Ferris Taylor.

J. M. Kerrigan credits "the luck of the Irish" together with early training at the famous Abbey Theatre in Dublin, with helping him along the road to success as an actor.

Playing a featured role in "Two Bright Boys," Universal picture which co-stars Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew today at the Garden Theatre, Kerrigan was once a famous football star at Belvidere College in Ireland. He has played in 73 films since coming to Hollywood.

"Southward Ho" and "Good Girls Go to Paris"

Opening today at the Embassy Theater is the double feature attraction "Southward Ho" starring Roy Rogers, and featuring pretty Mary Hart in the supporting role. The second feature will be "Good Girls Go to Paris". The film is said to be a frantic, romantic laughing spree from start to finish, with Walter Connolly, Alan Curtis, Joan Perry and Isabel Jeans heading the large supporting cast.

Alexander Hall, who guid co-stars in their first film, J son's sensational "There's A Woman," also directed thei coming comedy. Gladys and Ken England penn script, said to be one of th est ever written in Hollywo

Anti-Lynching Bill Passed by House 252 to 131

Washington Jan. 11 (AP) — The House approved one of its perennial election-year favoring the anti-lunching bill, Wednesday and sent it to the Senate where an unyielding southern filibuster was set to kill it.

The vote of 252 to 131 followed a discussion in which Rep. Rankin (D-Miss) asserted that the measure was "nothing but the renewal of a vicious attack on the white people of the southern states," coming not from the Republicans, he said, but from the Democrats.

All southern efforts to amend the measure were crushed, under a massive voting combination of Republicans and Democrats from the north and west. The same fate met an effort by Rep. Hoffman (R-Mich), inveterate foe of the CIO, to attach provisions intended to restrict picketing.

The single change accepted was offered by the author of the measure, Rep. Gavagan (D-NY), who represents the district of which New York city's teeming negro section, Harlem, is a part. He proposed the elimination of language making the bill inapplicable to any violence resulting from a labor disturbance. Gavagan explained that the provision was unnecessary because the bill could not possibly be interpreted as applying to labor situations.

The bill—denounced by southerners as impractical, unenforceable and unconstitutional — seeks to eliminate lynchings by imposing penalties on peace officers negligent in protecting their prisoners from lynch-mobs and by making the municipalities and counties liable for damages.

Forrest B. Poling Has an Operation

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Forrest B. Poling, assistant West Virginia attorney general and state commander of the American Legion, underwent an operation for an abscessed lung here in the U. S. government hospital at Mt. Alto.

Mrs. Poling reported her husband's condition as "just fair."

He was ill with pneumonia at his home in Charleston, W. Va., before going to the Washington hospital.

PATTERN 9300

Join the charm school of fashion with this attractive, slenderizing matron's frock, Marian Martin's Pattern 9300. Any smart woman knows what a full-length panel will do for her figure—it seems to actually trim the extra pounds away. The effect is heightened by an unusually long, scalloped collar. This style is very simple to cut and stitch, with no waistline seams—just all-around darts. Have comfortably flared or neatly puffed sleeves. If your fabric is striped, the pockets, cuff bands and collar are striking cut on a crossgrain. Or make the collar and sleeve bands in crisp contrast. Order this pattern today!

Pattern 9300 may be ordered only in women's sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4½ yards 35-inch fabric.

Girl Domestic Takes Life with Pistol

Sutton, W. Va., Jan. 11 (AP) — Unice Carr, 16, killed herself with a small pistol after first telephoning a neighbor that "something was wrong," Magistrate J. Lee Fox announced after an inquest.

Fox said the young woman, who had been working as a domestic at a home in nearby Springtown, left a note directing disposition of her personal effects.

MATE, 70, MUST PAY

Mrs. Erika Field

Pending trial of cross-suits for separation, William B. Osgood Field, 70-year-old financier, has been ordered by Brooklyn, N. Y., appellate court to pay $850 monthly alimony and $5,000 counsel fees to Mrs. Erika Johanna Sylvia Segnitz Field, 34. She says Field induced her to come to America from Germany in 1935 and they were married in 1936.

Hoover Reveals Plans To Protect 430 Vital Industrial Plants

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Plans for the protection of 430 vital industrial plants against sabotage and espionage were disclosed here in testimony by J. Edgar Hoover before a House appropriations subcommittee.

Revealing other secrets of the nation-wide spy hunt of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Hoover said reliable informants had made complaints of sabotage against certain large ocean liners.

In support of a $1,475,000 deficiency for the FBI, approved by the appropriations committee, he also told the committee on Nov. 30 that plans for an experimental army bomber had been stolen—but recovered—from a west coast aviation factory.

Four days later, FBI officials said, the case was closed with the sentencing of a Los Angeles man to six months in jail for the theft.

Hoover also told the committee that:

Complaints relating to the national defense had increased from 250 in the fiscal year 1938 to 1,651 in 1939 and might reach 78,000—or 214 per day—this year.

Takes a Daily Dip

Williamsburg, Ky., Jan. 11 (AP)—It doesn't seem to get too cold for Kentucky's human "Polar bear" and his morning dip.

At the last checkup—just before the wave of sub-zero temperatures rolled over the state—Ray Gant, 26, still was breaking ice in the Cumberland river to maintain his record of a daily swim for four years.

Even when he goes visiting out-of-the-state, Gant manages to keep his swimming record going. When he attended a football game near Chicago last November he swam in Lake Michigan—after breaking ice.

When Kentucky and Tennessee football teams clash in Knoxville, Tenn., Gant swims across the Tennessee river. Why he does this wasn't made clear.

Williamsburg, Ky., Jan. 11 (AP)—It doesn't seem to get too cold for Kentucky's human "Polar bear" and his morning dip.

At the last checkup—just before the wave of sub-zero temperatures rolled over the state—Ray Gant, 26, still was breaking ice in the Cumberland river to maintain his record of a daily swim for four years.

Even when he goes visiting out-of-the-state, Gant manages to keep his swimming record going. When he attended a football game near Chicago last November he swam in Lake Michigan—after breaking ice.

When Kentucky and Tennessee football teams clash in Knoxville, Tenn., Gant swims across the Tennessee river. Why he does this wasn't made clear.

Frostburg Boy Scouts Receive New Charter

Certificates Presented to Several Scouts by Raymond C. Lalor

Frostburg, Jan. 11 — Troop 45 of the Frostburg Boy Scouts launched its seventh year of scouting Tuesday night at State Teachers College with the presentation of the new charter by Commissioner Lloyd Keller of the Potomac Council. Raymond C. Lalor, scout executive for the Potomac Council, presented certificates to Howard Ward, scoutmaster; John Kyle and Lloyd Stevens, assistant scoutmasters. William Fuller was appointed a junior assistant scoutmaster; Maurice Matteson, Jr., and Karl Hartig received patrol leader's warrants and John Simons received a senior patrol leader's warrant.

The troop committee cards were presented by William J. Elvin to F. Earl Kreitzburg, Rudolph Nickel, Newman A. Wade, the Rev. Edgar W. Beckett and Ira Langulttig.

Parents of troop members and other guests witnessed a demonstration by the scouts and were entertained by Prof. Maurice Matteson who, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Matteson, rendered "ballads". Joseph Shockey, trumpeter, and Kenneth Wilburn, guitar player, were the soloists of the evening.

The roster of troop includes Robert Beckett, Karl Hartig, Herman Humbertson, Harry Keller, Maurive Matteson, Jr., James Neilson, Samuel Pfaff, David Price, Kenneth Price, Jack Sharer, John C. Simons, William Sonnenberg, Robert Wilson, Fred E. Winebrenner, John G. Beall, James E. Jenkins, John B. Jenkins, Harry Neilson, Harold Price, George Griffith, James Thompson and Donald Truly.

A large number of local Boy Scouts, under direction of Commissioner Harrison S. Givens and G. Gale Townsend will go to New Germany Saturday for skiing.

Mrs. Hartig Dies

Mrs. Katherine (Dilfer) Hartig, 87, widow of Martin Hartig, died Thursday morning at her home, 35 West Loo street, after a brief illness with paralysis. She is survived by the following children: Mrs. Henry Ort, Mrs. I. L. Ritter, Miss Emma and Charles and Philip Hartig, this city, and Mrs. C. A. Hauser, Philadelphia; two grandchildren, Paul Hauser, Summit, N. J., and Mrs. Edward Scoggan, Sarasota, Fla., and one great grandchild, Paul Hauser, Jr., Summit, N. J.

Mrs. Hartig, a native of Cumberland, was a lifelong member of the Reformed church and was a member of the Ladies Aid Society of Salem church, Broadway. Her husband, a prominent citizen of this city, died twenty-eight years ago.

Certificates Presented to Several Scouts by Raymond C. Lalor

Frostburg, Jan. 11 — Troop 45 of the Frostburg Boy Scouts launched its seventh year of scouting Tuesday night at State Teachers College with the presentation of the new charter by Commissioner Lloyd Keller of the Potomac Council. Raymond C. Lalor, scout executive for the Potomac Council, presented certificates to Howard Ward, scoutmaster; John Kyle and Lloyd Stevens, assistant scoutmasters. William Fuller was appointed a junior assistant scoutmaster; Maurice Matteson, Jr., and Karl Hartig received patrol leader's warrants and John Simons received a senior patrol leader's warrant.

The troop committee cards were presented by William J. Elvin to F. Earl Kreitzburg, Rudolph Nickel, Newman A. Wade, the Rev. Edgar W. Beckett and Ira Langulttig.

Parents of troop members and other guests witnessed a demonstration by the scouts and were entertained by Prof. Maurice Matteson who, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Matteson, rendered "ballads". Joseph Shockey, trumpeter, and Kenneth Wilburn, guitar player, were the soloists of the evening.

The roster of troop includes Robert Beckett, Karl Hartig, Herman Humbertson, Harry Keller, Maurive Matteson, Jr., James Neilson, Samuel Pfaff, David Price, Kenneth Price, Jack Sharer, John C. Simons, William Sonnenberg, Robert Wilson, Fred E. Winebrenner, John G. Beall, James E. Jenkins, John B. Jenkins, Harry Neilson, Harold Price, George Griffith, James Thompson and Donald Truly.

A large number of local Boy Scouts, under direction of Commissioner Harrison S. Givens and G. Gale Townsend will go to New Germany Saturday for skiing.

Girl Scouts Map Program Plans

Week-End Trip Slated To New Germany

The Girl Scouts Leaders' Association will sponsor a Mothers' Day tea for mothers of girl scouts in this locality, it was decided at a meeting held Wednesday evening at Girl Scout headquarters. The scouts of each troop will entertain at separate parties on the afternoon of May 12.

Miss Florence A. Schlott, local director, announced that the eighth and final session of the training course would be a week-end of outdoor activities at New Germany January 28 and 29. She also stated that all leaders who have taken the introductory and group leadership course should participate in order to get full credit for this course.

To Help Feed Birds

It was suggested by Mrs. Fred Hetzel that, in the interest of preserving birdlife, the Association should take advantage of the free grain obtainable from the district game warden and maintain feeding stations locally.

A plan to establish a feeding ground at New Germany during the week-end outing was approved. The work will be done in cooperation with State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte who has appealed to interested groups for assistance in preserving birdlife.

Miss Phyllis McElfish reported what the Marionette Guild will return to Cumberland to produce two shows at the West Side School March 12. "Hans Brinker and the Silver Skates" will be presented in the afternoon and the "Count of Monte Cristo" in the evening.

Movies Shown

A movie of the 1939 Armistice Day parade held in Cumberland, in which Girl Scouts participated, was shown by Fred E. Harrison and Charles Bantz.

The following were present: Misses Florence A. Schlott, Pauline Fisher, Phyllis McElfish, Myrtle Lee, Louise Sansbury, Grace Moore, Barrelville; Edna Elliot, Helen Porter, Lonaconing; Mesdames Peter William Smith, H. W. Reese, Wyand Doerner; R. B. Stanford, James Bishop and Fred Z. Hetzel.

CHAPTER ONE

ROMANY HAILE, at the end of what she was determined should be the last idle summer of her young life, looked up from the radio magazine she was reading and saw that she was no longer passing through fields of corn and wheat.

At last, Chicago! Her amazing gray-green eyes with the black sweeping lashes were a little deeper and darker with her inner excitement. A faint tinge of pink touched the sun tan of her oval face.

In the suitcase beside her was her diploma from Indiana university, and in her purse five dollars. Aside from that, she told herself whimsically, her assets were nil. Unless you took into consideration the fact that she was beautiful and twenty.

Powdering her small, slender nose, and adding a little more red to full, tender lips, Romany reached up and took down the dark green feathered pancake hat Aunt Cecelia had sent from Paris. She sat it upon her sleek, jet black hair with a flourish. A silly but divine chapeau!

As she stood up in the closely fitting gray-green jacket and matching swing skirt that barely touched her knees, it could be seen that she was tall and slender, long limbed and graceful.

Stepping off the train, Romany selected her bag and hat box from the porter, waving away a redcap who reached for the luggage. She was certain she needed the few pennies much more than he did, even if she didn't look it. The colored man gave her a disappointed look and shrugged, turning his attention to a fat man with two sample cases.

Down the platform Romany paused at the station door looking for the familiar face of her best friend and college room mate, Charlotte O'Neil. But Cholly did not seem to be there. At that moment her eyes fell upon a young man with a microphone who had stepped quickly forward and motioned to her.

She recognized him at once as Brent Nelson, announcer and master of ceremonies of the "Hello Stranger" program. Romany would have hurried away, but an assistant had his hand on her arm. There was no escape, without being rude. Nelson smiled, shaking her dark green gloved hand:

"Welcome, stranger! Will you say a few words for us?"

Romany swallowed, quickly getting her bearings. Afraid of a microphone? Ridiculous! That was what she had come to Chicago for. The famous announcer was turning on the full power of his charm to put her at ease.

"Our first customer this evening, folk, is a beautiful young lady. Very, very beautiful. Jack, run home and get my book of superlatives! May we have your name, please?"

Romany found her voice.

"Romany—Romany Haile."

"Lovely name—Romany. Gypsy. And lovely black hair and a sun tan to go with it, too. A shame we haven't got television over here at the station. Where are you from, Romany?"

"Leeville, Indiana."

"Nice little town. I've been through there. On your way to school somewhere, I'll bet."

"No, I graduated from Indiana university this spring."

"Well, bless my old whiskers!" Nelson beamed and shook her hand again. "My old alma mater! I must have been getting out of Indiana U just about the time you went in. You can take it from me, folk, we grow the most beautiful co-eds in the world out around Indiana. Why did you come to Chicago, Miss Haile? To visit?"

Romany by that time was feeling quite at home. She smiled, wrinkling her nose, and Brent Nelson's susceptible heart beat a little faster.

"You mustn't laugh at me," Romany lowered her voice, "and I'll tell you."

"Laugh! I should say not," Brent assured her. "Come on, tell us."

"Well," Romany confided, "I came to Chicago to get on the radio."

The crowd roared.

"It certainly didn't take you long," Nelson chuckled. "Is this your first experience before a mike?"

"The very first."

"Well, Romany, we pause to predict right here that it won't be your last. You have a lovely speaking voice, poise, beauty—everything it takes, I should say, to break into radio."

There was applause from the audience.

"Thank you, Romany sighed. "I hope you're right."

"What branch of radio are you interested in?"

Romany looked a little self-conscious.

"I want to be a dramatic actress."

"Fine! You'll make it," Nelson assured her. "I bet you got that yen playing in the dramatic club at Indiana."

"I'm afraid I did," she admitted.

"So did I," the announcer laughed, and was interrupted by an alarm clock going off in a box beside him.

Romany looking surprised, stepped back.

"The prize!" Nelson reached into his pocket and took out an envelope. "This is your lucky night, Miss Haile. You get the thirty-five dollars that Haller's Desserts presents on this program every Saturday evening."

"Thirty fi—five dollars!" Romany was so thunderstruck that Nelson laughed heartily as the crowd applauded. She thanked him when she caught her breath, unable to believe her good fortune.

At that moment she looked up to see Cholly jumping up and down with excitement close by. Nelson extended his hand again:

"We thank you very much, Miss Haile, for this Haller interview, and may we tell you we'll all be hoping your dreams come true in Chicago. If you're ever around the Interstate Broadcasting building, run in and say 'Hello,' and we'll talk about Indiana U. How's that?"

"I'd love it—and thank you." Romany smiled and hurried away to join Charlotte.

"Cholly!" She held the envelope out. "You look in it. I'm afraid it isn't real."

Cholly embraced her excitedly.

"Aren't you the lucky thing? I just can't believe it! And you were wonderful, Romany, really you were! I'd have choked to death. You were so natural."

"Was I really?" Romany asked breathlessly. "Oh, I hope so! Isn't Brent Nelson wonderful? I'd no idea he was so handsome."

"He is terribly good looking for a blond," Cholly agreed. "But I like 'em tall and dark."

"You wouldn't be thinking of Terry O'Rourke," Romany handed Cholly the hatbox and they walked out of the station.

"That same." Cholly shook her red curly head dubiously, and her blue eyes grew a little more tender. "The Irish divil! And he hasn't changed a bit."

She recognized him at once as Brent Nelson.

"If he had" (Romany fished for her handbag) "you probably would have another boy friend. It's the maternal instinct in you, my child."

They settled in the back seat of the bus that was to take them to Aunt Cecelia's apartment on South Shore drive near Seventy-second street.

"Explain that last crack." Cholly turned to Romany, half smiling. "What do you mean, I probably would have another boy friend?"

Romany looked down at the serious little round face with the adorable freckles bridging the tip-tilted nose, and a warm feeling of affection for her old friend swept her. She touched her hand fleetingly.

"Oh," she said wisely, "if Terry weren't such a child, and you didn't have to worry all the time about whether he was going to get into some kind of a mess, you'd snap out of it."

"I—don't want to snap out of it." Cholly looked out the window unhappily. "I love him. He—he's just exactly like Pop. The sweetest thing that ever lived. But he doesn't take anything seriously."

"You're just like your mother," Romany sighed. "I spent last evening with her. She told me to tell you she hadn't heard from your father and that she had no idea where he is. The kids are well. All seven of 'em."

Cholly bit her lip:

"Pop's gone away twice before. Once he was gone six months."

"Your mother told me. And," Romany hesitated, coming to the hardest part of her message, "your mother said she didn't know what they'd do if you couldn't send a little money. I told her I was sure you could, since you wouldn't have any rent to pay staying with me at Aunt Cissie's."

"I sent her ten dollars yesterday," Cholly swallowed. "Poor darlin'. It was wonderful of your aunt to invite me to live with you at her place. That'll just about save them from starvation."

"Aunt Cissie is an angel," said Romany. "If it hadn't been for her I never would have gotten through college. She has given me a charge account at the grocers and druggists, too."

"Are you lucky!" sighed Cholly. "With the thirty-five dollars you got at the broadcast tonight, you're practically a plutocrat."

"It's the first time I ever enjoyed the sound of an alarm clock," Romany laughed.

"That reminds me." Cholly jumped. "What time is it? Oh—it's after eight." She looked at Romany's wrist watch. "I forgot to tell you, we have a double date."

"Well, thanks for giving me a little notice. And who, may I ask, are the lucky men, if it isn't a secret?"

Fulcher Smith Attends Frederick Game Meeting

Fulcher P. Smith, a member of the state game and inland fish commission, attended the annual meeting of the Frederick County Fish and Game Protective Association at Frederick Wednesday night.

Mr. Smith spoke at the meeting, along with U. S. Senator George L. Radcliffe, Representative William D. Byron, State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte and Secretary of State Francis Petrott, representing Governor O'Conor.

Two Philadelphia Youths Nabbed Here for Theft

Two Philadelphia, Pa., youths, about 18 years old, were lodged in the city jail last night pending their removel today to Philadelphia to face a charge of larceny.

The youths, who gave their names as Bernard Campbell and Walter Mancinelli, are wanted for stealing about $900 in Philadelphia, police said.

Police, McIntyre Win In City Service Loop

City Police apprehended Al Tomsko's Super Market team and Carl McIntyre's Grocers, paced by Frank Bareis, butchered the Swift outfit in the only sweeps of recent City Service League matches at the Savoy. In the other frays Charlton's Transfers took Liberty Milk for a 2-1 ride and Queen City Dairy whipped Bowling Green by the same score.

Bareis's 212-524 was highest for the evening while George Berry, of the Queen City, was a close second with a 520 set. Other team leaders were Firlie, Swift 467; Tyler, Super Market 400; "Diddy" Stitcher, City Police 421; Hyde, Bowling Green 389; White, Liberty Milk, 464; and Simmons, Charlton Brothers 460. ## Week-End Trip Slated To New Germany

The Girl Scouts Leaders' Association will sponsor a Mothers' Day tea for mothers of girl scouts in this locality, it was decided at a meeting held Wednesday evening at Girl Scout headquarters. The scouts of each troop will entertain at separate parties on the afternoon of May 12.

Miss Florence A. Schlott, local director, announced that the eighth and final session of the training course would be a week-end of outdoor activities at New Germany January 28 and 29. She also stated that all leaders who have taken the introductory and group leadership course should participate in order to get full credit for this course.

To Help Feed Birds

It was suggested by Mrs. Fred Hetzel that, in the interest of preserving birdlife, the Association should take advantage of the free grain obtainable from the district game warden and maintain feeding stations locally.

A plan to establish a feeding ground at New Germany during the week-end outing was approved. The work will be done in cooperation with State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte who has appealed to interested groups for assistance in preserving birdlife.

Miss Phyllis McElfish reported what the Marionette Guild will return to Cumberland to produce two shows at the West Side School March 12. "Hans Brinker and the Silver Skates" will be presented in the afternoon and the "Count of Monte Cristo" in the evening.

Movies Shown

A movie of the 1939 Armistice Day parade held in Cumberland, in which Girl Scouts participated, was shown by Fred E. Harrison and Charles Bantz.

The following were present: Misses Florence A. Schlott, Pauline Fisher, Phyllis McElfish, Myrtle Lee, Louise Sansbury, Grace Moore, Barrelville; Edna Elliot, Helen Porter, Lonaconing; Mesdames Peter William Smith, H. W. Reese, Wyand Doerner; R. B. Stanford, James Bishop and Fred Z. Hetzel.

Mission Society Holds Meeting

"Stewardship" Discussed By Tunnelton Organization

Tunnelton, W. Va., Jan. 11—The Women's Foreign Missionary Society met Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Arden Halbritter with Mrs. J. V. Gainer as joint hostess.

Mrs. W. H. Pentony presided over the meeting and the theme was "Stewardship."

Mrs. Thomas Field was in charge of the program and Mrs. G. C. Wolfe had charge of the devotional services.

Talks were given by Mrs. Lynn Howard and Mrs. G. W. Reidler; Mrs. Reidler also sang a solo, accompanied by her daughter, Orpha Alice Reidler, at the piano; and Mrs. J. F. Graham read a letter from Miss Julia Bonafield, a missionary to China for 50 years.

Those attending the meeting were: Mrs. G. C. Wolfe, Mrs. J. F. Graham, Mrs. Lynn Howard, Mrs. Alonzo Wiles, Miss Lydia Bolyard, Mrs. Earle Carlson and daughter Joan, Mrs. W. H. Pentony, Mrs. Wilbert Wiles, Mrs. G. W. Reidler, Mrs. E. C. Maier, Mrs. A. H. Halbritter, Mrs. U. G. Taylor, Mrs. Raymond Hartman, Mrs. Thomas Field, Mrs. Halbritter and Mrs. Gainer.

Guests were: Mrs. N. W. Montgomery, Mrs. G. H. Keck, and Miss Orpha Alice Reidler.

Class Meeting

The Sunday school class of the local Methodist church, taught by Mrs. Thomas Field, held a meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Mary Betty Wiles with Miss Marianna McKenney as joint hostesses. A short business session was held following which a program and games were enjoyed. At the close of the evening refreshments were served.

Personal Mention

The Rev. Earle N. Carlson attended a meeting of the Workers' Conference at Phillipi, Wednesday.

Mrs. Oscar Rhodes is reported ill at her home in the Campground section.

Mrs. C. N. Matlick of the Marquess section is a patient in the City hospital, Grafton, where she has undergone an operation for gall bladder. Her condition is serious.

Miss Helen Maier has returned to her employment in Charleston, after a visit here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Maier.

Will West is reported seriously ill and confined to his home in the Mt. View section.

The pace at which expectation of life in the United States increased from 1910 to 1930 has slackened in the past few years, although the trend continues upward.

PARADISE IS HERE

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

She recognized him at once as Brent Nelson.

CHAPTER ONE

ROMANY HAILE, at the end of what she was determined should be the last idle summer of her young life, looked up from the radio magazine she was reading and saw that she was no longer passing through fields of corn and wheat.

At last, Chicago! Her amazing gray-green eyes with the black sweeping lashes were a little deeper and darker with her inner excitement. A faint tinge of pink touched the sun tan of her oval face.

In the suitcase beside her was her diploma from Indiana university, and in her purse five dollars. Aside from that, she told herself whimsically, her assets were nil. Unless you took into consideration the fact that she was beautiful and twenty.

Powdering her small, slender nose, and adding a little more red to full, tender lips, Romany reached up and took down the dark green feathered pancake hat Aunt Cecelia had sent from Paris. She sat it upon her sleek, jet black hair with a flourish. A silly but divine chapeau!

As she stood up in the closely fitting gray-green jacket and matching swing skirt that barely touched her knees, it could be seen that she was tall and slender, long limbed and graceful.

Stepping off the train, Romany selected her bag and hat box from the porter, waving away a redcap who reached for the luggage. She was certain she needed the few pennies much more than he did, even if she didn't look it. The colored man gave her a disappointed look and shrugged, turning his attention to a fat man with two sample cases.

Down the platform Romany paused at the station door looking for the familiar face of her best friend and college room mate, Charlotte O'Neil. But Cholly did not seem to be there. At that moment her eyes fell upon a young man with a microphone who had stepped quickly forward and motioned to her.

She recognized him at once as Brent Nelson, announcer and master of ceremonies of the "Hello Stranger" program. Romany would have hurried away, but an assistant had his hand on her arm. There was no escape, without being rude. Nelson smiled, shaking her dark green gloved hand:

"Welcome, stranger! Will you say a few words for us?"

Romany swallowed, quickly getting her bearings. Afraid of a microphone? Ridiculous! That was what she had come to Chicago for. The famous announcer was turning on the full power of his charm to put her at ease.

"Our first customer this evening, folk, is a beautiful young lady. Very, very beautiful. Jack, run home and get my book of superlatives! May we have your name, please?"

Romany found her voice.

"Romany—Romany Haile."

"Lovely name—Romany. Gypsy. And lovely black hair and a sun tan to go with it, too. A shame we haven't got television over here at the station. Where are you from, Romany?"

"Leeville, Indiana."

"Nice little town. I've been through there. On your way to school somewhere, I'll bet."

"No, I graduated from Indiana university this spring."

"Well, bless my old whiskers!" Nelson beamed and shook her hand again. "My old alma mater! I must have been getting out of Indiana U just about the time you went in. You can take it from me, folk, we grow the most beautiful co-eds in the world out around Indiana. Why did you come to Chicago, Miss Haile? To visit?"

Romany by that time was feeling quite at home. She smiled, wrinkling her nose, and Brent Nelson's susceptible heart beat a little faster.

"You mustn't laugh at me," Romany lowered her voice, "and I'll tell you."

"Laugh! I should say not,' Brent assured her. "Come on, tell us."

"Well," Romany confided, "I came to Chicago to get on the radio."

The crowd roared.

"It certainly didn't take you long," Nelson chuckled. "Is this your first experience before a mike?"

"The very first."

"Well, Romany, we pause to predict right here that it won't be your last. You have a lovely speaking voice, poise, beauty—everything it takes, I should say, to break into radio."

There was applause from the audience.

"Thank you, Romany sighed. "I hope you're right."

"What branch of radio are you interested in?"

Romany looked a little self-conscious.

"I want to be a dramatic actress."

"Fine! You'll make it," Nelson assured her. "I bet you got that yen playing in the dramatic club at Indiana."

"I'm afraid I did," she admitted.

"So did I," the announcer laughed, and was interrupted by an alarm clock going off in a box beside him.

Romany looking surprised, stepped back.

"The prize!" Nelson reached into his pocket and took out an envelope. "This is your lucky night, Miss Haile. You get the thirty-five dollars that Haller's Desserts presents on this program every Saturday evening."

"Thirty fi—five dollars!" Romany was so thunderstruck that Nelson laughed heartily as the crowd applauded. She thanked him when she caught her breath, unable to believe her good fortune.

At that moment she looked up to see Cholly jumping up and down with excitement close by. Nelson extended his hand again:

"We thank you very much, Miss Haile, for this Haller interview, and may we tell you we'll all be hoping your dreams come true in Chicago. If you're ever around the Interstate Broadcasting building, run in and say 'Hello,' and we'll talk about Indiana U. How's that?"

"I'd love it—and thank you." Romany smiled and hurried away to join Charlotte.

"Cholly!" She held the envelope out. "You look in it. I'm afraid it isn't real."

Cholly embraced her excitedly.

"Aren't you the lucky thing? I just can't believe it! And you were wonderful, Romany, really you were! I'd have choked to death. You were so natural."

"Was I really?" Romany asked breathlessly. "Oh, I hope so! Isn't Brent Nelson wonderful? I'd no idea he was so handsome."

"He is terribly good looking for a blond," Cholly agreed. "But I like 'em tall and dark."

"You wouldn't be thinking of Terry O'Rourke." Romany handed Cholly the hatbox and they walked out of the station.

"That same." Cholly shook her red curly head dubiously, and her blue eyes grew a little more tender. "The Irish divil! And he hasn't changed a bit."

"If he had" (Romany fished for her handbag) "you probably would have another boy friend. It's the maternal instinct in you, my child."

They settled in the back seat of the bus that was to take them to Aunt Cecelia's apartment on South Shore drive near Seventy-second street.

"Explain that last crack." Cholly turned to Romany, half smiling. "What do you mean, I probably would have another boy friend?"

Romany looked down at the serious little round face with the adorable freckles bridging the tip-tilted nose, and a warm feeling of affection for her old friend swept her. She touched her hand fleetingly.

"Oh," she said wisely, "if Terry weren't such a child, and you didn't have to worry all the time about whether he was going to get into some kind of a mess, you'd snap out of it."

"I—don't want to snap out of it." Cholly looked out the window unhappily. "I love him. He—he's just exactly like Pop. The sweetest thing that ever lived. But he doesn't take anything seriously."

"You're just like your mother," Romany sighed. "I spent last evening with her. She told me to tell you she hadn't heard from your father and that she had no idea where he is. The kids are well. All seven of 'em."

Cholly bit her lip:

"Pop's gone away twice before. Once he was gone six months."

"Your mother told me. And," Romany hesitated, coming to the hardest part of her message, "your mother said she didn't know what they'd do if you couldn't send a little money. I told her I was sure you could, since you wouldn't have any rent to pay staying with me at Aunt Cissie's."

"I sent her ten dollars yesterday," Cholly swallowed. "Poor darlin'. It was wonderful of your aunt to invite me to live with you at her place. That'll just about save them from starvation."

"Aunt Cissie is an angel," said Romany. "If it hadn't been for her I never would have gotten through college. She has given me a charge account at the grocers and druggists, too."

"Are you lucky!" sighed Cholly. "With the thirty-five dollars you got at the broadcast tonight, you're practically a plutocrat."

"It's the first time I ever enjoyed the sound of an alarm clock," Romany laughed.

"That reminds me." Cholly jumped. "What time is it? Oh—it's after eight." She looked at Romany's wrist watch. "I forgot to tell you, we have a double date."

"Well, thanks for giving me a little notice. And who, may I ask, are the lucky men, if it isn't a secret?"

DR. F. M. EDWARDS' DISCOVERY FOR CONSTIPATION

Benefits Nation of Sufferers!

COLUMBUS, OHIO: For over 20 years Dr. F. M. Edwards (widely known physician) successfully treated scores of patients for constipation and the headaches, lack of energy and mental dullness which often result.

This wise Doctor knew liver bile must flow freely every day into your intestines or fatty foods can't be properly digested and you may become constipated. So he kept this in mind when he perfected his famous Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful, yet they assure gentle, thorough bowel movements and ALSO help stimulate bile flow. Test their goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢.

Strange as it seems . . but it's true! We've placed our order for this merchandise in October of last year . . . and we were to have it in plenty of time for Christmas selling. However, we just received the entire order . . almost a month late . . so we've decided to sacrifice this late shipment and cut the price to an almost unbelievable low level to clear at once . . . better yet, we merchandised the entire carload into one complete unit . . . and NOW . . WHILE . . THEY LAST . . . you can buy one of each of the items as shown here for a price that you ordinarily pay for just one of the big pieces.

$1.00 IS ALL YOU NEED TO PAY DOWN ON THIS ENTIRE GROUP . . . AND PAY THE BALANCE ON EASY WEEKLY TERMS

REMEMBER — YOU PAY NOTHING EXTRA FOR CREDIT AT

MOTHERS!!!! Why not let your children sleep on cotton blanket sheets? A sure way of protecting them from colds and common ailments attributed to lack of warmth during their sleeping hours. They are double-duty money-savers. In winter they can be used as sheets. They vanish the chill of getting in bed between ordinary sheets. Also, during Spring and Fall, they can be used as light blankets. These are really the most outstanding buy of the year. Visit your Montgomery Ward Order Office at 52 N. # Icy Road Sends Car into Spin; Porch Wrecked

Celanese Workers Escape Serious Injury in Crash

Ice-glazed highways slowed traffic to a cautious crawl in the Cumberland area yesterday afternoon and last night.

One carload of Celanese workers who didn't slow down enough skidked off the McMullen highway in Bowling Green and crashed into a house, knocking down the front porch.

Escape Serious Injury

The men in the car suffered minor cuts and bruises, but did not require hospital treatment.

State Trooper George J. Miller said that the driver, Alvis M. Chedester, 20, of 233 Henderson avenue, will be charged with reckless driving at a hearing in Trial Magistrates court Saturday at 10 a. m.

Also in the car were Allen Speir, 20, of 120 Winton place and Charles Nicodemus, 25, of 231 Henderson boulevard.

Driving About Thirty

Miller reported the driver said he was going about thirty-five or thirty miles an hour when he topped a slight rise and started down a slight grade at the Cumberland end of Bowling Green. The men were Celanese-bound, and it was 2:57 p. m.

The highway looked clear, but the concrete was coverel with a thin sheath of ice.

The care skidded out of control and across the road, jumped the curb, ran through one yard, nicked the porch post of the home of Arnold Ballard, and then crashed head-on into the corner of the porch of the home of Charles McCort, engineer on the Western Maryland railroad.

Porch Falls

The brick piers and the porch posts collapsed and the porch roof broke away from the house and fell down.

The car dropped down a flight of wooden stairs between the two houses. The front end and the transmission of the sedan were badly damaged.

Mrs. McCort and a neighbor, Mrs. J. R. Williams, were in the living room when the car hit and plaster began to fall.

Mrs. McCort cried out, "The furnace has exploded." She explained later that they had just put in a new stoker, and she thought sure it had exploded.

Crowd Gathers

The accident attracted a large crowd and also much attention from passing Celanese workers.

State Police dispersed the crowd, however, because of the dangerous situation.

Once, a West Virginia car came over the rise and started to skid just as the crash car had, and the crowd ran for safety as the police shouted warnings. This car did not jump the curb, however, and the driver was allowed to proceed after a warning.

Mrs. McCort, whose husband was away on a run on the railroad, was frightened at the prospect of entering her home again, but neighbors pointed out that the fallen porch roof made her the best kind of a barricade against a repeat performance.

Traffic Moves Slowly

Cars with and without chains were slowed to twenty miles an hour at many places on the highway, and the long line of Celanese traffic literally inched its way down Dingle hill into Cumberland.

Highways were not unusually slippery where the old snow remained, but where the pavement was clear, yesterday's snowfall had melted, and then frozen in a glaze of ice, making driving conditions very deceptive and dangerous.

No other serious accidents had been reported at midnight, however.

Octogenarian Injured In Fall on Street

Cumberland's slippery streets, made more treacherous by a covering of new snow, claimed at least one more victim yesterday morning—this time an octogenarian.

The injured man was Abraham Riggleman, 80, of 828 LaFayette avenue, who fell on Virginia avenue, injuring his right leg and hip.

Mr. Riggleman was admitted to Allegany hospital, where his condition was described as "fairly good" last night.

CLOSE 'CALL'—Skidding from the McMullen highway yesterday afternoon, this car of Celanese workers stopped at the home of Charles McCort. Their rap at the front door was not too gentle, and the porch came down like a tent. The car came from the left, grazing the porch of the first home. The three men in the car were not badly injured.—News Staff Photo.

Bridegroom Doubts He Was Married, Writes Clerk To See if It's True

A young Pennsylvanian miner who had "no knowledge of ever being married," but who for some unexplained reason suspected he was wed here nearly three years ago will learn in a day or two that his "knowledge" was wrong, his suspicions correct.

Courthouse clerks were puzzled yesterday when they received a letfrom the Pennsylvanian as follows (fictitious names substituted):

"I wonder if you would please send me information in regards to a marriage that was to of taken place in Cumberland April, 14, 1937, between a Mr. Richard Roe and a Miss Mary Doe.

"I being Mr. Richard Roe have no knowledge of ever being married, but if I am, please let me know. I have no marriage license to show, so if it is possible please send me one."

A clerk checked the records and found that a license had been issued April 14, 1937, for the parties in question and that they had been wed the same day by a Methodist minister.

The bridegroom listed his age as 22 on the license, his bride's as 21.

Pekinese Rescued After Auto Crash

Three Cars 'Run Over' Dog, None Hits Her

It was one of those fender-dent accidents that police never hear about, but it nearly spelled tragedy for a little snub-nosed Pekinese dog.

When two cars nicked fenders near the Ridgeley bridge last night, the occupants piled out to talk it over.

The two drivers finally got back in their cars and drove away. The dog was left behind.

Three pedestrians noticed the scared Peke in the middle of the road. Three cars passed over it but the dog wasn't struck by the wheels.

The pedestrians, Barney Albert and W. T. Burns, 239 Avirett avenue, and Frank Harrow, 211 Beall street, rescued the midget dog and brought him to police headquarters.

The owner proved to be Albert A. Sowers, 514 Greene street, who called regarding his lost dog. The three men took the Peke to the Sowers home.

Circuit Court Jury Reverses Magistrate In $80 Crash Case

A Circuit court jury yesterday tried a suit growing out of an automobile accident in which it had only to fix blame for the crash and not damages.

The amount of the damages, in the event of a verdict for the plaintiff, had already been agreed upon as $80 by both sides.

The jury reversed a trial magistrate's decision as it ruled Claude P. Hardinger was entitled to the damages from Leo B. Crites, trading as Crites Transfer Company.

Hardinger, represented by William L. Wilson Jr., claimed that a vehicle owned by Crites and driven by Felix E. Swick, an employe, was on the wrong side of the road when it crashed into his car near Wiley Ford on the night of Sept. 30, 1939.

Crites was represented by Attorneys W. Earle Cobey and Matthew J. Mullaney.

C&W Bus Line Buys Three New Carriers

The Cumberland and Westernport Transit Company will put three new buses into service this week to bring its fleet total to about twenty, it was learned yesterday.

The new vehicles were purchased from the A. C. F. Motors Company of New York at a total cost of $20,464.50, according to the contract recorded in the office of Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson.

More Snow Falls At New Germany

Lake To Be Cleared For Skating

Plans were going forward yesterday for another big week-end at New Germany, Supervisor M. E. Martin reported last night.

Skiing conditions at the Garrett county winter resort were pronounced "ideal" by Mr. Martin last night.

"We now have ten-and-a-half inches of snow up here," the supervisor stated. "We have had a three-inch snowfall in the last three days."

Mr. Martin said that the skating rink would be cleared of snow by Saturday for the first time.

A large crowd, including guests from Washington and Baltimore, is expected to be on hand this week-end, Mr. Martin said.

Delegates To Attend Hebrew Convention

Cumberland delegates to the First Seaboard Regional Convention of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations to be held Saturday and Sunday in Philadelphia will be Mrs. Allen Hirsh, Mrs. J. Schindler, Mrs. Robert Kaplan, Mrs. Geo. Millenson, Leonard Schwab, Michael J. Beerman, Isaac Hirsh, Mrs. Harold Hersch, Mrs. Max Spear, Mrs. Jos. Klawan, Mrs. Aaron Lefkowitz, Mrs. Lawrence Peskin, Mrs. Harry Berewan and Mrs. Morton Peskin.

They will represent B'er Chayim congregation. The convention theme, "The Synagogue and the American Way," aims to emphasize the vital and important part of the synagogue in maintaining and carrying forward the principles and ideals of democracy and religious freedom.

Deaths

Mrs. Elizabeth E. Ritchey

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Enos Ritchey, 75, widow of James Ritchey, who died Tuesday at her home, 540 Greene street, were conducted yesterday at the residence. Miss Elizabeth Stallings, of the First Church of Christ Scientist, was reader. Burial was in the Trinity Lutheran Cemetery.

Pallbearers were all nephews of Mrs. Ritchey. They were Harold Weber, Charles Enos, Wilbur Leichliter, Arthur Fuller, Alfred Sidaway and Wilbur Powell.

Out-of-town relatives attending the services were Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Ritchey, Mr. and Mrs. Roberta Schmurtz, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Angelier, all of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rieber, of Silver Springs; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Enos and family, of Martinsburg, W. Va.; and Mr. Chris Leichliter and family, of Elk Lick, Pa.

Out-of-town friends to attend were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Houck, of Frederick, and Mrs. Gertrude Donovan, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Doctors To Banquet At Shrine Club

The annual dinner-meeting of the Allegany - Garrett County Medical Society will be held at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club Friday, Jan. 26, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. M. C. Pincoffs, professor of medicine at the University of Maryland, will be the principal speaker. Dr. E. P. Thomas, president of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland, is also expected to attend.

Dinner is scheduled for 6:30 p. m.

L. F. Flynn Retires As Murphy Manager

L. F. Flynn, who has retired as manager of the G. C. Murphy Company, last night was reported ill.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

There are times, you've all known them, when life in Cumberland seems narrow, and dingy, and mean.

Well, we were feeling that way yesterday until we picked up a New York Times and read a little story on page 25.

Cumberland looked better right away, and we've been chuckling ever since.

The story was about a man named John H. Brooks, a very respectable citizen who, by the way, is a banker. It seems that Mr. Brooks was haled into court for popping a subway guard right on the nose.

A bit shamefaced, the banker told the judge this story:

"I just couldn't stand it any more. For four years I've been going through this same thing. I get up at a quarter to 7, have my breakfast and catch the train from my home in Green Farms, Conn., which puts me into Grand Central at 8:30 a. m. I go down into the subway there and then all my good humor and the freshness with which my night's rest has supplied me for the day's work is knocked and pushed out of me trying to get into a train to take me downtown.

"I was on the fringe of the crowd this morning and this guard got behind me and began pushing. He pushed and pushed and got me halfway through the door. Then the door started to close on me. It hit me on the shoulder while he was still pushing.

"I turned around in the crowd and faced him, and I hit him in the face."

The banker stopped to mop his brow. "Judge," he said, "I know I did wrong, but I've been taking this packing into subway trains like a sardine in a can for four years, and it finally got me down."

The judge suspended sentence, and the banker promised to get up earlier after this, and then he and the guard shook hands. No doubt all New York was chuckling about it.

We hope we can remember this story the next time we get caught in a jam of Celanese traffic, or held up by a B&O freight train.

Drives without License Gets Ten Days in Jail

Charles A. Twigg, of 23 Laing avenue, was committed to the county jail for ten days when he was unable to pay a fine of $10 and costs yesterday in Trial Magistrates court on a charge of operating a motor vehicle without a license.

Twigg admitted that his chauffeur's license expired in 1937 and that when he had an opportunity to drive this week he told the owner of the vehicle that he had a license.

State Troopers George J. Miller and Frank B. White arrested Twigg Tuesday on the National highway. Magistarte Oliver H. Bruce Jr. presided at the hearing.

Three Cumberland Youths On VMI Honor Roll

Three Cumberland youths are listed on the Honor Roll of Virginia Military Institute for the past six weeks, it was anonunced yesterday.

The three, with averages of at least ninety, are F. R. Torrington, a first classman; C. F. Owens, a second classman; and L. R. Stallings, a third classman.

Approximately 200 members attended the joint ceremony. A luncheon was served by the refreshment committee of McKinley Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.

Circuit Court Dockets Three More Cases

Criminal cases slated for trial next week jumped to thirty-three yesterday as three more cases in which indictments were returned by the grand jury were docketed by Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson.

The new cases included John W. Shepherd, Jr., sale of alcoholic beverages without a license; George W. Davis, larceny and receiving stolen goods; and Irvin S. Beeman, paternity.

J. Wesley Kelley In Hospital

The condition of J Wesley Kelley, of 1340 Shade's Lane, was reported "good" last night at Memorial hospital, where he was admitted earlier in the week for treatment of injuries suffered at work.

Mr. Kelley, executive secretary of the Western Maryland Outdoor Life Federation, suffered contusions of the thigh and hips when he was caught beneath a truck at the Armour and Company plant.

Mrs. Harriett Broadwater Blocher, Oldest of Clan, Is Seriously Ill

Mrs. Harriett Broadwater Blocher, the oldest member of the Broadwater clan, is seriously ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Effie Custer, in Eckhart. Mrs. Blocher will be 95 in March.

Mrs. Blocher was born and reared in Garrett county and has lived there all her life. She is a staunch Methodist and Republican and is well-known for her wit and good humor.

Until a week ago, Mrs. Blocher listened to the radio, read considerably, and discussed current topics with the many friends who called on her daily.

Mrs. Blocher's parents both came from England, and she has always had a keen interest in that country.

At the annual reunion of the Broadwater clan last summer, Mrs. Blocher entertained her host of relatives with a number of recitations she learned in her youth.

Mrs. Harriett Broadwater Blocher

Lawyers Banquet Tomorrow Night

Sloan, Walsh and Gunter To Speak

Plans were complete today for the annual banquet of the Allegany County Bar Association, slated for tomorrow evening at the Fort Cumberland hotel.

Speakers will include Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, Attorney General William E. Walsh and former State Senator William A. Gunter.

Members of the entertainment committee for the affair, scheduled to begin at 6:30 p. m., include J. Philip Roman, chairman; Matthew J. Mullaney and Estel C. Kelley.

The membership will decide tomorrow night on the date for the annual election of officers.

Junior Volunteers Donate $1413

Charitable Work Shown in Report

The Junior Volunteer Service Corps donated $1,413.44 to various charitable organizations during 1939, officers reported yesterday.

Contributions went to the Allegany County League for Crippled Children, the Baby Welfare Society, the Associated Charities, the American Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the Keating Memorial Day Nursery, the Cumberland Girl Scouts, the National Youth Administration and the Cumberland Welfare Federation.

Members of the corps also gave volunteer service to Memorial hospital and its auxiliary, the Cancer Clinic, the Community Chest and the American Red Cross.

Conlon To Head Polio Campaign

Plans Are Announced For Annual Drive

City Commissioner Thomas F. Conlon today had been named Allegany county chairman for the annual drive of the Maryland Committee for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday.

The appointment was made by U. S. Senator George Radcliffe, Maryland chairman for the seventh consecutive year.

Preliminary plans for the campaign call for distribution of hundreds of cardboard coin boxes throughout the county and the use of birthday cards to the President, contributions being given by the signers.

A meeting of citizens who participated in the 1939 campaign is slated for this week-end. Headquarters will be established in Rooms four and five in the Liberty Trust building.

Dr. Hawkins Says Cancer Deaths Can Be Slashed

Earlier Treatment May Prevent Half Of Fatalities

Deaths from cancer, now totaling about 150,000 annually, can be reduced from thirty to fifty per cent, Dr. A. H. Hawkins, veteran Cumberland surgeon, told members of the Kiwanis club yesterday.

Sepaking at the club's weekly luncheon-meeting at the Fort Cumberland hotel, Dr. Hawkins emphasized that cancer is not hereditary, that it can be prevented and that if caught in time, it can be cured.

Cause Still Mystery

While science, for all its research, still knows little about the cause of cancer, it does know that its development is always preceded by some sort of chronic irritation, the surgeon said.

Cancer is always "local" in nature, and therefore, can be removed, he continued, adding that except in the case of cancer of the bone, it is also generally painless.

Urges Simple Living

He urged his hearers to "live simply," eat slowly, digesting their food properly, take care of their teeth, and avoid irritations.

Moderation in all things—including eating, drinking and smoking—was also recommended by the speaker.

It's a splendid idea, too, he concluded, to have a complete physical examination at least once a year—especially for persons over 50.

McElfish Re-Elected As Bank President

A. G. McElfish yesterday was re-elected president of the Cumberland Savings Bank.

Other officers are F. Brooke Whiting, vice-president and attorney; W. Floyd Price, cashier; and Marcus Naughton, assistant cashier, who succeeds Miss Mary B. White, resigned.

Members of the board of directors, who named the officers after being re-elected by the stockholders are:

A. G. McElfish, F. Brooke Whiting, W. Floyd Price, A. J. Weber, J. M. Conway, H. T. Mattingly and W. K. Edwards.

Officer Chisholm Father of Son

Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Chisholm, 304 North Centre street, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Allegany hospital. Mr. Chisholm is a member of the Cumberland police force.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fleegle, of Corriganville, announce the birth of a son yesterday afternoon at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Clement Helmstetter, of RFD 1, announce the birth of a daughter yesterday morning at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Carroll Gilmore, 427 Beall street, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Haselberger, of RFD 1, Locust Grove, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Allegany hospital.

Get Court Writ To Obtain Pay, Policemen Told

Senator Kimble Blame 'Mismanagement' For Police Pay Slash

Charging "mismanagement" the handling of the police budg State Senator Robert Kimble la night advised Cumberland police obtain a writ of mandamus a compel the city to pay them t salaries to which he said they a entitled under the law.

In championing the cause of t police officers, who have been fu loughed six days a month un April, Kimble charged that May Harry Irvine, former police commi sioner, is "robbing Peter to pa Paul."

Charge "Extravagance"

In a deliberate blast at the mayo Kimble asserted that "Mayor Irvi is not a victim of circumstance he's a victim of his own extrava gance."

Kimble, who was instrumental passing the bill that gives police minimum salary of $135 a mont declared that Mayor Irvine was re sponsible for the budget that ha failed to last the year out.

"What has happened is this Kimble declared, "the mayor use money laid aside for the officer salaries for something else. Th easiest thing in the world to se up in any budget is the salar money. A police commissione should know how many men he ha on his force and how many da they work a year.

Cites Cops' 'Hard Life'

"When the mayor used that mon ey he knew that he was compelle by law to pay the officers a stipu lated salary of $135 a month. helped pass that law."

"The members of the police de partment should not be made t suffer because of somebody else mismanagement," Kimble said las night." They have a hard life. They are outside in fair weather an foul. They are constantly in danger

"Cumberland has a good police force. The public saw an evidence o this just the other day. If it hadn't been for your alert officers tw women caught on a perilous ledge of rocks in LaVale would probably be dead today."

Sees No Stalemate

Questioned regarding the law which requires that a city commissioner can not exceed his budget Kimble replied that he had a hand in passing that too.

Asked if the matter wasn't a stalemate, Kimble said he did not recognize it as such.

"When salary money was taken for other purposes a commissioner certainly must have realized that it would create a shortage at the end of the year," he declared.

'Convinced They Can Get It'

"The officers should be paid the full salaries to which they are entitled," he said, adding, "I'm convinced that they can get it."

Kimble, who is regarded by many policemen as their good angel, declared that one of the greatest assets the general public has is the conviction that it has an able police department.

In touching off his blast, Kimble, who recently tossed his hat in the ring for Congress, declared that his only interest in the matter was seeing "the boys in the police department get what is coming to them.

Suggests Delay Until Paid

"I have always believed that a man would get along well in public life as long as he was honest. And I honestly feel that these officers are entitled to the pay the law provides for them," the state senator said.

In advising the policemen, Kimble suggested that they wait until after the first payday under the furlough before going before the Circuit Court.

"You have to have evidence before you can get anyplace," he said. "The small checks will supply you with all the evidence you need."

Youth Cut; Rammed Fist Through Windshield

A 19-year-old Ridgeley youth was treated last night at Allegany hospital after he reputedly rammed his right fist through the front windshield of a friend's car.

Five sutures were used to close a deep gash on the hand of Robert Kincaid.

Hospital attaches said Kincaid told them he smashed the windshield of a "friend's car" with his fist. He did not say whether it was accidental or otherwise.

Kincaid was discharged after treatment.

Nine Free Movie Goers Named by Censor Board

Allegany county's strangest delegation of moviegoers—nine persons who go to the shows to see what isn't there—today had been named by the Maryland State Board of Motion Picture Censors.

The nine, who as inspectors check on deletions and changes ordered by the board, have free entry to any motion picture theater in the county. They are:

Mrs. Paul Hutson, Miss Ann Corrigan, John H. Mosner and Raymond J. Ward, of Cumberland; Mrs. Edward J. Ryan and Michael J. Byrnes, of Frostburg; Harold Doolan, of Lonaconing; Mrs. Mayme Fahey, of Westernport; and Mrs. Willis McCombs, of Luke.

New York Hotel Man Pays Loving Tribute to a Cumberland Mother

This is a heartfelt tribute to a Cumberland woman, written as a letter to The News by Theodore R. Nathan, assistant to the general manager of the Dreier Hotels, in New York City. Mr. Nathan wrote:

"There will be a funeral in your city this afternoon. If there were any way I could take leave of my work to be in Cumberland, that is where I would be today. Since there is no opportunity of making the trip, perhaps this letter, if it finds a place in your columns, will serve as tribute to one of your townspeople.

Icy Road Sends Car into Spin; Porch Wrecked

Celanese Workers Escape Serious Injury in Crash

Ice-glazed highways slowed traffic to a cautious crawl in the Cumberland area yesterday afternoon and last night.

One carload of Celanese workers who didn't slow down enough skidked off the McMullen highway in Bowling Green and crashed into a house, knocking down the front porch.

Escape Serious Injury

The men in the car suffered minor cuts and bruises, but did not require hospital treatment.

State Trooper George J. Miller said that the driver, Alvis M. Chedester, 20, of 233 Henderson avenue, will be charged with reckless driving at a hearing in Trial Magistrates court Saturday at 10 a. m.

Also in the car were Allen Speir, 20, of 120 Winton place and Charles Nicodemus, 25, of 231 Henderson boulevard.

Driving About Thirty

Miller reported the driver said he was going about thirty-five or thirty miles an hour when he topped a slight rise and started down a slight grade at the Cumberland end of Bowling Green. The men were Celanese-bound, and it was 2:57 p. m.

The highway looked clear, but the concrete was coverel with a thin sheath of ice.

The care skidded out of control and across the road, jumped the curb, ran through one yard, nicked the porch post of the home of Arnold Ballard, and then crashed head-on into the corner of the porch of the home of Charles McCort, engineer on the Western Maryland railroad.

Porch Falls

The brick piers and the porch posts collapsed and the porch roof broke away from the house and fell down.

The car dropped down a flight of wooden stairs between the two houses. The front end and the transmission of the sedan were badly damaged.

Mrs. McCort and a neighbor, Mrs. J. R. Williams, were in the living room when the car hit and plaster began to fall.

Mrs. McCort cried out, "The furnace has exploded." She explained later that they had just put in a new stoker, and she thought sure it had exploded.

Crowd Gathers

The accident attracted a large crowd and also much attention from passing Celanese workers.

State Police dispersed the crowd, however, because of the dangerous situation.

Once, a West Virginia car came over the rise and started to skid just as the crash car had, and the crowd ran for safety as the police shouted warnings. This car did not jump the curb, however, and the driver was allowed to proceed after a warning.

Mrs. McCort, whose husband was away on a run on the railroad, was frightened at the prospect of entering her home again, but neighbors pointed out that the fallen porch roof made her the best kind of a barricade against a repeat performance.

Traffic Moves Slowly

Cars with and without chains were slowed to twenty miles an hour at many places on the highway, and the long line of Celanese traffic literally inched its way down Dingle hill into Cumberland.

Highways were not unusually slippery where the old snow remained, but where the pavement was clear, yesterday's snowfall had melted, and then frozen in a glaze of ice, making driving conditions very deceptive and dangerous.

No other serious accidents had been reported at midnight, however.

Octogenarian Injured In Fall on Street

Cumberland's slippery streets, made more treacherous by a covering of new snow, claimed at least one more victim yesterday morning—this time an octogenarian.

The injured man was Abraham Riggleman, 80, of 828 LaFayette avenue, who fell on Virginia avenue, injuring his right leg and hip.

Mr. Riggleman was admitted to Allegany hospital, where his condition was described as "fairly good" last night.

Bridegroom Doubts He Was Married, Writes Clerk To See if It's True

A young Pennsylvanian miner who had "no knowledge of ever being married," but who for some unexplained reason suspected he was wed here nearly three years ago will learn in a day or two that his "knowledge" was wrong, his suspicions correct.

Courthouse clerks were puzzled yesterday when they received a letfrom the Pennsylvanian as follows (fictitious names substituted):

"I wonder if you would please send me information in regards to a marriage that was to of taken place in Cumberland April, 14, 1937, between a Mr. Richard Roe and a Miss Mary Doe.

"I being Mr. Richard Roe have no knowledge of ever being married, but if I am, please let me know. I have no marriage license to show, so if it is possible please send me one."

A clerk checked the records and found that a license had been issued April 14, 1937, for the parties in question and that they had been wed the same day by a Methodist minister.

The bridegroom listed his age as 22 on the license, his bride's as 21.

Pekinese Rescued After Auto Crash

Three Cars 'Run Over' Dog, None Hits Her

It was one of those fender-dent accidents that police never hear about, but it nearly spelled tragedy for a little snub-nosed Pekinese dog.

When two cars nicked fenders near the Ridgeley bridge last night, the occupants piled out to talk it over.

Quite unnoticed, the Pekinese slipped out of one of the cars to see what was going on.

The two drivers finally got back in their cars and drove away. The dog was left behind.

Three pedestrians noticed the scared Peke in the middle of the road. Three cars passed over it but the dog wasn't struck by the wheels.

The pedestrians, Barney Albert and W. T. Burns, 239 Avirett avenue, and Frank Harrow, 211 Beall street, rescued the midget dog and brought him to police headquarters.

The owner proved to be Albert A. Sowers, 514 Greene street, who called regarding his lost dog. The three men took the Peke to the Sowers home.

Circuit Court Jury Reverses Magistrate In $80 Crash Case

A Circuit court jury yesterday tried a suit growing out of an automobile accident in which it had only to fix blame for the crash and not damages.

The amount of the damages, in the event of a verdict for the plaintiff, had already been agreed upon as $80 by both sides.

The jury reversed a trial magistrate's decision as it ruled Claude P. Hardinger was entitled to the damages from Leo B. Crites, trading as Crites Transfer Company.

Hardinger, represented by William L. Wilson Jr., claimed that a vehicle owned by Crites and driven by Felix E. Swick, an employe, was on the wrong side of the road when it crashed into his car near Wiley Ford on the night of Sept. 30, 1939.

Crites was represented by Attorneys W. Earle Cobey and Matthew J. Mullaney.

C&W Bus Line Buys Three New Carriers

The Cumberland and Westernport Transit Company will put three new buses into service this week to bring its fleet total to about twenty, it was learned yesterday.

The new vehicles were purchased from the A. C. F. Motors Company of New York at a total cost of $20,464.50, according to the contract recorded in the office of Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson.

Doctors To Banquet At Shrine Club

The annual dinner-meeting of the Allegany - Garrett County Medical Society will be held at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club Friday, Jan. 26, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. M. C. Pincoffs, professor of medicine at the University of Maryland, will be the principal speaker. Dr. E. P. Thomas, president of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland, is also expected to attend.

Dinner is scheduled for 6:30 p. m.

L. F. Flynn Retires As Murphy Manager

L. F. Flynn, who has retired as manager of the G. C. Murphy Company, last night was reported ill.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

There are times, you've all known them, when life in Cumberland seems narrow, and dingy, and mean.

Well, we were feeling that way yesterday until we picked up a New York Times and read a little story on page 25.

Cumberland looked better right away, and we've been chuckling ever since.

The story was about a man named John H. Brooks, a very respectable citizen who, by the way, is a banker. It seems that Mr. Brooks was haled into court for popping a subway guard right on the nose.

A bit shamefaced, the banker told the judge this story:

"I just couldn't stand it any more. For four years I've been going through this same thing. I get up at a quarter to 7, have my breakfast and catch the train from my home in Green Farms, Conn., which puts me into Grand Central at 8:30 a. m. I go down into the subway there and then all my good humor and the freshness with which my night's rest has supplied me for the day's work is knocked and pushed out of me trying to get into a train to take me downtown.

"I was on the fringe of the crowd this morning and this guard got behind me and began pushing. He pushed and pushed and got me halfway through the door. Then the door started to close on me. It hit me on the shoulder while he was still pushing.

"I turned around in the crowd and faced him, and I hit him in the face."

The banker stopped to mop his brow. "Judge," he said, "I know I did wrong, but I've been taking this packing into subway trains like a sardine in a can for four years, and it finally got me down."

The judge suspended sentence, and the banker promised to get up earlier after this, and then he and the guard shook hands. No doubt all New York was chuckling about it.

We hope we can remember this story the next time we get caught in a jam of Celanese traffic, or held up by a B&O freight train.

More Snow Falls At New Germany

Lake To Be Cleared For Skating

Plans were going forward yesterday for another big week-end at New Germany, Supervisor M. E. Martin reported last night.

Skiing conditions at the Garrett county winter resort were pronounced "ideal" by Mr. Martin last night.

"We now have ten-and-a-half inches of snow up here," the supervisor stated. "We have had a three-inch snowfall in the last three days."

Mr. Martin said that the skating rink would be cleared of snow by Saturday for the first time.

A large crowd, including guests from Washington and Baltimore, is expected to be on hand this weekend, Mr. Martin said.

Contributions went to the Allegany County League for Crippled Children, the Baby Welfare Society, the Associated Charities, the American Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the Keating Memorial Day Nursery, the Cumberland Girl Scouts, the National Youth Administration and the Cumberland Welfare Federation.

Members of the corps also gave volunteer service to Memorial hospital and its auxiliary, the Cancer Clinic, the Community Chest and the American Red Cross.

Conlon To Head Polio Campaign

Plans Are Announced For Annual Drive

City Commissioner Thomas F. Conlon today had been named Allegany county chairman for the annual drive of the Maryland Committee for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday.

The appointment was made by U. S. Senator George Radcliffe, Maryland chairman for the seventh consecutive year.

Preliminary plans for the campaign call for distribution of hundreds of cardboard coin boxes throughout the county and the use of birthday cards to the President, contributions being given by the signers.

A meeting of citizens who participated in the 1939 campaign is slated for this week-end. Headquarters will be established in Rooms four and five in the Liberty Trust building.

Dr. Hawkins Says Cancer Deaths Can Be Slashed

Earlier Treatment May Prevent Half Of Fatalities

Deaths from cancer, now totaling about 150,000 annually, can be reduced from thirty to fifty per cent, Dr. A. H. Hawkins, veteran Cumberland surgeon, told members of the Kiwanis club yesterday.

Sepaking at the club's weekly luncheon-meeting at the Fort Cumberland hotel, Dr. Hawkins emphasized that cancer is not hereditary, that it can be prevented and that if caught in time, it can be cured.

Cause Still Mystery

While science, for all its research, still knows little about the cause of cancer, it does know that its development is always preceded by some sort of chronic irritation, the surgeon said.

Cancer is always "local" in nature, and therefore, can be removed, he continued, adding that except in the case of cancer of the bone, it is also generally painless.

Urges Simple Living

He urged his hearers to "live simply," eat slowly, digesting their food properly, take care of their teeth, and avoid irritations.

Moderation in all things—including eating, drinking and smoking—was also recommended by the speaker.

It's a splendid idea, too, he concluded, to have a complete physical examination at least once a year—especially for persons over 50.

McElfish Re-Elected As Bank President

A. G. McElfish yesterday was re-elected president of the Cumberland Savings Bank.

Get Court Writ To Obtain Pay, Policemen Told

Senator Kimble Blame 'Mismanagement' For Police Pay Slash

Charging "mismanagement" the handling of the police budg State Senator Robert Kimble l night advised Cumberland police obtain a writ of mandamus a compel the city to pay them t salaries to which he said they a entitled under the law.

In championing the cause of t police officers, who have been fu loughed six days a month un April, Kimble charged that May Harry Irvine, former police comm sioner, is "robbing Peter to p Paul."

Charge "Extravagance"

In a deliberate blast at the may Kimble asserted that "Mayor Irv is not a victim of circumstance he's a victim of his own extrava gance."

Kimble, who was instrumental passing the bill that gives police minimum salary of $135 a mont declared that Mayor Irvine was re sponsible for the budget that h failed to last the year out.

"What has happened is thi Kimble declared, "the mayor us money laid aside for the officer salaries for something else. Th easiest thing in the world to s up in any budget is the salar money. A police commission should know how many men he h on his force and how many da they work a year.

Cites Cops' 'Hard Life'

"When the mayor used that moc ey he knew that he was compelle by law to pay the officers a stipu lated salary of $135 a month. I helped pass that law."

"The members of the police de partment should not be made t suffer because of somebody else mismanagement," Kimble said la night." They have a hard life. The are outside in fair weather an foul. They are constantly in danger

"Cumberland has a good police force. The public saw an evidence o this just the other day. If it hadn' been for your alert officers tw women caught on a perilous ledge of rocks in LaVale would probabl be dead today."

Sees No Stalemate

Questioned regarding the la which requires that a city commissioner can not exceed his budget Kimble replied that he had a hand in passing that too.

Asked if the matter wasn't a stalemate, Kimble said he did no recognize it as such.

"When salary money was taken for other purposes a commissioner certainly must have realized that it would create a shortage at the end of the year," he declared.

'Convinced They Can Get It'

"The officers should be paid the full salaries to which they are entitled," he said, adding, "I'm convinced that they can get it."

Kimble, who is regarded by many policemen as their good angel, declared that one of the greatest assets the general public has is the conviction that it has an able police department.

In touching off his blast, Kimble, who recently tossed his hat in the ring for Congress, declared that his only interest in the matter was seeing "the boys in the police department get what is coming to them.

Suggests Delay Until Paid

"I have always believed that a man would get along well in public life as long as he was honest. And I honestly feel that these officers are entitled to the pay the law provides for them," the state senator said.

In advising the policemen, Kimble suggested that they wait until after the first payday under the furlough before going before the Circuit Court.

"You have to have evidence before you can get anyplace," he said. "The small checks will supply you with all the evidence you need."

Youth Cut; Rammed Fist Through Windshield

A 19-year-old Ridgeley youth was treated last night at Allegany hospital after he reputedly rammed his right fist through the front windshield of a friend's car.

Five sutures were used to close a deep gash on the hand of Robert Kincaid.

Hospital attaches said Kincaid told them he smashed the windshield of a "friend's car" with his fist. He did not say whether it was accidental or otherwise.

Kincaid was discharged after treatment.

Nine Free Movie Goers Named by Censor Board

Allegany county's strangest delegation of moviegoers—nine persons who go to the shows to see what isn't there—today had been named by the Maryland State Board of Motion Picture Censors.

The nine, who as inspectors check on deletions and changes ordered by the board, have free entry to any motion picture theater in the county. They are:

Mrs. Paul Hutson, Miss Ann Corrigan, John H. Mosner and Raymond J. Ward, of Cumberland; Mrs. Edward J. Ryan and Michael J. Byrnes, of Frostburg; Harold Doolan, of Lonaconing; Mrs. Mayme Fahey, of Westernport; and Mrs. Willis McCombs, of Luke.
